WASHED OUT by mudflow, this is how it looked on Washington State Highway 504 this morning near Toutle where a mixture of water, mud and debris swept away bridges after the eruption of Mt. St. Helens. For today's volcano story see Page 2.

Courts can authorize $2,000 compensation

Consumer compensation is the keynote of tough new government legislation introduced Wednesday.

The government's move will beef up protection for consumers and make it easier for them to collect compensation if they are victimized in the market place.

The Amendments to the Trade Practices Act, introduced by Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen would:

—Authorize courts to order defendants in consumer-related disputes to pay up to $2,000 to consumers who have suffered financial losses.

—Force motor dealers to display asking and list prices for all vehicles offered for sale and provide for enforcement of violations by private sellers who sell more than four cars a year.

(At present, dealers are required only to post prices on vehicles they advertise for sale, or when written representations are made.)

—And ensure that reasonable prominence is given to advertising disclaimers indicating the merchandise is available only in limited quantities.

The changes were welcomed by the Victoria business community.

"It's a major step forward," said Mayor Bill Tindall, former manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau.

"They should plug some of the gaps in the existing legislation."

Tindall said victims of unscrupulous trades practices have had little chance of getting their money back unless they were prepared to initiate separate and often costly civil action.

He said the changes should be particularly effective in ensuring persons who sign long-term contracts for recreational purposes such as dance studios and health spas will be better protected.

Current BBB manager Denny Ryan also applauded the amendments.

"Hopefully it will put more weight or credence to applications to the courts made by consumers."

Nielsen said the legislation will protect such consumers as someone who had television repairs done and found out that $300 of the work was unnecessary.

Under present legislation the repair company can be found guilty and fined, but the consumer is left on his own to sue for compensation.

Under the amendments, which still have to pass second and third readings in the house, the courts could order that the company reimburse the consumer.

Another amendment would permit the courts to decide whether a supplier has violated the legislation by exceeding a prior estimate when billing consumers.

"We receive numerous complaints every year from consumers who say they were given a work estimate much lower than the final bill," Nielsen said.

"Rather than set arbitrary limits in the Trade Practices Act, we decided to let the courts determine if a supplier's bill exceeds his estimate by an unreasonable amount."

Statutes affected by the amendments include the Motor Dealers Licensing Act, Debt Collection Act, Mortgage Brokers Act, Society Act, Securities Act and Vancouver Stock Exchange Act.

The legislation would also increase to four from two the number of public governors on the Vancouver Stock Exchange and transfer regulation-making powers under the Securities Act from the cabinet to the superintendent of brokers.

Fires spread in Ontario, the Prairies

Times News Services

FORT HOPE, Ont. — Forest fires were raging across Northern Ontario and the Prairie provinces today as emergency crews worked to evacuate the residents of at least three small communities.

As forest fires swept through heavy bushland in several areas of Northern Ontario, emergency procedures were brought into operation and people were evacuated from remote communities and isolated summer homes.

The major evacuation was in the lumbering centre of Fort Hope, 350 kilometres north of Thunder Bay where five aircraft — three 748s and two Hercules — were pressed into service to fly almost 600 persons to safety in Geraldton and Nakina.

As the last of the people were flown from the community the 35,000-acre fire was still getting closer and had moved to within 12 kilometres.

About 120 members of the community were elderly or ill and needed special attention on the flight out. The local school has been closed.

In the Dryden area where a fire sweeping through 30,000 thousand acres of jack pine and spruce forced the closing of the Trans-Canada Highway, 145 persons were taken out of the village of McIntosh and widely-separated summer homes.

Special fire-fighting crews have been sent into both these areas in an effort to slow down the fires, which are more serious than natural resources persons can remember so early in the season.

At Foleyet, north of Kapuskasing, the Joe Bink gold mine has been evacuated as a 4,000-acre fire burns out of control.

Meanwhile, for the northern Manitoba community of Snow Lake, anything but a southeast wind could spell disaster, in the middle of four forest fires threatening to join forces.

Winds were steady from the southeast and the immediate forecast was for

Newsday

WASHINGTON — Only two days before the deadline for accepting invitations to the Moscow Olympics, it appears that President Carter's call for a boycott is being rejected by most major Western European nations — a significant diplomatic setback for the United States and for Carter.

Of the Western European countries, only West Germany, Norway, Liechtenstein and Monaco are participating in the U.S.-initiated boycott. Also, Canada, China, and Argentina have said they will not go to the games, as have many Third World nations, including Kenya, Egypt, Pakistan, Thailand and Somalia.

But there are strong indications West Germany might change its mind.

And, alarmed by this development, Canada is applying pressure to prevent the U.S.-led initiative from crumbling, External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said today in Ottawa.

The West German Olympic Committee, under pressure from athletes and sporting associations to attend the games, is reconsidering its boycott decision taken earlier this month. MacGuigan said he feared this would weaken the boycott.

Over-all figures showed that as of Tuesday, 58 nations had said they would participate and 47 had said they would not.

Just in the last week, the Olympic committees in Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Ireland, Sweden and Austria decided to send teams to the Moscow games, joining the French and British committees.

U.S. foreign policy officials said Wednesday that they were continuing to pressure the allies, particularly the French, British and Japanese, but that they were coming to the conclusion that the boycott would have mixed results at best.

French sources said a reversal was highly unlikely, particularly in light of the nasty diplomatic exchanges this week between Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. (For earlier story on this dispute, see page 38.)

Many Carter administration foreign policy officials admit that, if there is no dramatic change by Saturday, the situation will be a serious blow to America's — and Carter's — prestige abroad. Coming soon after European rebuffs on economic sanctions toward Iran for holding American hostages, it only adds to tensions within the Atlantic alliance.

The purpose of the boycott was to send a clear, unequivocal message to the Soviet Union that the Unit-

Right royal steal!

LONDON (UPI) — More than 30 guests at a charity dinner went hungry because the fish course ended up in Buckingham Palace.

Centre-piece of the meal Tuesday was to have been a rare 26-pound sturgeon caught off the Cornish coast and purchased by a local hotel operator.

But under a 650-year law passed by Edward II, the sturgeon is a royal fish and it is the prerogative of the sovereign to enjoy any caught in British waters. According to custom, hotelier Bruce Henderson offered the fish to the Queen — and to his surprise she accepted.

The meal at a charity dinner had to be cancelled but Buckingham Palace said it was all a mix-up.

The queen waived her right to the fish when she learned it had been promised for charity, but by then it was too late and the sturgeon was already in the palace kitchens.

Post-referendum euphoria pervades Parliament Hill

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The words were ordinary and the ideas unoriginal, but a rare spirit of goodwill and celebration engulfed the House of Commons Wednesday as the three national leaders pledged to set aside their differences to re-write the ground rules of Confederation.

Political veterans compared the day-after-the-referendum mood to the spirit that pervaded Parliament 16 years ago when Lester Pearson gave the country a new flag.

It was as if Ottawa needed to breathe one huge, happy sigh of relief after the two-month struggle over Quebec's destiny that had ended in triumph the night before for supporters of a united Canada.

Everybody congratulated everybody. MPs applauded a string of referendum actors from Quebec's leading man, Claude Ryan, to the thousands of faceless separatists who had just witnessed the collapse of their vision for Quebec.

In a spontaneous outburst of unanimity Parliament decided it was, at last, time to make O Canada the country's official national anthem. MPs competed with one another to find ways to assure Quebecers they were valued and respected by the rest of the country.

As one round of applause succeeded the next, the 280-odd MPs in the House seemed to surprise even themselves with their enthusiasm to get to work on the tough, failure-ridden problem of re-writing the country's outdated 113-year-old constitution.

Trudeau promised no miracles, no surprising new initiatives. His only immediate plan was to send Justice Minister Jean Chretien off to the provincial capitals immediately to feel out the premiers on the possibility of reaching agreement on a flexible, modern constitution.

Chretien barrelled out of the Commons after the speeches, full of good intentions and planning to hit Toronto and Winnipeg before nightfall. He looked like a man in a hurry and wanted everybody to see it.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark urged the government to take advantage of the "climate of near-celebration" across the country.

"For the first time in a long time, the public of Canada is now interested in constitutional renewal," he said with a trace of wonder.

The endlessly tangled issue of changing the constitution to please all Canadians has been tackled by every prime minister since Louis St. Laurent. Each time so many roadblocks, deadlocks and complications have developed that ordinary citizens have been left utterly bored by the whole affair.

"Our spirit must be one of reconciliation and imagination," said NDP leader Ed Broadbent.

And for one afternoon, in the warm afterglow of Quebec's historic decision to stick with Canada, that spirit seemed possible.

Rate 11.8%

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate fell today to 11.83 per cent from 13.34 per cent last week, the lowest level since July, 1979.

The expected sharp drop, for the sixth week in a row, was brought about by the pro-federalist result of the Quebec referendum and the continued drop in U.S. interest rates this week.

Langford recreation plan riles few

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A proposal to turn Western Speedway in Langford into one of Greater Victoria's largest recreation areas met with almost no opposition at a public hearing Wednesday.

The expansion plan includes such facilities as an outdoor theatre, a bowling, curling and indoor recreation centre, a tennis club, a recreational vehicle campsite, a swimming pool, a dog race track — if the sport is ever legalized — a go-cart track, a skate board bowl and picnic grounds.

Speedway operator Tony Mortel told about 25 people at the Juan de Fuca recreation centre the Speedway plans to carry out the development over a period of five to 10 years.

Mortel said the facilities proposed might change as the project develops, depending on what the public wants for recreation over the next few years.

At present, the 64-acre site has an auto racing track and grandstand and Mortel said the outdoor theatre will be the next project developed.

Earl Pallister, one of two residents who spoke against the proposal, said the development would create serious traffic problems on Millstream Road, the only access to the property.

Pallister also said he is concerned about the noise generated by the motorcycle and go-cart tracks.

But other nearby residents spoke in favor of the expansion, saying it will increase the tax base and provide recreation facilities for the community's youth.

"I think it's something we could be proud of — something that wouldn't be found in downtown Victoria," said Lyle Kahl, who helped develop the expansion proposal.

Langford fire chief Al Le Quesne said he supports the proposal because there is nothing for the young people to do in the area.

Le Quesne said Millstream Road may be widened soon and would accommodate increased traffic.

But Pallister, who was Langford's previous regional director, still objected.

"In all the years we've been considering developments, tax base has never been given as the reason to go ahead — that's the poorest argument of all," he said.

The phased development of the site would be controlled by development permits issued before construction of each stage but Pallister questioned the amount of control the regional board would have.

"Mr. Chairman, I've sat in your place and I know just how limited you are to control these things," he said.

Carter flies to volcano amid fresh rumblings

Times News Services

KELSO, Wash. — President Carter took a helicopter tour through thick clouds and rain today to within two miles of the Mount St. Helens crater to inspect the "unbelievable sights" of devastation caused by the volcano's eruption.

Meanwhile, fresh rumblings within the volcano were detected by geologists who have continued to monitor the situation since the eruption Sunday morning. They said the rumblings indicated renewed movement of molten rock within the volcano.

"The moon looks like a golf course compared to what's up there," Carter said after the one-hour tour. "The devastation is much greater than I had ever dreamed."

At least 19 people were confirmed dead, and another 100 were still missing from the eruption that blew 1,300 feet off the once-majestic mountain.

The president Wednesday declared the state of Washington a major disaster area.

Carter's large Huey helicopter, a kind used in Vietnam, got closer to the crater than he expected and a snowstorm kept him from getting even nearer.

"The clouds were very dense," Carter reported after landing at Kelso, 40 miles from the volcano for a tour of a Red Cross evacuation centre.

"We got up where the ash flow was probably several hundred feet deep with tremendous icebergs still there, melting rapidly and putting off steam.

"The mountain is completely devastated. You can't see where the ground was formerly . . . There are tremendous piles of steam coming up."

Since Sunday's big booms, volcanic ash has drifted eastwards across the continent and today was reported falling lightly over wide areas of the Maritime provinces.

Farmers in eastern Washington say volcanic ash from Mount St. Helens — up to four inches deep — is "crushing" their crops, but the state's near-record cherry crop apparently has not been damaged.

Carter, in a flotilla of six Hueys and three Chinook choppers, flew down the Columbia River to Kelso, then along the north fork of the Toutle River to within two miles of the crater on the northwest side of the mountain.

He was accompanied in his chopper by the governors of Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Clouds hung low over the mountains and a slight drizzle fell during the chopper ride.

The 50,000 residents of Kelso and adjoining Longview were warned earlier in the week to be ready for immediate evacuation if a mud dam at Spirit Lake high on the mountain gave way, sending millions of gallons of water cascading down. However, authorities reported late Wednesday that the flood waters appeared to be gradually seeping into the ground.

Meanwhile, a scientist has warned that tiny particles of fractured quartz spewed from Mount St. Helens could puncture human lungs if they reach the ground.

Dr. Peter Hobbs, professor of atmospheric sciences at the University of Washington, said the particles, resembling kitchen cleanser, are small enough to get past the body's defense mechanisms in the larynx and sharp enough to damage lung tissue.

Korea riots subside with massive rally

KWANGJU (AP) — A bloody citizens rebellion against martial law cooled off today after spreading over the southwest corner of South Korea. Government officials were reported to have agreed to some demands aimed at ending the disturbances.

Three days of insurrection against the South Korean government's martial law crackdown left at least 57 persons dead and almost 400 injured or wounded in this riot-torn city, hospitals said.

Mass protests were reported to have occurred in at least 16 other cities in southern Cholla Namdo province Wednesday and early today. In some cases, police stations and other institutions came under attack, the reports said.

As Acting Prime Minister Park Choong-hoon issued an appeal for an end to the bloodshed, an estimated 100,000 demonstrators held a peaceful rally at the provincial headquarters to denounce the Seoul government while trying to reduce tension.

Local leaders met with martial law authorities earlier in the day and one leader told the rally that the officials had agreed to some conditions to end the disturbances. Younger demonstrators shouted down the speaker.

Their demands included the government's consent to withhold troops from Kwangju until order is restored, to release all persons taken into custody — said to number about 900 — and to acknowledge publicly that the military had used excessive force in trying to quell the revolt.

They also demanded the government pay compensation to the families of the dead and wounded, that it promise no retaliation against the rioters, and that it broadcast a "true account" of the incident without bias or distortion

Fire kills one

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Fire early today at a steam bath killed one man and sent three others to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation and minor burns.

Police said about 12 clients and one night clerk were in the building when the blaze broke out at about 4 a.m.

No names were released. The cause of the fire was being investigated.

S.A. police fire at students

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Police opened fire on demonstrators Wednesday night during violent black protests against racial inequality in education. One man was killed and two women were reported injured.

After the worst surge of violence in a month of student protests, police fired on rioters near Bloemfontein in the black townships of Batho and Manguang. A police spokesman said the man was not killed by their bullets.

Reporters were barred from entering the townships but overheard police instructions to fire and use tear gas as the situation threatened to get out of hand.

The students began by stoning buses owned by white companies and considered targets of protest by blacks. The demonstrators then threw stones through store windows, set fire to vehicles and blocked roads with boulders and concrete blocks.

Opposition spokesmen and newspapers have repeatedly warned the government that the current situation could end in a repeat of the 1976 Soweto riots which began as a black student protest against education and ended in nearly 600 deaths across South Africa.

During the current unrest, police, apparently on government orders, kept mainly in the background

Most of the pupils, aged between 13 and 18, returned to school at the beginning of this week after issuing an ulitmatum which demanded the government sort out their grievances by June 6.

But Wednesday night, colored student leaders in Cape Town, where the protest began, told the pupils to resume their class boycott immediately.

Anti-aircraft gun on Khomeini's balcony

Ack-ack for Ayatollah

TEHRAN (CP) — Anti-aircraft guns, installed since the U.S. commando raid, poke their muzzles at the sky at Ayatollah Khomeini's home and a number of public buildings in Tehran. (More on Iran situation on page 38).

A single-barrelled gun sits on the balcony of Khomeini's new residence. Heavier, double-barrelled guns rest on the roofs of the parliament building and other public buildings.

Militant students holding the American hostages urged the government to strengthen protection around Khomeini's home after the abortive U.S. attempt to rescue the captives. The students and other Iranian authorities claimed the American commandos had planned to attack Khomeini's home as well as lift the hostages from the U.S. Embassy.

Khomeini moved to what was advertised as a simpler home earlier this week. At the time, he was said to want to live closer to the lifestyle of Iran's poor.

The anti-aircraft gun was perched on the balcony, waiting for him as he entered the new residence in the village of Jamaran, just north of Gehran.

The Iranian armed forces were accused of being unprepared for the American commando raid.

Fatigue stops postal talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal contract talks were adjourned just after midnight without a final agreement on the precise details of a settlement that had been agreed to in principle Tuesday.

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet and Jean-Claude Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said the adjournment was the result of fatigue after 14 hours of talks Wednesday and did not indicate any major differences between the two parties.

Negotiations were to resume at 10:30 a.m. EDT today with officials and Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress.

As the talks stretched into Wednesday evening, spokesmen at union headquarters said a voting procedure has been put in motion to ask rank-and-file union members to give their leaders a mandate to call a strike if necessary.

However, Ouellet said this would have no impact on negotiations. Union spokesmen said it is a routine procedure and Parrot added it is not an attempt to put pressure on the government.

"I don't think we need to flex our muscles," he said. "Everyone knows we've got it."

Ouellet said it is normal for final contract wording to be painstaking process. "In fact, we are still ahead of schedule in our activities."

This week's meetings follow the release last week of a pro-union report by conciliator Germain Jutras.

Parrot had said his union's minimum demands are based on that report and threatened strike action by next Monday if its recommendations were not accepted.

After a cabinet meeting Monday, six hours of intense negotiations Tuesday resulted in the agreement in principle — the first time such a pact has been reached without a major confrontation between the historically warring parties.

High-level negotiators, including deputy labor minister Tom Eberlee and top labor mediator Bill Kelly, then gathered Wednesday morning to try to hammer out final wording of the contract.

Although Ouellet at one point hinted that a final agreement might be reached by mid-day, the marathon talks broke up without success early this morning, with weary negotiators still optimistic about settling the contract without strike action.

Schreyer in good shape

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Ed Schreyer "is in good spirits and good shape" and has returned to Government House after a week in the National Defence Medical Centre for abdominal surgery, an aide said today.

He said Schreyer will rest before the three-day visit next week of Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Hopes fade for trapped miners

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — Residents of this northern Quebec mining community anxiously held their breath today awaiting news of eight miners trapped in a gold mine for almost two days.

A desperate rescue crew wielding picks and shovels tore away at rubble in the nearby caved-in mine but some of them held out little hope of bringing the men out alive.

"Nobody wants to say anything that might disturb the wives and families, but the chances of finding them alive look pretty slim now," said one member of the rescue team as he came out the gate of the Belmoral mine.

"We'll keep on digging all day and all night until we find them," said another. "But I really wonder if they'll be alive."

Provincial police said the men are believed to be between 30 to 60 metres below the surface. Mine officials would not allow reporters near the scene of the digging.

"It's a little bit rough," said Peter Ferderber, a soft-spoken prospector who discovered the mine and has been assisting the rescue operation.

"We're going as fast as we can, but we have to take safety precautions for ourselves."

Ferderber said the mine itself had not caved in and the accident occurred at about the 30-metre level, "where there never has been work."

The rescue team sent men through the mine's portal and ventilation shaft. From there, the workers were burrowing to where they believe the trapped miners are, he said, adding that air is being pumped down the ventilation shaft to a level of more than 100 metres.

The accident occurred around 10:30 p.m. (EDT) Tuesday, while 24 men were at work inside the 175-metre-deep mine. Sixteen managed to escape uninjured through wide ventilation shafts.

A rescue operation was mounted immediately by 50 miners working in day and night shifts.

They used only picks and shovels because of fears that machinery would cause the particularly brittle rock of the mine to give way. "A lot of our work right now involves fixing beams to support the tunnel we're digging," a miner said.

Quebec's voters on treadmill again

MONTREAL — In the garden restaurant of the Ritz Carlton, just opened on the weekend for the late-blooming spring that always astounds a Vancouverite, the white ducks swim endless circles in a pond on the lawn.

They are plunked in each spring, idle away the summer, presumably seen on the table each fall by the patrons who have watched their mindless paddling.

The luckless ducks are somewhat like the beaten-upon Quebec voter, who hardly gets out of the ballot box before he is set upon once again by the voracious politicians eager to sink their fangs into the public's tender spot.

As the old town, slumped in exhaustion, tries to recover its equilibrium from the emotional drain of the referendum drama, already the headlines scream about the coming provincial election.

This is a politicized state. Politics — a boring adjunct to the anglophones' preference for economic matters — dominates the dinner table and the water cooler.

A Montreal lawyer tells of how a secretary, during the referendum campaign, would sprout a small Canadian flag in her pencil-holder, matching and defying Parti Quebecois symbols on another stenographer's desk until, over weeks, the office became a subtle, unstated, political battleground.

The chambermaid in the hotel rushes about, apologizing because, as she explains, she must get to the polling booth on time.

The next morning, she is asked if the result pleases her.

"Oh yes, " she beams, "I've never told anyone before how I vote. But I was so sorry for Mr. Levesque. He cried, you know."

This is the province where politics, which means life here, is taken seriously.

A record 83 per cent of eligible voters took the trouble to struggle out to the polls on Tuesday to decide their fate — which only barely beat the previous mark that showed up on November 15, 1976 to elect the first avowedly-separatist government.

Still and all, the percentage of Quebec voters who cast ballots is the highest in the country — by most marked contrast with the 35-40 per cent who are projected to turn out this fall to elect the most powerful man in the world in the most powerful nation in history to the south of us.

A choice between Jimmy Carter and Ronnie Reagan admittedly is not much, but it's a factor of complacency.

Quebec (unlike the United States), knowing its future rests in the ballot box, takes care to care — and shows up.

The new headlines refer of course to the demand of Claude Ryan, exulting in his great referendum win, that the PQ government call a provincial election quite soon.

He knows it won't (especially since if it did, Ryan — not to mention Levesque — would be carried off on a stretcher to a rest home for the duration of the campaign.)

But the Ryan cry for Quebec voters to "complete the verdict" by tossing the PQ out on its ruined referendum simply means we are off on the next marathon suspense game.

Quebec voters, whose eyes now rattle like the lemons and oranges in the Las Vegas slot machines, have endured within less than a year:

— A federal election in which they were told they were isolated from Canadian society because of a Conservative government in Ottawa;

— A province-wide propaganda struggle over seven by-elections which introduced a victorious Claude Ryan as a new threat to Levesque;

— Another federal election in which a retiring Pierre Trudeau was persuaded to roll back the rock and return, in large part because Quebec Liberal MPs revolted over his potential successor;

— A referendum on the future of the most highly-politicized province which split families and friends, offices and stenographers.

Now, without a breath, we are into the slanging match for the fateful election that Levesque must put before voters by the spring of 1981 at the latest and most probably by this autumn.

The ducks, due to be encased in orange sauce on a silver platter by the fall of leaves, don't know how lucky they are.

Nishgas ask aid from Lt.-Gov.

ABOARD HMCS YUKON (CP) — Nishga Indians have sought the help of B.C. Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving in their land claims dispute with the federal and provincial governments.

In an emotional ceremony aboard this Canadian Forces destroyer Tuesday at Nass Bay about 65 kilometres north of Prince Rupert, Nishga tribal council members presented Bell-Irving with the Nishga declaration of sovereignty over more than 8,000 square kilometres of mountainous coastal land in northwest B.C.

Bell-Irving, an honorary Nishga chieftain, was also presented with all the documents pertaining to their tribal land claims, including the unsuccessful 1913 petition to the British Privy Council demanding sovereignty over their land.

The presentation followed a 90-minute closed-door meeting between council members and Bell-Irving.

Don't blab, dead pilot's dad told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Relatives of the pilot who died in a Twin Otter crash in Vancouver were warned the day after his death to keep quiet about concerns over the airline's maintenance, a federal royal commission heard Wednesday.

Alex Goostrey, 62, the pilot's father, told the Dubin commission into air safety of a visit by an AirWest Airlines executive, Sept. 3, 1978, the day after the plane crashed in Coal Harbor killing 11 people.

"We were told that if we made public any concerns we might have about poor maintenance, there was a danger that my daughter-in-law and the babies might be left destitute due to court action for damages," said Goostrey.

"Furthermore, we were advised to discourage other air crews from discussing affairs at the company operations, because there were people anxious to capitalize on the crash."

Goostrey said the company appeared primarily concerned with covering up, rather than running a safe operation.

The inquiry has heard the plane crashed due to stress corrosion in a flap-rod, similar to corrosion in an aileron rod which brought down a Twin Otter at Sechelt last September.

Goostrey's submission was the first heard by the commission which questions AirWest's role in the crash although he pointed out that the airline now is under new ownership and management. The sale was in March, 1979.

He said in early 1978, his son had written to Transport Canada to check about maintenance requirements and had subsequently been censured by an AirWest official and threatened with dismissal for "making unauthorized contact" with the federal agency.

He also questioned Transport Canada testimony at a subsequent inquest that "despite contrary rumors, AirWest was a well-run, safe operation."

"There seems to be a great gulf between those who make policy in Transport Canada and the realities of aviation," he said.

Response to Goostrey's allegations will be covered by lawyers representing the commission and AirWest during a later phase of the hearings, which continue today.

Earlier, Martin Heeslip, chief of the federal aviation safety engineering branch, said that five months after the crash, his office concluded that failure of a corroded flap control rod had caused the accident.

He said de Havilland originally agreed with this finding, but then ran a large number of its own tests. The company subsequently bypassed the transport ministry with its test results, sending them directly to the accident review board.

Heeslip said it appeared de Havilland was attempting to refute the transport ministry's finding.

A similar complaint about de Havilland's conduct was presented to the commission Tuesday by Lorne Tapp, chief of the aviation safety investigation branch.

Tapp also cited bureaucratic confusion and a power struggle within the federal ministry as factors contributing to delays in the investigation.

Tapp told the commission de Havilland wasted time by failing to provide information and by trying to discredit the finding that corrosion of a control rod had caused the Coal Harbor crash.

The final federal report was not released until 18 months after the AirWest accident. During those 18 months another Twin Otter went down at Sechelt, north of Vancouver, last September.

That crash was attributed to control rod failure.

Retirement, dismissal differ

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board has upheld earlier arbitration and court decisions that mandatory retirement is distinct from dismissal and therefore does not violate the Labor Code.

Board chairman Don Munroe rejected an argument Wednesday by the Office and Technical Employees Union that Section 93 of the code — which prohibits an employer from dismissing or disciplining an employee under contract without just and reasonable cause — includes forced retirement.

Munroe said the law clearly held before the Labor Code was introduced in 1973 that dismissal and retirement were two different concepts.

Selling Sunday short

If the B.C. government must persist with its Holiday Shopping Act, at least one amendment is in order.

When the government drew up the bill, it refused to set Sunday shopping rules for the whole province. Instead, it placed the responsibility on the wrong level of government — the municipality.

Clergy and unions have joined merchants in opposing the bill, but their reasons differ. The business appear to be mainly concerned that neighboring municipalities might have different Sunday shopping laws. The proposed legislation would allow individual municipalities to regulate Sunday store opening hours through plebiscite or a vote of council.

In Greater Victoria, Sunday shopping now seems to be regulated by consumer demand. In Esquimalt, for instance, four shops in one plaza are open Sunday but the rest choose to remain closed.

In Victoria proper, wide open Sunday shopping has not become an issue simply because of the city's nature. The manager of The Bay, Cam Young says it is "10 to 15 years premature for Victoria". In Saanich, a spokesman for Woolco says that so far the demand isn't sufficient to justify Sunday openings.

This approach to Sunday shopping will likely end if the province legislation is passed. The seven municipalities in the Greater Victoria region present the possibility of seven different plebiscites, seven different questions and a smorgasbord of rules governing the region.

The situation could arise where one type of store would be open in Saanich, but not Victoria or vice versa. Legislation would interupt the natural force of consumer demand; a merchant in one area could be financially hurt by a merchant in another area who lacked restraint. As the manager of the Hillside Shopping Centre succinctly put it: "It will be a real hodge podge if they have separate votes in each municipality."

The proposed legislation might make sense if all the municipalities in the province were distinct consumer trading areas, reasonably isolated from outside competition. It could work in Terrace or Nelson, but in the province's most populated regions, Greater Vancouver and Victoria, there is only the potential for confusion and hardship.

The regional district in these two areas is the only level of government capable of setting uniform guidelines. If there must be formal rules on Sunday shopping, then the province should amend the proposed legislation so that the decision is made by the level of government that can reflect citizen opinion and treat merchants in the large trading areas fairly — the regional districts.

Comments, please

Saanich council is concerned. New procedures adopted two months ago have indeed speeded the handling of council business. But it hasn't been without cost.

Even alderman John Mika, who pushed cancelling the old committee meetings and incorporating them into one council and standing committee meeting every Monday night, remarked it hadn't totally worked out the way he expected.

Several aldermen, including Mika, feel that council is losing touch with the community. Citizens with complaints or queries, they say, feel intimidated talking to council in the formal chamber. The rapport and the spontaneity were better when committee meetings were held in an informal atmosphere. Alderman Mary Casilio simply says she feels something is lacking.

But rather than give up procedures that now serve the public quickly, aldermen have decided ways must be found to make the council chambers less stiff. New furniture, new lighting, new seating arrangements could solve the problem, according to Mika. Council has called on the staff, the public and aldermen to submit suggestions. (They stopped short of making it a contest.)

One member of the audience was quick off the hard gallery chairs with his comments. Yes, he said, a change in the furniture would be order — both the animate and inanimate varieties.

One wonders why council is worried about spontaneity and formality.

Sealey replies

In presenting Paul Minvielle's story of alleged suppression of information, in the May 7 edition, I feel you have done a two-fold disservice to your readers. First, you have only told one side of the story, and secondly, that particular side is not accurate.

I must say I have some difficulty with the rationale at the outset of the story, regarding the reason for Ben Ethier's newspaper articles. I cannot reconcile the relationship between the Halloween incident in which "200 young people armed with eggs, rocks, and bottles tried to storm the Sidney RCMP detachment", and Ben Ethier's noble intent to "render a service to his town" by "telling the young people ... their rights under the law". I would be curious to learn more about the "rights" of an armed mob who choose to lay seige to a police station.

It should be stated at the outset that Ben Ethier is not a lawyer, nor in any sense is he trained in aspects of law. It is also imperative to point out that his "researching people's rights under Canadian law" consisted of, by his own admission, "checking through four books on law" at the Regional Library, and finally picking one that was "written out like a play," feeling "it would be easier to understand." The intent of his actions was acknowledged as sincere, but the concern was expressed that in something as potentially volatile as advice to youth in conflict with the law, it is essential that all possibilities be covered. The fact that the law as written is always subject to interpretation is what keeps a large number of lawyers very busy. If the law could be decided as simplistically as suggested, decisions could be made by computer, rather than in a court room.

Your writer very carefully pointed to some of the more plausible statements in the articles, while ignoring the inaccuracies. As a lawyer, Mr. Jim Robertson supposedly checked the articles for accuracy, but later concedes in one instance pointed out to him, that there is no such thing in Canadian law as a "Bail Justice of the Peace." He dismisses that as "nit-picking," but in view of the fact that was part of very specific advice on action to be taken by someone who has been arrested, I'm not sure it should be brushed aside that easily. There were other glaring errors, such as advising that "the driver of an automobile" is required to present his driver's licence, rather than stating "the driver of a motor vehicle." In the incident which brought matters to a head, the party who did not present his licence was on a motorbike. Those sort of statements, as contained in the articles, really give cause to question the credibility of the "check for accuracy."

At no point was Ben Ethier either told or asked to stop his articles. The two major points made by members of council and RCMP who met with him were:

(1) If the articles were to continue, they should be checked further for accuracy, either by another lawyer or by the RCMP, who could point out if they have an interpretation that may vary from that stated.

(2) He was requested to stop using his title Alderman in connection with his articles, which tended to draw an assumption that they were endorsed by council, whereas council neither had any input nor previous access to the articles

The suggestion by Ben Ethier that the meeting was "an inquisition" is not only untrue, but is in fact a most offensive slur on his fellow members of council, as well as supervisory personnel from the RCMP who were present. The special meeting was held "in camera" because we felt it dealt with "personnel", according the same consideration to an alderman as we would to a member of staff. It was assumed this would preserve the pride and integrity of an individual, who had done something with good intent, even if there were discrepancies. This would also allow him to save face publicly by making the necessary corrections himself.

I note with interest his claim that he had no idea what the meeting was for, and was unprepared. In fact, the town clerk had told him ahead of the meeting, and his comment was that's what he thought it was about, and he was "ready for it". — N. L. Sealey, Mayor of the Town of Sidney.

Reporter Minvielle replies:

I've rechecked my notes on the story and some specific points referred to by Mayor Sealey and see no reason to alter anything in the article.

In fact, Mayor Sealey should ask Sidney RCMP directly if the youth involved in "the incident which brought matters to a head," as she puts it, ever read Ald. Ethier's article as the RCMP implied at the special council meeting. It was an implication upon which she no doubt partly based her opposition to the articles.

I asked and it was admitted the youth never once mentioned the article to any policeman. The youth also told his lawyer the same thing.

The connection between the article and the youth was entirely in the arresting officer's mind, not in fact.

Ald. Ethier denies categorically that he knew what the special meeting was about beforehand.

Thanks, Saanich

According to reports, the developer of the Jacklin Road shopping center says, "that his firm may not be able to attract a major department as an anchor tenant." Fact: According to shopping center experts a major department store would be Eatons, The Bay, Woodwards or Simpson-Sears. Fact: According to official records of the Capital Regional District, "The primary trade area population required to qualify for a "major department store" is 75,000 to 250,000." Fact: The Official Community Plan of the CRD states the approximate population of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin by 1996 will be only 59,000. Fact: Even if we wait sixteen years (to 1996) we will still not have enough population to attract a major department store.

The chief planner of the regional district made it quite clear in August, 1977 when he said, "If a proposal for a centre at Tillicum and Burnside is approved, it would postpone development of the Western Community Town Center Site." Tillicum was planning 295,000 square feet at that time.

In my opinion, there will be no loss to this community with the killing of Jacklin Road Centre. It will benefit the community by, among other things:

(1) Saving us millions of dollars in drainage improvement.

(2) Stopping a problem from being constructed next to a major high school by conforming to recommendations from the RCMP.

(3) Giving the residents the only opportunity of having the largest shopping center with two major tenants close to them — as close as any major department store will come before the year 2000.

It is time we stood up and said thank you, Saanich, for saving us from an undisclosed financial burden. Thank you, Saanich, for saving our historical town center on Goldstream. Thank you, Saanich, for correcting a planner's mistake. Thank you, Saanich, for giving us the only opportunity of a super—large first-class shopping center we'll ever have in the next 20 years.

The community's future has not died — in my opinion, the killing of the Jacklin Centre gives this area a second chance to do a better job of planning and hopefully a more suitable location for a major shopping centre in the 21st century.

Thanks to Saanich and I agree with Mayor Couvelier when he said "stick regionalism in your ear." — Shirley Wilde, 3758 Duke Road.

Display of books

It was with great enthusiasm my husband and I visited our new downtown library recently.

After approximately half an hour of poring over the generous array of books in the gardening and pet sections, I obtained eight selections. On returning downstairs, my husband informed me that books with a red sticker on the binding were reference only. On perusing my selections, five out of the eight books were found to be "red stickered", that is, not to be removed from the library. One of these books entitled "The Golden Retriever" would have certainly appealed to a very few people and I cannot understand why it was considered a reference item. Almost every book on these shelves (Gardening and Pets) was "red stickered." These books at other branches are not classified as reference, although I understand that at the new branch duplicates of books are "red dotted."

Surely a library is a service for people to avail themselves of by borrowing books. Yet to me, this procedure of "red stickering" so many books is vastly overdone. Unfortunately, for the citizens of Victoria their new library has become a display of books.

I would hope that if any of the board members of the library see this letter, they would re-evaluate this classification of books and turn this display of books into a real lending library. — Mary and Michael Hannah, 3930 Braefoot Road.

WALTER STEWART

A sovereign Quebec invevitable

OTTAWA — George Bernard Shaw once asked the famous actress, Dame Ellen Terry, if she would go to bed with him for a million pounds. She said certainly. Then he asked if she would do the same for five pounds. She replied, "Of course not. What do you think I am?"

"We've already established that," said Shaw, "now we're haggling over price."

Canada and Quebec are haggling over price.

It is not a question of whether the province will become a nation state — it will. The question is when, under what conditions, and with how much fuss and fury.

Despite the explosion of joy that rocked English Canada when the No forces won their impressive victory in Tuesday's referendum, nothing much has changed.

Levesque is one link in the process leading to Quebec independence.

Talks will fail

There will be a federal-provincial conference on the constitution, which will fail, as have all its predecessors for half a century.

There will be a provincial election in Quebec, which will be won either by Rene Levesque, who wants a sovereign French state with close links to Canada, or by Claude Ryan, who wants a new constitution based on "the principle of equality of the two peoples who have founded modern Canada," and a division of powers in which "the provinces, (especially Quebec) will have the primary responsibility for the development and management of their human and physical resources."(Translation: a sovereign French state with close links to Canada.)

One of the zanier delusions of current English Canadian thinking is that Rene Levesque invented Quebec nationalism, and that the thumping he took on the referendum vote will silence the fractious French.

It was not Levesque but Daniel Johnson who proposed "divorce after a century together, then a remarriage" — the 1960s version of sovereignty-association.

It was not Levesque but Jean Lesage who coined the phase "maitres chez nous" — masters in our own house.

It was not Levesque but Robert Bourassa who was received in France with the ceremony and rank of an independent head of state, and who revelled in it.

It was not Levesque but Claude Ryan, in his beige paper, "A New Canadian Federation," who wrote that: "Quebec forms within the Canadian confederation a society which is distinct in terms of its languages, its culture, its institutions and its way of life . . . Within the Canadian family, Quebec society has all the characteristics of a distinct national community."

Levesque is not an aberration, but the logical successor to every major Quebec political figure of the past, the precursor to the major figures of the future. Whether that future lies in Johnson's divorce or Ryan's distinct national community, it does not lie within the bounds of the federation that now embraces the rest of us.

Consider what Rene Levsque set down in 1968 as the "basic institutional equipment for Quebec's national-cultural coming of age:

"Control over immigration and citizenship, over mass media and manpower policies, over internal economic development and all cultural (and related) external affairs. Plus enough fiscal power to tackle that on top of what's already needed for education and research, health and urban affairs."

Quebec hasn't picked up all of Levesque's shopping list, but most of it has already been tucked into the provincial bag, not by Levesque, but by his predecessors.

The province now has control over its internal economy, for all practical purposes; it even has its own Quebec Pension Plan to finance capital projects. It has, indirectly but surely, control over immigration and manpower policies, (although not over citizenship), and a firm grip on cultural policies both internal and external, along with enough fiscal power to tackle what's left.

The province lacks control over the mass media — but not for want of trying — and it has only an indirect effect on external affairs, although it still insists on a separate Quebec presence at international conferences that touch on culture or education in any way. That right, incidentally, was put in place by a Union Nationale government in 1968.

The process of separation, which burst on English Canada with the thunder-clap of mail-box bombs in 1961 (and perhaps we have to look forward to more of those) has in fact been going on for 221 years, since that unpleasantness on the Plains of Abraham in 1759. (Quebec license plates all note "Je me souviens"— what do English Canadians think is being remembered, a good movie?)

The tone in which the confrontation takes place varies, the degree of pressure inside and outside the province swings from one extreme to the other but never, over the 221 years, has the process reversed itself.

Nor will it do so if Claude Ryan replaces Levesque after another election.

English Canada is always astonished by the fact that Quebec nationalism grows by what it feeds on, although it is the most natural process in the world.

Ever since Lord Durham — who was wrong about a lot of things — wrote in 1839 that: "The French, once placed . . . in a minority, would abandon their vain hopes of nationality," the rest of us have been standing around waiting for the French to give up.

Instead, they have gone from strength to strength and with every victory have acquired the appetite for more.

Having conceded whatever latest demand has come across the table — for a separate pension plan, for opting-out clauses in social welfare schemes, for an even larger share of the income tax take— the other provinces are shocked and surprised when Quebec goes on to demand something new.

"What does Quebec want?" they ask themselves. The obvious, painful reply — it wants sovereignty — is dismissed as too distasteful to be countenanced, and we go back to bickering about constitutional reform.

Quebec's push for control of its own destiny is quite different from, say, the provincial rights demands of Alberta, and yet the nation reacts as if the two were similar.

In Alberta's case, all the reasons for supporting Canadian federalism are emotional, racial and tribal; there are few economic motives for remaining in Canada, and many for opting out, or joining the United States. As the province becomes more prosperous, discontent fades. Not the bluster and bitching, but the real, deep-seated discontent. Alberta can afford Confederation, and loves to.

In Quebec, the reverse is true; the reasons for staying with Canada are mainly economic — that lovely tariff wall, those nice DREE grants — while the reasons for getting out are emotional, racial and tribal.

Matter or money

As Quebec grows stronger economically, her links to Canada grow weaker, and the process is continuous. When Quebec can afford separation, it will pay the price, gladly.

In the circumstances, it is hardly surprising that we have been negotiating sovereignty-association — while disavowing it — for at least a decade. We will go on negotiating, and disavowing, until Quebec has all the trappings of nationhood. It is the Canadian way.

If we met the question head-on, with a final Yes or No, binding forever, there would be chaos, and the threat of civil war. As it is, we go at the process day by day, year by year, and the heroes on either side are more likely to be bored to death than shot.

We are a civilized people, going at the dismemberment of our nation in a civilized way.

The end result will, however, be the same: A sovereign Quebec in fact if not in name.

In the meantime, there will be a lot more haggling over price.

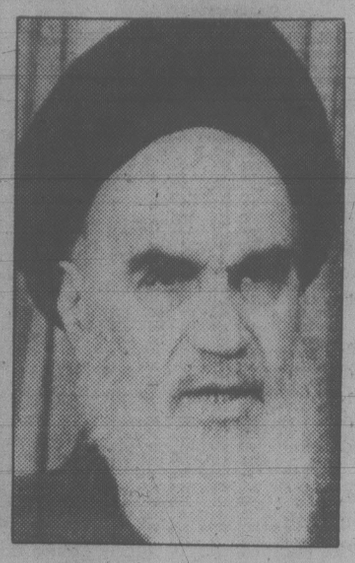
SHAH . . . can save world



KHOMEINI . . . 'God's boss'

We have now had time to reflect on the extraordinarily clumsy and perilous American debacle in Iran, which means that everything has now been said about it in condemnation, ridicule, anger, and pity. I share all these reponses in varying degrees, but mostly the last. Not for the hapless Carter, but for us.

I would suppose that this episode, however well-meaning, has (a) sealed the doom of the hostages, (b) forever ruined the political credibility of the fairly decent Mr. Carter, who should never have been faced with an internationally complicated situation, and (c) probably once and for all pulled the rug from the already shaky Western alliance.

There is no practical point whatever in the alliance unless it shelters under the American umbrella. And here we have the greatest technologically efficient power in the world managing to smash one military aircraft into another in the middle of a vast desert. It is, as sometimes before, deadly politics mixed up with Keystone comedy. This time, however, we have no time to laugh.

It must be totally apparent to we Europeans now that if we are to nestle under the implacable American power in the Middle East we are laboring after a vain thing. President Carter's television program the morning after the raid showed a man clearly at the end of his tether, not only running scared but defeated.

To his enduring credit he said no less than nine times (I counted) that the awful mess of the hostages' rescue was his personal responsibility alone. This, in view of the possibly terrible consequences, was a brave thing to do, and it will be an interesting theorem for future historians, if any survive, that the final war was blundered into by a peanut farmer who had never seen Iran in his life.

The great and insuperable American people have been rejected and humiliated first by their defeat in Vietnam and now by the Tehran militants. Small and hitherto insignificant nations have kicked them up the ass, which is not just unpleasant but unbearable.

Recognizing this emotion, the administration and the American media are deliberately encouraging and indeed insisting upon a public feeling that will not just accept but even welcome a military performance in the Middle East.

I say in all seriousness that we may well be — even accidentally — tripped up into a last and final war.

We have a Baptist political innocent running the United States. We have a manic fanatic running Iran. We have a bunch of geriatric bureaucrats running the USSR. In Britain we have a vain and fanciful woman who sends her crawling congratulations to an American for having made an outstanding flop. Where do we go from here?

Like you, I am in the happy position of being neither a president nor prime minister. We do not carry the can, and therefore we can be comfortably critical. Which is to say, essentially negative.

I would suppose that this is the uneasy position of almost everyone today. It is surely almost impossible to make a case for the truly awful Ayatollah Khomeini, who clearly supposes himself to be God's boss, and makes up accordingly.

So now let us calmly and coolly accept that we are getting very near to the next world war, which will without question be the last one.

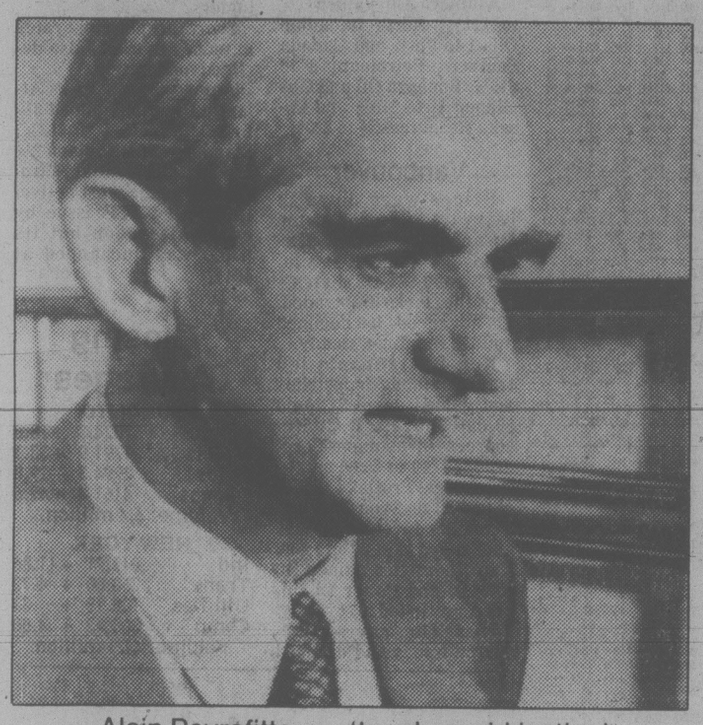
I may be prejudiced, but I am rather against this. I am also very conscious that wars are usually brought about not by sinister masterminds but by weak and silly people getting out of a predicament by playing tough, and this applies to every party in this situation. Let me therefore make a proposition, fully aware that it is cruel and wholly without sentiments.

Let the Americans prevail upon President Anwar Sadat of Egypt forthwith to send the Shah of Iran back to his country and undoubtedly to his death. This is a terrible thing to say, but it is less terrible than what will happen otherwise.

Even more callously, it can be said that this vain millionaire who used Iran as his parish has long ago lost his usefulness to his patrons, the Americans, who have always been pragmatic about ditching failures. He is a human being, albeit an unlovable one, as are the 50 American hostages, who just possibly may live if the shah does not. At least they will be mourned, as the shah will not.

I do not think that in all my life I have ever proposed anything more wretched than this, but a man who has spent his life in unimaginable luxury cannot surely complain if I ask him to die to save the life of the world.

French reforms 'repression in disguise'



Alain Peyrefitte . . . 'tough, rapid justice'

By PAUL WEBSTER

PARIS — French parliamentarians are to be asked to approve the biggest revolution in French justice for more than a century with the abolition of summary trials, the introduction of habeas corpus and the speeding up of a system which keeps alleged criminals waiting as much as five years for trial.

But instead of being greeted as liberal reforms by a judiciary trapped by the spirit of the Napoleonic Code, the measures, agreed by the cabinet last month, are being attacked as a swing to repression.

The criticism stems from the motive for the changes and the reputation of the man who has proposed them — the justice minister, Alain Peyrefitte, the most senior minister in Prime Minister Raymond Barre's cabinet. Peyrefitte wrote a best-seller, the French Sickness, which unfavorably compared French justice to the Anglo-Saxon system, and was brought into government to carry out liberal reform.

However, his proposals are a response to what he calls "popular sentiment," basically an opinion poll showing that 81 per cent of the French electorate want stronger measures to deal with crime.

Peyrefitte, who started office with the promise to abolish the guillotine, is now both its greatest defender and the man who some judges say is about to formalize state control of the judiciary.

If Parliament approves the changes — the majority supports the Gaullist minister — it would mean the end of the 120-year-old court of summary jurisdiction in which accused caught red-handed are sentenced within hours of the offence on police evidence and without proper defence counsel.

People being held provisionally, including those in mental hospitals, would have the right of habeas corpus for the first time.

But lawyers, magistrates and judges claim that the liberalism is deceptive, not merely because the commission which drew up the recommendation was made up only of members demanding repression and totally in command of the minister's personal office. What the opponents see as the key proposal is a new power which would put overall responsibility into the hands of the public prosecutor, who would short-circuit examining magistrates to speed up trials.

The public prosecutor's office would decide whether cases would be put before an examining magistrate, whose duty is to carry out impartial inquiries to which the defence has full access. Examining magistrates have full powers to dismiss a charge or send an accused for trial.

This inquiry procedure, carried out behind closed doors, is one of the reasons for long drawn-out cases and is often exploited by big criminals, who remain free while the inquiry is going on. But it works against most accused, who have to wait in detention for an average two years before trial because they cannot obtain bail.

Peyrefitte's reforms would make speedy prosecution possible in nearly all cases based on a police investigation; the aim would be to bring defendants to trial within two months. The public prosecutor, apart from bypassing independent examining magistrates, would also decide applications for parole, ending the present remission system under an independent judge, which is considered by some to be too lenient.

As these measures would be linked to new government instructions on much severer minimum sentences, lawyers say France will have automatic, government-imposed penalties.

Peyrefitte sees rapid justice not only as a deterrent but also a way of removing the agony of those awaiting trial. Nearly half French detainees have not been tried and 80 per cent of prison suicides are by provisional detainees.

The present lack of government guidance on penalties — drug dealing can result in a fine of three francs or 40 years in prison — has led to a lottery, he says.

However, the Union of Magistrates, which groups lawyers, magistrates and judges, says the legislation has the 'principal aim of filling our prisons even more' — a reference to the fact that with more than 40,000 people in jail the prison population has risen 25 per cent since Peyrefitte was appointed.

The lady in the dark

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — An award-winning thriller-writer who blesses the day she decided that no one but herself was ever going to wash dishes in her house ever again and who deliberately walks about at night in big cities and feels safe, must be a somewhat unusual lady. Celia Fremlin has now added to her remarkable record a thriller which is not only about abortion, but actually sees both sides of the question — an unheard-of thing to do.

Friendly, untidy, blinking behind her glasses, this middle-aged lady adores small babies; admits freely that she got pregnant (and thence married) by accident-on-purpose ("I put in that Dutch cap as badly as I could"), had two more children and a very happy marriage.

In her new book, With No Crying which is about a schoolgirl forced into an abortion who pads herself out so that she can feel she is still with child, she tells of the sadness of the termination:

"Baby Caroline would never know, now, what it was like to be more than three inches long, this was as big as she would ever be . . . the sprouting fingers, with their tiny nails already formed, would never now play the piano, whip up an omelette or hold a pen. Like buds shrivelled by the frost of a late cold spring their tiny day was over."

But the book comes down, in the end, on the side of the parents, who realize what the girl would have missed if she had been pram-pushing before she was 16.

Men's thrillers are about macho things like guns and planes and spies; about the struggle of men for identity, and dominance and power. But Celia's are truly women's thrillers — they are about the foot on the stair, the eerie sobbing in a distant room, the threat around the familiar corner. She knows that the ultimate horror is not when you square your shoulders and go out to meet danger, but when you look up and see across the teacups a familiar face grown mad; or when a friend, helping you climb up a cliff, suddely turns and tries to fling you down.

She has tapped, for the thriller, the rich seam usually only mined for domestic novels. When her baby kept her up all night and she was stupefied with lack of sleep, she thought: "This is one of the major experiences of life and no one's written about it" — and wrote the chilling The Hours Before the Dawn.

After her daughter was killed in a car crash and her husband died partly from the shock, she distilled some of her widowhood into The Long Shadow. My favorite, Possession, contains in rich and hilarious detail the whole mother-daughter scene; I remember one passage where the daughter has bad-mouthed her mother and flounced out: the mother reflects this is supposed to ensure more genuine communication, a closer relationship: "I don't know if it does, actually; I am much more reluctant to confide my real feelings to Janice than I would be if she were conditioned to listening politely; and less willing to sympathize with hers than I would be if she felt constrained to put them in some non-hurtful form."

When her spring of inspiration dries up, she goes out as a housecleaner, though she's currently dishing out advice by mail from a psychological centre (her husband was a psychiatrist). She has four male lodgers and, though I reckon she must be over 60, has a new boyfriend — not one of the lodgers.

She's given up having girls in the rooming-house though: "They can't help if, poor things, they have this nesting instinct, but they will come back with the hideous Toby jug or decide to paint a wall Prussian blue."

The lads are lucky to share a London house which looks over a lake and trees on to Hampstead Heath; she got the house during the bombing, when one could get any house one liked, so many citizens being unavoidably detained out of town; but she wasn't afraid of the bombs, anymore than she's afraid of anything else.

She insists that you can walk around at night because it's no more dangerous than by day; she always has, and she's not going to stop. She says she's never been hurt, though she's encountered some horrors: a vast billowing cloud of a woman spitting obscenities, too fat ever to come out by daylight; a man who asked to shake hands — and put an amputated wrist stump into her hand.

I think she is much braver than she realizes: once a young lad asked for a penny for the guy — the scarecrow figures of Guy Fawkes made every year by British children to commemorate the Gunpowder Plot to blow up Parliament. When she refused, she was suddenly surrounded by a swarm of them, putting their hands in her pockets and her bag and lunging at her.

Unalarmed, she said: "Did you know the Guy up by the Underground station's come alive?" "Huh?" "Everyone's absolutely terrified, if you don't believe me come and see." She walked firmly up the road with them trailing along behind her "like ducklings" — and straight through into the safety of the station.

You feel so in control, she says comfortably — and she doesn't realize just how much other women don't. But then that is the most peculiar thing about her: she actually thinks she's quite ordinary.

Armless in China

By CLIVE JAMES
London Observer

Bad sight of the week was on TV Eye. Chinese whose fingers had been cut off in industrial accidents were to be seen having them sewn back on or replaced with toes.

During the long operations, which involved micro-surgery of staggering intricacy, the patients stayed awake, presumably so that the visiting round-eyes from TV Eye could interview them. Some of the patients had had whole hands or even arms sliced off. These, too, were replaced. The cause of the accidents was usually some such piece of machinery as a circular saw. Thousands of Chinese per year have digits or limbs removed in this way. Apparently it is deemed more interesting to explore surgical techniques for replacing the missing appendages than to devise safe machines.

Chinese surgeons, it was announced, achieve a 92.3 per cent success rate in finger replacement. By my count that leaves 7.7 per cent of all severed fingers still being buried in separate graves, but not even Chairman Mao's teachings can give you the moon. Gratitude to Chairman Mao was universal, expressing itself in a steady drone which helped lull your senses while you confronted a rich display of pulsing arteries and twitching tendons. Dissenting voices could be counted on the toes of one hand.

Mediator appointed in nurses' dispute

VANCOUVER (CP) — A mediator was appointed Wednesday in an attempt to settle the strike begun last Friday by 2,700 nurses employed by the provincial government.

Lawyer Allan Hope of Prince George, was named mediator after both sides in the dispute agreed to third-party intervention.

Earlier, the nurses had decided not to picket mental health institutions and public health facilities at this time.

"We don't see the need to picket right now," said Jerry Miller, spokesman for the nurses represented by the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C.

"What we're doing now is effective," he said. "There's a lot of pressure on the employer."

The nurses walked off the job Friday after rejecting the terms of an industrial inquiry report prepared by Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court. About 450 nurses have maintained essential services.

Miller said the nurses may yet decide to picket government offices, liquor stores and other provincial buildings.

Picketing of the institutions where the nurses work and secondary picketing of other government services could come, in that order, should it come to it, he said.

The government-employed nurses want to maintain their traditional wage advantage over registered nurses employed by general hospitals who recently signed a contract providing a 44-per-cent wage increase over 27 months.

The Hutcheon report recommended a wage increase of 26.5 per cent over two years. The striking nurses said that under Hutcheon's formula they would be paid less monthly than general hospital nurses, although the hourly rate is comparable.

Educational TV in 6 months

An educational television channel will be operational in B.C. within six months, Science Minister Pat McGeer announced Wednesday.

Programming will be made available on existing cable systems.

The new system will feature programs like:

—Courtroom proceedings, videotaped for later use by law classes at University of B.C. and University of Victoria;

—Hospital operations taped for later viewing by medical students;

—University and college lectures, broadcast live for academic credit and general use by all post-secondary students in in B.C.

Interim financing for the the television operation was approved when royal assent was granted to a special appropriations bill that provides for $1.2 million in start-up capital.

Planning for the network started about three years ago, said McGeer.

"It's been quite a complex and time-consuming operation.

McGeer said legislation to create the new televison authority will be introduced later and a formal application will be made to the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to operate the service.

The commission's current vice-chairman, Charles Dalfen, first proposed the educational television idea about five years ago when he served as B.C.'s deputy communications minister.

Headquarters for the new television authority is likely to be at the B.C. Institute of Technology in Burnaby, McGeer said.

But broadcasts could originate at any of B.C.'s three universities and 14 community colleges, McGeer said

The minister also said he would like at some point to see MLAs in action on television.

Legislative debates could be made available but such a move is unlikely in the immediate future.

Televizing of house proceedings would require unanimous consent.

GREATER VICTORIA SAVINGS CREDIT UNION

Salmon price wrangle looming

VANCOUVER (UPC) — With losses from the aborted herring roe season still fresh in memory, unionized fishermen and processing companies have geared up for a battle over salmon prices a month before the B.C. fishery begins.

Like the herring talks in March, fishermen go into today's opening round of salmon negotiations demanding higher prices while the companies are calling for drastic price cuts so the B.C. industry can remain competitive in glutted world markets.

The herring roe season was virtually shut down when the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union went on strike over a failure to reach a price agreement.

Mike Burgess, spokesman for the Fisheries Association of B.C, which represents 14 processing companies, said Wednesday the fishing industry cannot afford another costly shutdown during the coming salmon season.

"We're looking at 1980 just as a year of survival for the industry," said Burgess. "Nobody — neither the fishermen nor the companies — can afford another shutdown this year."

But union spokesman Bill Procopation said an early settlement is unlikely while the industry is proposing price cuts to the 7,000 fishermen.

Citing shrinking world markets and stiff competition from an expected record 100 million-fish salmon run in Alaska, the association has slashed this year's offer to 80 cents a pound for sockeye, 68 cents for coho and last year's prices for other types. Last year, fishermen were guaranteed a minimum $1.05 for sockeye and 72 cents for coho.

Burgess said lower-priced Alaska salmon would eat away B.C.'s market unless the province's processors lowered their prices to about 80 cents a pound.

But Procopation, business agent for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, disagreed.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

Pursuant to the Canada Elections Act

Mr. A. Gordon,
Official Agent for Brian K. Higgins at the election of a member to serve in the House of Commons of Canada held on the 18 day of February, 1980 in the Electoral District of Victoria, B.C.

We have examined the Candidate's Return Respecting Election Expenses, which includes the Summary of Election Expenses, in respect of the above candidacy of Brian K. Higgins. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests and other procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances. In common with all other candidacies, it is not possible to determine by auditing procedures the extent of omissions, if any, from the accounting records relating to this candidacy, and therefore our examination of financial transaction was directed to transactions recorded in such accounting records.

In our opinion, the Return of Brian K. Higgins presents fairly the financial transactions, required by Section 63 to be detailed in the Candidate's Return, that are recorded in the candidate's accounting records.

Further, we report that the amounts shown in the Summary of Election Expenses, including contributions of $562.00 and total election expenses of $495.80 are the same as the related total in the return.

Sunday close province's problem, says labor

By MIKE HUGHES

The Victoria Labor Council went on record Wednesday night as being opposed to legislation which would turn over to municipalities the responsibility for regulating shopping on Sundays and holidays.

But the feeling that stores shouldn't be open on Sundays was not unanimous.

Delegates passed a motion expressing opposition to Bill 8, the Holiday Shopping Act, and calling for invitations to other community groups to work for control of shopping hours on a province-wide basis.

Secretary Jack Groves, who presented the motion on behalf of the executive, also suggested that B.C. adopt legislation similar to that in place in Ontario.

Groves explained that the Ontario statute has been in place since 1975. It allows the government to control holiday and Sunday shopping on the basis of the size of the stores and the number of employees they employ.

He said the proposed B.C. legislation would "make a dog's breakfast" on southern Vancouver Island where there are seven municipalities or regions which would set their own regulations.

Groves added that there is opposition to the legislation from every group in the community, including major retail stores, unions and churches.

"The B.C. government has that responsibility and they should accept it," he said.

Neil Hindle of the Boilermakers' union said delegates shouldn't be too critical of the Social Credit administration because the problem of Sunday openings is a very difficult one.

He questioned whether it would be a good thing to have all of the province "in lockstep" on the question.

However, Hindle was adamant that Sunday shopping not be allowed.

He said people are concerned because the day of rest is being abused by shysters trying to wring the last buck out of the consumer.

"As far as I'm concerned there should be five days of work and two days off. People have to have some leisure time," he said.

"If that means whole days off, to hell with the tourists. Canada is not just a tourist land to make the tourists happy."

Val Johnson of the B.C. Government Employees Union disagreed with the opposition to Sunday openings.

"I'm on the go all week and I like shopping Sunday," she said.

She added that she can't see anything wrong with people working Sunday as long as they are getting adequate time off and being paid well.

The public in general favors Sunday shopping, Johnson said, because many people are busy all week and that only leaves the weekend to shop for things like groceries.

Larry Ryan of the Service Employees' International Union suggested that the unions involved in the shopping issue get together and speak out with a strong voice on the matter of Sunday openings.

He was told representatives of the Food and Allied Workers' union and the Retail Clerks' union are on a Lower Mainland committee set up to fight the Holiday Shopping Act.

Council studies energy needs

Natural gas, increased use of wood waste and development of other hydro sites should be examined to provide Vancouver Island's projected energy needs, Victoria Labor Council delegates agreed Wednesday night.

The alternative energy sources were recommended in a plan for the Island from the council's energy committee.

The plan says the alternatives would eliminate the need for the expensive Cheekeye-Dunsmuir transmission line from the mainland, would be cheaper, provide jobs, and have a positive effect on the environment.

The energy blueprint, adopted by the council, says natural gas is the prime alternative for cheap, long-term energy supply.

It could be used for power in the Island's pulp mills as well as a replacement for heating oil for commercial and domestic use.

"Wood waste from wood processing plants and logging operations converted into electricity is the second most important alternative energy source possessing many advantages," the energy committee says.

The report says present wood surpluses are exported to the U.S., burned off or dumped.

"Bush slash is either left to rot or is burned off."

The report quotes a recent Canadian Forest Service study as stating that logging waste could produce another 480 megawatts of power at a price cheaper than B.C. Hydro can transmit power to the Island.

"Economies resulting from the use of hog fuel to replace petroleum for supplementary heat and for firing lime kilns at Vancouver Island's pulp mills would be substantial," the plan says.

"New hog fuel boiler systems being installed at Elk Falls will save over 200,000 barrels per year, those at Crofton have already saved 420,000 barrels per year, and new ones at Port Alberni could very well eliminate the use of oil altogether."

Energy committee chairman Ernie Knott of the International Woodworkers of America told the delegates that 15 per cent of the power consumption in Washington and Oregon now comes from wood waste.

He said the two states are pushing for 25 per cent of their power from that energy source.

Better use of wood waste would eliminate slash burning and clean up the environmental mess on logging sites, Knott said.

Quebec unionists get Victoria merci

Greater Victoria trade unionists agreed Wednesday night to send fraternal best wishes and thanks to their counterparts in Quebec for their position taken on this week's referendum.

Neil Hindle of the boilermakers' union asked that the Victoria Labor Council convey that message through the Canadian Labor Council.

He said as a result of the vote there is more need than ever to improve communications between those in the Quebec labor movement and their fellow workers in B.C.

Hindle said Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, does not necessarily speak for all of the Quebec union members on the question of whether or not Quebec should remain a part of Canada.

Fryer taking sabbatical

John Fryer is going to take a year's sabbatical from his high-profile job as general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees Union and become a guest lecturer at the University of Victoria.

From Sept. 1 until April 30, 1981, he will be part of Uvic's school of public administration.

The 41-year-old labor leader will be responsible for arranging a graduate seminar on contemporary topics in public sector labor relations. He will also teach labor relations in a diploma program.

Fryer will also help organize a program of research in public-sector labor relations at Uvic as well as teach part-time at the University of B.C.

He was not available for comment today on his decision to take time off from his job as chief spokesman for the 43,000-member BCGEU.

Fryer left Tuesday for Europe to conduct a month-long economic study for the European Economic Community.

He has a background in economics, having received an M.A. in labor economics in 1962 from the University of Pittsburgh.

BCGEU communications officer Robbie Robinson explained Fryer's decision as the result of a need to recharge his batteries.

"We are looking forward to having John return refreshed and his batteries recharged," he said.

BCGEU president Norm Richards of Victoria will take a leave of absence to fill in for Fryer as general secretary.

LOOKING AT AN ACCORD IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR DRIVING ONE.

A very impressive thing happens when you first look at an Accord Hatchback or Sedan and notice how tight and concise the styling is. And how everything fits into place. You realize that these are no run-of-the-mill imports or domestics, these are finely crafted automobiles, in the truest sense of the word.

The next impressive moment is when you slip into an Accord and notice that the detailing and finishing inside are as impressive as they are outside. With fully reclining bucket seats that are contoured and comfortable. There are thoughtful details such as a coin box on the dash for parking change. A remote control to open the rear hatch or trunk. And, on the Sedan, a remote control for the rear door locks.

But the moment that's pure magic, the moment for which there is no substitute, is when you turn the key, watch the tach swing freely, slip the Accord into the first of its five gears and head for the road. Because that's where an Accord is in its glory.

As you shift through the five gears and put your foot to it, the 1.6 litre OHC engine warms briskly to the task. If you've chosen the new Hondamatic with overdrive, you'll find the performance just as exhilarating, and the economy just as tight-fisted. Head into a corner and the rack and pinion steering holds a tight line. Drive over a bump and the independent MacPherson Strut Suspension handles it with a smoothness that contradicts Accord's concise size. Approach a stop and the power-assisted, dual-circuit braking system with front discs halts you straight in your tracks. And at any time you can glance down and the carefully thought out instrumentation lets you know what's happening when. It's a series of magic moments.

The next moment that needs consideration is when you price an Accord. Compared to equally equipped domestics they're priced quite low. Compared to most European domestics they're priced surprisingly low. So when you price an Accord, that just may be the most magic moment of all.

ed States and its allies would not do business as usual in the wake of Russia's invasion of Afghanistan. Now, the political message is far from clear. The alliance is divided, and the United States' leadership position is in question.

Some diplomats believe that the lack of allied support and the obvious division will give the Soviets even more incentive to exploit differences in the alliance.

"You'll hear a lot of rationalizations about how most of the top athletes will not be there and how this might be an athletic competition but it won't be the Olympics, but the fact is that we have not accomplished what we wanted to accomplish," said an administration foreign policy official who asked not to be quoted by name. "The Soviets will not be happy because the games will lack some prestige. But this is not the result we hoped for — far from it."

The Carter administration has argued that attendance in Moscow by the major industrial democracies would be used by the Soviets as evidence that its actions in Afghanistan were legitimate. While publicly the administration said it would participate only if there was a Soviet troop withdrawal, officials have privately said they never expected the Carter threat to achieve that.

But the boycott has been controversial from the beginning, although the reasons for not following Carter's lead vary.

For example, the French government thought the boycott was not a proper tactical response to the invasion and refused to try to influence its Olympic committee's decision. Public opinion in France has been strongly in favor of attending the games.

Nigeria jumps on oilwagon

The Associated Press

Nigeria raised the price of its crude oil today by $2 a barrel, becoming the last major exporter of oil to take that step, according to an oil industry periodical.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said the West African country raised the price of its best-quality oil to $36.71 U.S. a barrel.

The latest round of oil price hikes began May 14.

Gone 12 hours with wind

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four city residents ran their own Nanaimo-to-Vancouver race Wednesday — with wind surfing boards.

Time of the record-setting crossing: "About 12 hours."

The estimate came from a weary and shivering Wayne Hartrick, 24, who splashed and floundered ashore in front of the English Bay bathhouse at 9 p.m. — a second or so ahead of Trevor Allen, 16.

Bringing up the rear, about 15 minutes out to sea were Tana Tocher, 20, and Thierry Damilano, 25.

While he waited for his cohorts to make it to the beach, Hartrick gave a small group of curious bystanders a rundown on the trip, claiming the group covered up to 80 kilometres as they tacked their way across.

"The plan was to do about 10 knots and take a couple of half-hour rests, but that (plan) was all shot to hell," he said.

The first problem the group encountered was a genuine becalming outside Nanaimo.

After drifting around for about three hours, he said, they got a wind.

But the wind, "all over the place," gave the group problems keeping together and during the last five hours of the run it was a headwind, forcing them to tack ceaselessly to make headway.

The group was accompanied by a power boat. Boards were provided by a local surf sailing company — the four are employees — and are 3.9 metres long.

"There have been longer runs on the open sea," Hartrick explained. "This is just the first time it has been done between Nanaimo and Vancouver, though it was tried twice before."

Grand jury raps four in Abscam

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal grand jury, returning the first major indictments in the FBI's Abscam investigation, today indicted three Philadelphia city council members and a lawyer who allegedly led undercover agents to five congressmen.

The grand jury in Philadelphia charged all four defendants — including City Council President George Schwartz — with racketeering, conspiracy to commit extortion and attempted extortion in a six-count indictment.

The Abscam (short for "Arab Scam") investigation used Abdul Enterprises Inc., a front company created by the FBI, to allow agents to pose as representatives of a wealthy Arab to buy favors from lawmakers and other officials.

More fires in Ontario, the Prairies more of the same in the town of 2,000, most of whose residents have already been evacuated.

Bill Medd, senior conservation officer in the area, said winds helped firefighters suppress one fire near Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co.'s Chisel Lake Mine, about 12 kilometres southwest of the town of Snow Lake.

But that fire could flare up again, warned Medd, in an interview in his office in this town 700 kilometers north of Winnipeg. "And unfortunately there are three more fires just north of the town."

More than 34,000 acres of forest have already been destroyed and Medd said if winds pick up, as predicted, "We could end up with the whole northwest and northeast sides of town being surrounded by fire.

The blazes threatening Snow Lake were among at least 85 forest fires burning in Manitoba at last report.

In other fire areas, firefighters in northern Alberta were hoping that rain predicted for tonight will materialize but forestry officials aren't optimistic.

"Our forecaster tells us if we get a shower it's pure bonus," Larry Huberdeau, Lac La Biche fire officer said.

Forestry officials say two or three days of rain is needed to help ease the problems in the province's north, where forest fires have burned an area about 12 times the size of Edmonton — about 1.3 million acres.

There were 86 fires burning on Wednesday, 21 out of control, said Roger Goodman of the Alberta forest service.

More than 70 fires were burning in Saskatchewan on Wednesday.

Watch Ald. Frank Carson tonight when city council ends all the suspense and finally takes a vote on the controversial waterfront convention centre.

He has the key vote. Still undecided Wednesday night after the public hearing, how Carson makes up his mind could be crucial. The vote may be 5-3 to go ahead (most likely) or a 4-4 tie which means a defeat.

Will he vote with his friend, former mayor Peter Pollen, who has passionately denounced the whole thing, or with the downtown businessmen? Carson is a wealthy businessman himself and his work in founding the economic development commission showed his awareness of the need to attract diversified investments to Victoria.

But he is also an independent-minded alderman who has questioned handouts and giveaways — even to business groups — on several occasions.

Technically, council is just voting on an innocuous amendment to the special harbor commercial zone to allow public buildings, like convention centres, in the special strip of property that curves around the harbor from the Johnson Street bridge to Laurel Point.

And legally, the province could thumb its nose at everyone and build the centre without anyone's say-so. Municipal bylaws do not apply to the senior government.

But in fact, the public hearing on the rezoning has become a forum for a very broad discussion of all aspects of the project, everything from the motivation of the businessmen spearheading it, how superior is the planning process in Scandinavian countries, the murder rate in Manhattan and who shall be deemed worthy of future generations' sacred trust.

The city hasn't seen a controversy like it since the anti-highrise movement of the early 1970s.

It's unlikely that anything written at this late date will change anyone's mind, but there are a few leftovers nagging me after the flood of debate.

Foes of the convention centre say the three-acre property should be kept in a natural state, like the Dallas Road waterfront of Beacon Hill Park.

At the Tuesday night protest meeting in James Bay, Pollen showed some lovely slides of the greensward loved by strollers, kite fliers and runners.

And he made a nice point when he noted that the waterfront strip is park today only because it was a defence reserve for decades.

If our 19th-century defence strategists hadn't pressed to keep this coastal strip free of buildings for a clear field of fire for artillery, we'd probably be looking at highrises at the edge of Juan de Fuca Strait. Pollen is absolutely right.

But the Inner Harbor is a little different. The Reid site where the convention centre is to be built hasn't been in its natural state for a century and a half.

When James Douglas stepped ashore in 1843 this was the spot the Hudson's Bay Co. chose to fortify. The HBC built a trading post with a palisade around it and docks on the water below for its seagoing trade.

When the fort came down in the 1860s, new brick and stone buildings were erected along Wharf Street and fill was dumped in the harbor. Over the years the outcroppings of stone along this section of harbor have been chopped away and cemented over. There are very few spots around the harbor untouched since colonial days.

Both sides in the debate have referred to the 1973 report by architect Arthur Erickson which outlined a harbor development plan for the next decade.

The somewhat one-sided questionnaire put out by the Provincial Capital Commission last week referred to the report's emphasis on "the exposed cool windy nature of the waterfront."

He noted that all summer long the waterfront is subject to chilly breezes, and recommended that open spaces be sheltered.

Any park down on the harbor has to come to grips with this fact of climate.

But so does the convention centre. The present design calls for a series of stepped plazas inviting the public to linger, but the wind is still going to blow straight across the wide open spaces.

And up through the slot between the southern and northern halves of the centre onto Fort and Wharf streets.

On the other hand, the 35-foot back wall of the convention centre that will rise some 30 feet above street level along Wharf in front of Bastion Square is exactly the type of wind-deflecting development that Erickson called for in his report.

Not intimidated

She sees herself linking the foes of the fixed link

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Claudia Donato doesn't like to be considered a one-woman campaign.

The 28-year-old Victoria woman says she's just one of many people who oppose the idea of connecting Vancouver Island to the mainland with a fixed link and all she's doing is providing the initial voice of their opposition.

Donato and her husband Lorenzo got involved in the debate a month ago by starting a petition against the suggested link.

She isn't awed by the idea of tackling big government or the $2.5 billion cost figure attached to such a link.

"If I was frightened or intimidated I wouldn't have started this in the first place," she said.

Donato, who was born in the United States and is a landed immigrant, has lived in Victoria for 4½ years and says living on an island is a unique style of life.

Concern for the quality of life is Donato's main reason for deciding to fight the issue.

She puts a fixed link in the same category as nuclear power plants — damaging to the human environment.

"The main reason people give for wanting the link is convenience. But how many times do people really go to the mainland — four or five times a year? I don't know. Is a little extra convenience for that really worth all the bad it would bring?" she asked.

Donato is looking forward to a meeting she has called Sunday at the Empress when she's hoping those people opposed to the bridge will volunteer time and ideas to the campaign.

She has a rough idea of the kind of opposition those against the link should take but sees the meeting and a chance for everyone to offer input.

Donato is renting the room and organizing the meeting herself and she has no idea what the response will be.

"People say to me, oh, they're not serious — they'll never build a bridge, they're just trying to take the heat off. But they (government officials) have decided to spend $100,000 on a pre-feasibility study."

Donato says organizing early may be the key to stopping the idea before the government has made up its mind any further.

She thinks what the province needs to protect itself from any more threats like this is an environmental protection policy.

The policy should set down rules to prevent any drastic changes to the environment, such as the building of a bridge or nuclear power plants.

"I'm not against growth but it must be natural growth, not something that will throw out the balance of the system."

And that's her concern about the fixed-link idea.

She thinks such a link would bring a terrific burst of development to the Island.

"Vancouver would become a suburb of Victoria and vice versa. Do we want to be like Vancouver?"

Donato already has support from groups like the Islands Trust and the B.C. ferries workers but she's certain there are many individuals who feel as she does about protecting the Island's character.

The immediate project she's working on is collecting a massive petition to present to the provincial government.

Right now she is circulating individual petition sheets but at the meeting hopes to arrange central locations for petitions to be signed in communities in the Greater Victoria area.

Earthquakes a risk: MLA

The government's proposal to build a bridge-tunnel link to the mainland should be scrapped because too little is known about the geological condition of the Strait of Georgia.

In a statement, Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson said: "Aside from the fact that such a bridge-tunnel would destroy the way of life on Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, geologists know little about the earthquake active Strait of Georgia region.

"To proceed with engineering feasibility studies without the background geotechnical research is irresponsible."

Hanson said he has learned that about 100 small to moderate earthquakes occur each year in the strait and one major earthquake in the 6.0 Richter range occurrs every 10 years.

Massive underwater landslides have also occurred in the region.

Dr. William Milne, chief scientist with the Pacific Geoscience Centre at Pat Bay, agreed that information about the strait needed for construction of the link is limited.

The centre is responsible for assessments of seismic risks as they relate to national building code requirements.

The tunnel-bridge link would also have to meet similar building requirements.

Harbor centre opposed 2-1

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The people had their say on the convention centre Wednesday night and by a 2-1 margin they told Victoria city council they don't want the $8 million project on the Inner Harbor waterfront.

Opposition to the plan came from spokesmen as varied as Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell, former mayor Peter Pollen, ex-alderman Murray Glazier, hotelman Peter Hartnell and Esquimalt councillor Larry Mann.

The "yes" forces also had their stars. Esquimalt Mayor Ken Hill spoke in favor of the development, as a member of the Provincial Capital Commission which wants to build the brick and glass centre on Wharf Street.

Former city alderman and defeated mayoral candidate John Hayes was another supporter, along with Sealand manager Angus Matthews. Council and the crowd of about 200 also heard some expert testimony from Les Lee, former manager of the successful Penticton convention centre.

Aside from Mayor Hill, only one other centre supporter spoke. Dr. Arne Lane, president of the Pan-Pacific group of downtown businessmen organizing the project, spoke briefly near the end.

"I believe the site cries out for this type of development," he said. Old Town is dead or dying and needs a development to bring people in 24 hours a day to counter the suburban shopping centres planned for Saanich.

But in sheer numbers, the opponents of the waterfront centre dominated the 4¼-hour public hearing in city council chambers. There were 33 speakers and although nobody was opposed to the idea of a convention centre in Victoria, 22 of them didn't want it on the harbor.

Betty Gibbens, 933 Convent Place, a member of the Committee for an Open Harbor, called for an independent study of the costs and benefits of the proposed convention centre.

"Surely taxpayers' money would be better spent on more pressing priorities such as rapid transit and a first-class sewage treatment plant."

She also presented council with a petition containing the names of 450 people opposed to a convention centre on the site chosen by the capital commission.

CRD chairman Campbell said Victoria needs a convention centre, and the design of the proposed one is fine.

"But I've been to an awful lot of conventions and I've never been to one yet that needed a choice view lot. A convention goer doesn't need a choice view lot to attend his meeting."

Pollen slammed the "sloppy, clandestine, inept management of the whole project" and warned about possible conflicts of interest, although he made no specific charges.

"See that everything is above board and no conflict of interest by the people involved . . . We have a situation now that is filled with conflict of interest."

Mayor of Victoria from 1972 to 1975, he suggested a site behind the Empress Hotel. He also said Herschel Smith of Westcan Terminals has offered to let the centre be built above his Ogden Point warehouse.

Others touched on the conflict-of-interest theme. Ald. Bob Wright, chairman of council's land use planning committee, absented himself from the public hearing because he has an interest in Undersea Gardens and is a director of B.C. Steamship Co., both with harbor properties.

Potent tranquilizer taken before death, inquest told

A 20-year-old man found dead in a small creek in North Saanich March 29 had consumed a potent tranquilizer some hours prior to his death, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night.

But medical evidence given at the opening night of an inquest into the death of William John Jones differed as to the effect of the drug.

Royal Jubilee Hospital pathologist Dr. Frank Berry said an autopsy revealed the presence of the drug Elavil but the amount was small.

"I expect it would have had little or no effect," he told the inquest.

Elavil is a drug usually prescribed for persons suffering depression due to anxiety.

However, Terry Krepiakevich, a pharmacologist with the RCMP forensic lab in Vancouver, said a toxicology report indicated the level of Elavil in Jones' body was three times the normal therapeutic level and 50 per cent higher than the toxic level.

He said such an amount would cause mental confusion, muscle incoordination and produce symptoms like an alcoholic stupor.

He said Jones would have had to take 30 to 40 10-milligram tablets or 15 to 20 25-milligram tablets to have that much of the drug in his system.

Under questioning by lawyer Chris Considine, representing the Jones' family, Krepiakevich said the effects would have been all the more dramatic if Jones consumed all the tablets at once.

He noted there was no evidence of alcohol or other drugs, other than a minute amount of aspirin, but acknowledged tests were not made to determine presence of drugs such as heroin, LSD, mescalin, MDA or other hallucinogens.

Jones was last seen alive the night of March 27 when he wandered away from a car that had broken down on Canora.

A group of youngsters discovered his body face down in a small pool in Duck Farm Creek surrounded by a dense thicket at the end of a narrow twisting trail, about 200 feet from where the car had stopped.

Berry said the cause of death was asphyxia and called it a classical case of fresh water drowning.

He said there were no abnormalities other than some minor scratches and bruises on the body.

Considine suggested these may have been caused by the body being dragged but Berry replied the injuries were more consistent with a fall or crawling over sharp, uneven ground.

David Bill, a family friend, said that to his knowledge Jones seldom if ever drank alcohol and was not known to be a drug user.

Sidney RCMP Constable Jose Brochez said a Sidney area woman whom Jones had been dating admitted in an interview she had taken some Elavil the night of March 27.

Brochez said the woman, whom he described as a known heroin addict, thought she may have given Jones some pills but wasn't sure.

The woman is to be called as a witness when the inquest resumes under Coroner John Davidge at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday at the Sidney council chambers.

Union upheld by LRB

The Sidney branch of the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union has failed in its efforts to have the Labor Relations Board reconsider its certification of a union to represent employees.

A three-member LRB panel in a decision released Tuesday reconfirmed the decision to grant certification to the Office and Technical Employees Union and dismissed applications for reconsideration from the company and a group of employees.

The panel also decided that the branch is not an appropriate case for a representation vote to be taken.

The board also said two women the credit union wanted exempt as part of the management team are actually employees and belong in the bargaining unit.

Theft charge dropped; it was her car, after all

A charge against a 21-year-old woman of attempting to steal her own car was dropped Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan entered a stay of proceedings against the charge of attempted theft over $200. Cathy Marie Mullins, 1732 Newton, had been charged following an incident April 22 at Gordon's Towing.

Mullins' car had been towed away from a lot at Johnson and Broad shortly after 2 a.m. and she went down to the towing firm to reclaim it.

An employee of the towing company called police about 2:20 a.m., stating that a woman was trying to remove her car without paying the $16 towing fee.

Officers arrived and advised Mullins of the procedure to dispute tow charges, but she got into her vehicle anyway and tried to drive away. At that point, police arrested her and took her to police headquarters.

Police said Mullins vowed she would go back if released, prompting officers to keep her in the cells until her appearance in court later that morning.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said Wednesday the woman tendered a letter of apology to Gordon's

Coast Guard on display

Sunday is Canadian Coast Guard Day and Transport Canada's Dallas Road base will be open to the public from noon to 3 p.m.

Two Alouette helicopters will be on hand, one to fly visitors around the harbor area and the other to take visitors to the Race Rocks lightstation.

The Race Rocks trips will start at 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. Those chosen by drawing numbers to visit Race Rocks will spend about one hour with lightstation keeper Trevor Anderson and his assistant, Bob Lundy, and their families.

In addition, there will be harbor tours aboard the catamaran Catelite and a Boston whaler.

The buoy tender Sir James Douglas will also be open to the public.

Ship had to put in, trial told

The engineer aboard the Panamanian freighter Samarkanda told a county court jury Wednesday it was decided to seek shelter after he told the captain, navigator and the radio operator he could not guarantee the ship could continue without repairs.

William Terry Hines, 39, of San Rafael, Calif., was testifying in the 18th day of the trial of eight men accused of importing 33.5 tons of cannabis marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking a year ago.

He said a problem developed with the pumps on the auxiliary engines and generators which drew seawater and as the ship travelled north, they would suck air so he switched to a sanitary pump which normally was used for flushing toilets to keep the generators cool.

There was a failure of the automatic steering which he solved and a continuing problem with dirty fuel requiring frequent filter changes.

At one point, one of the two main engines would not restart and this cut speed to seven knots from 10.

It was decided then to sail a little closer to shore, just inside the 200-mile fishing zone.

Problems worsened when one generator overheated and Hines said he had a temper tantrum and "I said I cannot guarantee this thing will run for 10 hours or 10 minutes. If anything happened to the other generator, we would be dead in the water."

He said he told others the vessel had to go someplace to do something about the cooling system. If the sanitary pump failed, there was no way to cool the remaining generator.

No one wanted to put in, he said, "but I did not feel I could guarantee to keep things running. I was tired, quite fatigued. I had very little sleep for a couple of days."

Hines said he told captain Marco Antonio Lopera Penagos, 60, of Mellin, Colombia, navigator William Francis Perka, 35, and radio operator Stephen Earl Johnson, 34, both of Port Townsend, Wash., that something had to be done about repairs because he felt there was a good chance something might happen to the second generator.

He also wanted to find out how much diesel fuel remained and wanted calm waters so sediment would sink and fuel could be transferred to one tank.

He hoped that with assistance from others in calm water, repairs could be made in two or three days and enable the Samarkanda to continue to its planned rendezvous on the high seas off Alaska with a receiving ship.

The decision to put in was made at noon May 20, 1979. Three hours later the remaining operational generator failed after a hose on the saltwater pump burst, flooding the generator.

It took three hours to get the generator going again, he said, but it was only a temporary repair until the vessel stopped in Sydney Inlet 50 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Once there, he said, he planned to combine parts of one generator with another to produce a serviceable unit. This couldn't be done at sea because some parts weighed 1,500 pounds and all power would have to be shut down.

In cross-examination, Hines agreed he was lured by the $100,000 offered him to run the engine room for the one voyage. He was not concerned about the ultimate destination of the cargo.

He agreed he did manage to get both main engines running towards the end of the voyage into Sydney Inlet.

Asked if at that stage, with both engines running, the Samarkanda could have turned around and headed north again, Hines said he supposed so but he was practically asleep on his feet. It was felt best to "park some place and go over things," and remaining at sea would not solve the fuel problem.

The seventh defence witness, Ian Alexander Smart, accepted by the court as an expert in marine engineering, said he visited the Samarkanda three times at the request of the defence and what he saw in the engine room was consistent with repairs described by Hines in testimony.

He said it was a very wise decision on May 19 to sail closer to the shore than before.

Asked his opinion on the May 20 decision to seek shelter, he said it was certainly a prudent move and "I would say at that point essential. I certainly would have made the same decision, perhaps before that time."

He said it would not be prudent to take heavy parts of one generator on the high seas and put them in another generator because of the movement of the ship and the weight of the parts.

Smart didn't think he would attempt to shut down both engines and make repairs at sea.

He agreed an honest effort had been made to keep the Samarkanda running and he described the quality of repairs made by Hines as very high.

One of the problems with changes in the Samarkanda over the years was that the Second World War U.S. Navy anti-submarine net-layer had had heavy materials including armaments removed but the intakes for the saltwater part of the cooling system for the generators had not been lowered.

Smart was to continue his testimony today.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old youth was given a 21-day jail sentence by Judge Lorne Pearce for stealing rings and money from a woman he met hours earlier at a downtown cabaret.

William Donald Thompson, 310 Gorge Road East, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property.

Court was told Thompson met the woman at Harpo's Cabaret in Bastion Square and went back to her apartment at 885 Dunsmuir last Thursday. At 4:50 a.m., Thompson took a taxi back to his motel room. The woman then discovered three rings, valued at $400 and $23 cash had been taken from her purse.

Police went to the room Thompson shared with his common-law wife and found the rings.

Thompson had a previous conviction on Oct. 16, 1978, in Chilliwack for breaking and entering, when he received a two-day jail term.

Pearce placed the young man on a year's probation and ordered him to accept alcoholic treatment and to seek employment.

A Nanaimo artist who was convicted last year in Alberta for trafficking in a restricted drug was given a $250 fine for possession of marijuana.

William Herbert Helin, 19, told the judge he offended "nobody but myself."

Crown counsel Bonnie Hallas said Helin was arrested May 9 at the Memorial Arena with the substance in his possession.

A Yorkton, Sask., youth who was arrested about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday by Victoria police was given a suspended sentence and two days of community service work.

Robert Laverne Meekma, 20, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana and LSD.

Crown counsel Allan Tryon said police were conducting a routine check of the Bastion Inn when they found a 7-gram baggie of marijuana on Meekma. At the police station, a further search produced three marijuana cigarettes as well as a foil containing LSD.

Pearce placed Meekma on 30 days probation and ordered him to do 15 hours of community work.

Pearce allowed a 27-year-old McKenzie man to serve his 14-day jail sentence on weekends in Prince George.

David John Holman pleaded guilty to impaired driving May 11.

Mulligan said Holman was noticed about 9:25 p.m. at Blanshard and Carey going at a slow speed and almost hitting a cement abutment before striking a curb.

Holman said he was trying to pull a sweater out from behind the seat at the time and only had two "stiff" drinks. His breath readings were .13 and .14.

Pearce made his order concerning the intermittent sentence to be served in the central B.C. city after Holman said he was expected to start work Monday in McKenzie.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Maureen Patricia MacLean, 23, of 55 Bay, $450; Viva Moodley, 28, of 416 Richmond, $450; Melvin Joseph Marklinger, 848 Hockley Place, $450; and Lawrence Michael Thomas, 31, of Kuper Island, $50.

Pearce said he would recommend to the superintendent of motor vehicles that Thomas' driving privileges be suspended for six months.

Why Al Arbour is a good coach

NEW YORK — He stands behind the Islanders' bench as if he were a statue, never smiling, seldom showing emotion, peering through thick glasses, the concentration on his firm face appearing to be chiseled in granite. Before and after the games, he doesn't say much publicly. What he does say is usually trite and true, never colorful, seldom controversial. But theatrics and headlines are not Al Arbour's style. Coaching is.

When the Stanley Cup final returns to Philadelphia tonight, Arbour will be within one victory of coaching the National Hockey League champions.

But in his seventh year with the Islanders, the longest tenure of any current NHL coach with one team, Arbour remains somewhat unknown and unappreciated except by those who know him best — his Islander players and Bill Torrey, the general manager who hired him. Only they understand what makes Arbour a good coach, if not a great coach. And that was the question put to all of them — in a word or a phrase, why is Arbour a good coach?

"After all these years," replied Denis Potvin, the captain who arrived the same season the coach did, "he still retains tremendous respect from the players. What he says is gold. The players take it as truth, as fact. Very few coaches can sustain that."

Arbour's manner helps. He doesn't rant and rave. He doesn't make a scene. Instead, he is honest and logical with his players. He doesn't try to con them. And those qualities endure. But to five of his players, Arbour's finest attribute as a coach is showing his confidence in their talent.

"I get down easy, I lose my confidence," John Tonelli said. "But he keeps your head up."

"He shows confidence in all of us," Gord Lane said. "He puts all of us out there in any situation, he doesn't use certain players in certain situations."

"He uses everybody," Butch Goring said. "That shows he has confidence in everybody."

"He gave me a chance," Duane Sutter said. "He never gave up on me. He kept throwing me out there. When a coach does that, you learn to believe in yourself."

"He doesn't get down on the guys," Dave Langevin said. "He'll say, 'Take your time, I'm going to stick with you.' And he does."

Patience might be another word for confidence. Patience is the word that two defensemen used in talking about Arbour.

"He's got patience," Stephan Persson said. "As a young player, you need a coach who'll be patient with you as you develop."

"As a former defenseman, he sees your mistakes," Bob Lorimer said. "But he's got patience. He lets you redeem yourself."

Another young defenseman, Ken Morrow, the gold medalist from the United States Olympic hockey team, has been with the Islanders less than three months, but Arbour has used him on a regular shift.

"Even when things aren't going good," Morrow said, "he keeps everything positive."

In the playoffs, Arbour has relied almost exclusively on Billy Smith as his goaltender. By participating in 14 victories, Smith has established a Stanley Cup goaltender's record for a playoff year. The previous high of 12 was set by Ken Dryden of the Montreal Canadiens.

"Al gave us a system, he's smart," Smith said. "And he handles each guy individually. He lets me go my own way, he lets me do my own thing. If he sees I'm not skating at practice, he doesn't yell, 'Skate, skate, skate,' He figures I know what's best for me."

The almost forgotten goaltender, Glenn (Chico) Resch, spoke of Arbour's poise during adversity or controversy.

"He doesn't over-react," Resch said. "If things go bad or if a player gets mad at him, he doesn't blow it up into what might be a serious problem. He keeps his mouth shut and it passes over."

Others mentioned Arbour's work ethic, his hockey knowledge, his winning attitude, his control and his psychology.

"He works 24 hours a day," Bob Bourne said. "And that sense of mental discipline comes through on and off the ice."

"He has terrific over-all analysis of the game," Lorne Henning said. "He knows how to pick the other teams apart."

"He studies everything," Garry Howatt said. "He tries to keep everybody happy and he does a pretty good job of it."

"He prepares us very well for every game," Bryan Trottier said. "We always know what to expect from the other team."

"The first day he came, he brought a winning attitude," Bob Nystrom said. "And he has showed he has faith in the players. That rubs off on all of us."

"He's always in control," Mike Bossy said. "Control over the situations in a game and control over the players."

"He's a psychologist," Clark Gillies said. "He knows every guy on this team better than each guy knows himself."

"He knows how to get the most out of each guy," Wayne Merrick said. "He always has time to listen to each guy."

But perhaps better than any of the players, Torrey understands why Arbour is a good coach.

"He's a man's man, he tells you what he's thinking, there's no bull," the Islanders' general manager said. "He has curiosity about the game, he's as innovative as anybody. He's been watching videotape for years, he just never made a big deal about it. And he knows how to make a decision.

Early in the season, when the Flyers were running away from everybody, we sat down and he suggested that we concentrate on how to win the cup, that he wanted to experiment with players so that we'd be at our best in the playoffs. And here we are."

Must work, execute: Quinn

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Pat Quinn has had two days to get his Philadelphia Flyers back in gear. Tonight he finds out whether he was successful.

"Very disappointing," the Flyers' coach said of New York Islanders 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final.

"I believe what some people say, that both teams are close in ability, but ability is only part of being a winner," he said. "There is that other ability — to work hard and execute.

"Certainly we need a better effort," he said of a 5-2 loss at Uniondale, N.Y., in the fourth game Monday night. "But now we also have to get the brains going."

The Islanders can wrap up their first National Hockey League championship title with a victory tonight or in a sixth game at Uniondale on Saturday afternoon.

"It wasn't as if they overpowered us or did it with an over-abundance of talent," Quinn said of the Islanders' fourth-game victory. "They did it because there were breakdowns."

Finding the solution to those breakdowns is what has occupied Quinn since Monday night.

"I definitely don't know why they happened," he said. "Stress?

"The length of the playoffs? I wish I had an answer. Then I could go into the locker room and tell them why."

The Flyers, over-all winners of the NHL season, haven't had the kind of performance that kept a record 35-game unbeaten streak building during the season.

"We haven't taken advantage of their weaknesses," Quinn noted. "In the beginning of the year we had some guys who would carry us through those off nights.

"We haven't had that against the Islanders."

Captain Mel Bridgman said the Flyers have to get back to where they found their earlier success.

"We've just got to go out there and play our game," he said. "We're a strong forechecking team and we did a bit of it in the last game.

"We haven't done that much of it in the series though. What we've done all year, we haven't done in this series. If we don't do it, we're obviously not playing our best."

Quinn also would like to see defenceman Jim Watson and right winger Paul Holmgren back in the lineup. Despite Watson's damaged collarbone and Holmgren's wrenched knee, they will be called upon if it's at all feasible.

"They're possible," said Quinn.

LUNGING OUT OF CROWD, Dutch star Rudi Krol (3), newest member of Vancouver Whitecaps, gains control of ball during Challenge Cup match Wednesday at Vancouver. Backed up on this play by clubmate Steve Kember, Krol played strong game as Whitecaps rallied for 1-1 tie against Roma of Italy. In another Cup match, New York Cosmos nipped Manchester City 3-2 in New Jersey.

Whitecaps outplay Roma, but forced to settle for tie

Times News Services

Speedy winger Carl Valentine scored with 8:16 left to give Vancouver Whitecaps a 1-1 tie with Roma of Italy in the first game of soccer's Trans-Atlantic Challenge Cup for both teams at Vancouver Wednesday night.

Valentine's goal before 22,334 fans capped a night of sustained pressure by the defending North American Soccer League champions.

Roma, who won the Italian Cup title, took a 1-0 lead against the flow of play in the first half when centre forward Guido Ugolotti dribbled a ball through the hands and legs of Vancouver goalie David Harvey.

The tie enabled the NASL to claim a slight edge over their European rivals as New York Cosmos defeated Manchester City 3-2 before more than 31,000 fans at East Rutherford, N.J.

In Vancouver, both sides played pleasing attacking football but the match threatened to get out of the control of referee Toros Kihritjian three times in the second half as shoving matches developed.

A central figure in the shoving was Vancouver striker Ray Hankin who collided heavily on two occasions with Roma keeper Franco Tancredi.

It was Hankin, however, who set up Valentine's equalizer as he took a poor clear from Roma captain Sergio Santarini and sent a through ball for Valentine to blast past Tancredi from 16 yards.

Ugolotti scored on a counter attack when he controlled a long lob from midfielder Agostino Dibartolomei at the top of the Vancouver penalty area.

Vancouver's dominance was demonstrated by a 25-10 edge in shots at goal — 16-3 in the second half — as the Whitecaps had two other goals by Valentine and Hankin called back for hand ball infractions.

In East Rutherford, Giorgio Chinaglia's second goal carried the Cosmos to their 3-2 win over Manchester City.

Chinaglia, who last week became the NASL's all-time leading scorer, tallied his 495th career goal at 72:40. Vladislav Bogicevic scored the other Cosmos goal.

Manchester City began its comeback at 59:23 when former Cosmos Dennis Tueart scored on a penalty kick and tied the score 2-2 at 61:45 when Kazimierz Denya pushed a pass to Bennett who beat Cosmos keeper Hubert Birkenmeier.

In Vancouver, the match marked the debut with the Whitecaps of Dutch superstar Rudi Krol who controlled the backline and started several build-ups with crisp passes to teammates he had met only two days ago.

"He's class," said Ball. "He plays it simple . . . he's predictable in the way he does things but he does it great."

Second games in the series against the European clubs will have Manchester City at Vancouver, Saturday night while Roma visits the Cosmos.

In league play, Memphis Rogues topped Minnesota Kicks 2-1 in a shootout, California Surf needed three minutes of overtime to defeat Houston Hurricane 1-0, Rochester Lancers defeated Toronto Blizzard 3-1 and Portland Timbers edged Edmonon Drillers 2-1.

Penguins eye Cherry

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Don Cherry, fired as coach by Colorado Rockies on Tuesday, apparently is a ripe candidate for the open job as coach of Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Penguins have been without a coach since May 8 when Johnny Wilson was ousted because, according to club president Vincent Bartimo "the Penguins did not play the kind of hockey the last half of the season they had the potential to play."

'Little hope' of avoiding ball strike

With a strike deadline only hours away, baseball negotiators faced a nearly impossible task today, meeting for one last time in New York in an effort to reach an agreement on a new contract that would prevent a stoppage in play.

There was little hope that a strike could be averted after another round of fruitless talks Wednesday.

"Unless there is a complete change of heart, we're headed pell mell for a strike," said federal mediator Kenneth Moffett. "We're in deep trouble."

Moffett said no progress had been made at the session Wednesday when the players' association presented a revised proposal to owner representatives.

"Sitting at the end of the table and hearing the two sides, it sounded to me as if we were a month away from a deadline instead of 30 hours," the mediator said.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the union, said there would be no avoiding the deadline in his talks with management.

"A strike creates pressure," Miller said. "Removing the deadline creates no pressure."

Miller said player representatives of all 26 major league clubs had been sent telegrams restating the will of the union's executive board which voted unanimously on April 1 to strike unless a contract is negotiated by May 23.

"Games Thursday night will be completed," Miller said. "The strike begins May 23.

"Nothing changes that except an agreement."

But the two sides seem miles away from agreement.

"We did not make any progress," Miller reported. "We have negotiated for six months and produced nothing even approaching an agreement, even with a strike deadline.

"That's the best shot for progress. Now they propose removing the deadline and then work for an agreement. They say if we reach one, it would be retroactive. Well, I learned a long time ago that if you're offered zero retoactively, it's still zero."

Meanwhile, clubs prepared for an interruption in the season. Although weekend advance ticket sales remained strong in many cities, teams were readying refund plans for fans.

On the field, Craig Nettles opened the 11th inning with a solo home run and Ruppert Jones belted a two-out, three-run homer as New York Yankees unloaded five home runs and defeated the Tigers 9-5 in American League action.

Eric Soderholm, Lou Piniella and Bobby Brown also homered for the Yankees but Nettles's shot was his second game-winning run-scoring hit in the three-game series against Detroit.

The victory, coupled with the crushing 11-2 defeat of Toronto Blue Jays by Boston Red Sox moved the Yankees into a 1½-game lead over Toronto in the East Division.

Elsewhere in the American, Cleveland Indians defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-2, Minnesota Twins edged Chicago White Sox 3-2, California Angles outlasted Texas Rangers 9-8, Oakland A's downded Kansas City Royals 4-2 in 14 innings, and Seattle Marines beat Milwaukee Brewers 6-4.

Philadelphia and Cincinnati played their three-game series as if it were coming at the end of the season.

The two teams combined for 40 runs and 67 hits in the series, with the Phillies winning two of the games, including Wednesday's 9-8 decision. The matchup saw some aggressive play usually only seen in the playoffs or late in the season when a pennant is on the line.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh Pirates took 4-3 and 3-2 victories over San Diego Padres, Montreal Expos edged Atlanta Braves 3-2, New York Mets whipped Houston Astros 5-1, Los Angeles Dodgers stayed hot with a 5-3 decision over St. Louis Cardinals and San Francisco Giants defeated Chicago Cubs 4-1.

Clippers hire Silas

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Paul Silas, a 16-year National Basketball Association veteran who played on three title teams, was signed as player-coach of San Diego Clippers on Wednesday.

Silas, who played with Seattle SuperSonics last season, signed a three-year coaching contract and a one-year playing contract with the Clippers. He needs only 17 games to surpass John Havlicek as the NBA's all-time leader in games played. Havlicek played in 1,270 NBA games.

Silas replaces Gene Shue, who announced his departure as San Diego coach earlier this month.

Silas, 36, played with the Hawks in St. Louis and Atlanta, Phoenix Suns, Boston Celtics and Denver Nuggets before moving to Seattle in 1977. The SuperSonics won the NBA title last year, and made it to the semifinals this season before being eliminated by Los Angeles Lakers.

Ten Victorians selected to national rowing team

Greater Victoria must be expanding its reputation for producing top-notch rowers.

Ten of the 40 rowers named to the national team following selection trials at the weekend in Vancouver are members of Victoria clubs.

Pat Walter and Bruce Ford, the Pan-American Games doubles champions; Lisa Roy, Janice Mason and Shelly Donald in women's quad; and Cheryl Mason in women's doubles were selected to the sculling group.

Included in the sweep-oar section are Marius Felix, men's eight; Katie Burke, women's eight; Kelly Jacklin and Ina de Lure, women's four.

In addition, Al Morrow of the University of Victoria and Lief Gotfredson of Victoria City Rowing Club have been picked to the five-member coaching staff.

The Canadian team has an extensive program of competition scheduled — despite the Olympic boycott — after the sculling camp at Elk Lake and the sweep-oar camp in Burnaby break up at the end of the month.

Stopovers on a European tour include the prestigious Lucerne International Regatta in Switzerland June 7-8 and another international regatta June 28-29 in Amsterdam.

The men's team also hopes to take part in the Henley Regatta in England, July 3-6.

Japanese Olympic body heading for participation

By The Associated Press

With Saturday's entry deadline for the Moscow Olympics quickly approaching, Japan appeared to be closer today to attending what is turning out to be a mini-Games with a mini-team — a decision which would hurt the United States-inspired boycott movement.

The Japan Olympic Committee postponed a decision today on whether to defy its government's pro-boycott stance and send a team to Moscow this summer. But the JOC inched toward participation by agreeing to discuss a proposal by JOC chairman Katsuji Shibata that a limited delegation be sent.

Shibata told a JOC general assembly session that the lack of governmental funds would permit participation by only Japan's legitimate medal prospects, provided the athletic federations pay their own way.

The JOC will meet with Japan's 22 sports federations Friday to discuss the proposal and to determine to what degree the size of the delegation can be pared. On Saturday, another general meeting will be held to make a final decision.

When West Germany opted to boycott earlier this week, it was seen as the catalyst for moving other non-committed U.S. allies toward non-participation. Besides Japan, Australia and Israel still have to make decisions.

The Australian government today applied last-minute pressure on the Australian Olympic Federation to annnounce a boycott decision Friday.

"This is something which will have implications for the future of this nation and for all the people of this nation," a government spokesman said.

There were angry voices raised in West Germany because of its Olympic committee's pro-boycott decision. The anticipated defection of other European countries to the pro-boycott side has not materialized.

"Now we are Olympic dummies," proclaimed a Bonn afternoon paper.

"The governnment made a mistake," said West German committee president Willi Daume. "Now we are isolated in Europe."

More than 50 countries have decided not to attend the Moscow Games. The latest non-participant, the Bahamas, said it would join the U.S.-sponsored boycott, a policy formed in protest of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

With this significant number of countries boycotting the Olympics, the Soviet Union made a unique offer Wednesday to Colombia to ensure that country's participation in the Games.

Colombia's participation was in doubt because of a lack of funds, but Moscow has agreed to fly Colombia's 34-member contingent of athletes, coaches and aides to the Games from Mexico.

Failure, say Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — The main sports newspaper in the Soviet Union said today that the U.S.-led drive to boycott the Summer Olympics has failed.

"The sports public of the planet has come out in defence of Olympic ideals, in support of the Olympic movement," said a commentary in the daily Sovietsky Sport.

However, it asserted that in some countries whose national Olympic committees have come out against the boycott, heavy financial pressure is being exerted in an effort to reduce the number of athletes going to Moscow.

B.C. golfer top qualifier

ASHBURN, Ont. (CP) — Ray Stewart of Vancouver led a group of six golfers, who earned their Canadian tournament cards after a three-rounds qualifying competition ended Wednesday at the Thunderbird Golf Club.

Stewart was 73-74-73 — 220 for the three rounds.

Bernie Starchuk of Oakville, Ont. (221), Toronto's Peter Turner (222), Paul Henrick of Brampton, Ont. (228), Kelly Murray of Vancouver (228) and Tony Simon of Toronto (232) were the other qualifiers.

Bruce Heuken of Kelowna and Gord Wray of Burnaby were among those who missed out.

Bolton posts victory

Marilyn Bolton struck out 13 batters Wednesday while pitching Bemister's Welding to a 4-1 Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's Softball League victory over McDonald's Furniture at Hyacinth Park.

In another game, New York-New York and Butler Brothers tied 3-3.

It was Bolton's fifth victory of the season.

Mavis Underwood yielded only five hits while pitching for Butlers and aided her own cause with two hits in three trips to the plate. Nancy McLaughlin pitched a six-hitter for New York-New York while clubmate Heather Knight went two-for-three.

In the Macdonald Men's League, Ben Szumack and Dave Chewpoy hit home runs to lead Coast Projects to a 6-1 decision over James Bay Inn while Rick Denman smacked a homer as Saints blasted Labatts 14-1 at Macdonald Park.

Bellies bad but victors

COQUITLAM (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies received almost triple the number of penalty minutes as Coquitlam, but still managed to trounce the Adanacs 15-8 in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game Wednesday night.

Salmonbellies were assessed 92 of the 124 minutes in penalties.

Rob Dalzell, Paul Kirkpatrick, Lloyd Symons, John Davies and Tim Oiom had two goals each for New Westminster. Tony Vendresco led Coquitlam with three goals.

Duncan sets pace

EDMONTON (CP) — A two-run single by former-Victoria player Pete Duncan in the fifth inning led Red Deer Diplomats to a 4-1 victory over Edmonton Langes in a Western Major Fastball League game Wednesday night.

Southend tops Saanich

Tom Woods fired five goals and assisted on one other to spark Southend Products to a 12-7 victory over Saanich in an intermediate "B" lacrosse game Wednesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Dave Cadwallader added three goals to the Southend total.

Anderson sizzles

Dave Anderson, a former Vancouver Island Open finalist, fired a brilliant, seven-under-par 64 to break the unofficial course record at Victoria Golf Club on Tuesday.

Playing in the regular men's night competition, Anderson hit all 18 greens in regulation and recorded seven birdies and 11 pars.

It is the best score recorded at the Oak Bay layout since the seventh hole was reconstructed to a par four instead of three. The "old course" record was 63, shared by George Bigelow and Doug Munro.

Munro happened to be playing in the foursome with Anderson Tuesday.

Victoria West rivals include five ex-pros

Although a few of his charges have tangled with their next opponents, Victoria West coach Bob English confesses he has "never seen them play at all."

Wests tackle Vancouver Umberto-Columbus in the Provincial Cup soecer final at 2:15 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

The winner of the match will represent the province in the Western Canada regional playdowns at Saskatoon, Aug. 22-24. The Western Canada champion then advances to the Canadian final for the Labatts Challenge Cup in Halifax, Sept. 13-15.

Victoria West, which also collected the national crown in 1976, is the defending British Columbia and Canadian champion.

Vancouver will be striving for its fifth Provincial Cup title.

Saturday's rivals have clashed in two previous title duels. Vic West won 1-0 during 1976 in Victoria and the Vancouver squad earned a 2-1 decision the following year in Swangard Stadium.

Wests are reported to be smaller and younger but with an edge in speed.

Columbus, on the other hand, has a wealth of experience. They include five ex-professionals — Sergio Zanatta, Ken Whitehead, Glen Johnson, Daryl Samson and Peter Greco — in the lineup.

Unfortunately for Columbus, Zanatta is nursing a sore knee and is considered a doubtful starter while coach Gino Vazzoler has to work and will definitely miss the match.

"It's certainly a big challenge to us," said English. "We'll be relying on what we normally go with — teamwork."

English explained he felt this was the biggest match his team has faced in "a couple of years" and has staged several extra workouts as a fine tuneup for the match.

"We're just concentrating on what we do well — and see how far it takes us," he explained.

On the other side of the coin, Vazzoler said his club's aim was just to go all out and rely heavily on their experience to carry the play.

This type of tactic gave Columbus a 13-1-4 record and the B.C. League title this season as well as a 3-0 record in post-season play.

"We're an attacking type of team," said Vazzoler. "We're certainly not going to go to Victoria to play defensively — it'll be an all-out attack."

Body contact removed

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadian youngsters aged 12 and under will no longer have to worry about bruising body checks with the approval Wednesday of a new rule eliminating such bodily contact for peewee players by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The rule becomes effective immediately.

As part of rule changes adopted by the association, CAHA executive-director Hal Lewis told reporters the body also decided on a pilot project for the atom level and below at each branch across the country to implement new rules which would abandon use of blue lines to reduce stoppages in play.

When a stoppage did occur, Lewis said the puck would simply be turned over to the other team.

He said the idea behind the minor rule changes, to be included in an addendum to current minor hockey rules, is to promote development of skills and "to give the kids a greater opportunity to skate."

A completely new rule book for minor hockey is part of the association's five-year plan which was also approved Wednesday.

In its preamble to the five-year plan, the CAHA states: "The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association believes that every person in Canada who wants to play hockey should have the opportunity to do so . . . at his level of skill and level of interest."

The preamble also says the association "recognizes that hockey is a major influence on its participants and on Canadian society, and believes that this influence should be a positive one both on the society and on the individual."

The report outlining the five-year plan and released Tuesday, contains the recommendations of the Canadian Hockey Review.

Lewis said the changes approved Wednesday would also mean more frequent shift changes to allow all players equal ice time. He said youngsters currently only actually skate for about 30 seconds during a two-minute shift.

The association also approved recommendations calling for smaller ice surfaces for young hockey players and lighter pucks.

As well, the CAHA agreed to enter into an affiliation with the Canadian Colleges Athletic Association and proposed a national insurance plan to cover all minor hockey players.

Association president Murray Costello said the affiliation will be the closest the CAHA will have with any scholastic organization.

Volcano wipes out race

Six Victoria drivers from the Victoria Motor Sports Club will have an unexpected weekend off — thanks to the eruption of Mount St. Helens in Washington State.

The sixth race of the International Conference of Sports Car Clubs season, scheduled for this weekend in Spokane, has been cancelled because of an accumulation of ash on the track.

Ford the only totally-new full-size Pickup manufactured in North America

Ford, the sales leader in trucks for the 70's, now leads the way into the 80's with the only re-designed pickups introduced this year.

These all-new pickups are still the "Built Ford Tough" trucks they've always been. But now, after years of research and over a million miles of testing, they feature some of the latest advancements in the pickup category.

Close attention to efficient design, for instance, has improved the aerodynamics. So these pickups slide through air at highway speeds with up to 13% less wind drag than 1979 models. The result: greater fuel efficiency.

Whether on the job, or out on the town you'll enjoy the greater level of comfort and convenience that's characteristic of these new 1980 Ford pickups. Careful placement of controls and instruments keep everything close at hand, while the full-foam seats (standard) make the ride more enjoyable.

And, with new handling features combined with Ford's Twin-I-Beam front suspension, these pickups are a great way to rough it–without getting roughed up.

New corrosion protection features standard with Ford's all-new Pickups.

This year, Ford has added new corrosion protection features to an already extensive use of galvanized and pre-coated steel, zinc-rich primers, vinyl sealer and aluminum wax coatings.

The new Ford pickups now have the added protection of:

Full, tub-type polypropylene front fender liners that can't corrode. (Chevy's front fender liners are metal).

Larger rear splash shields that reduce wheel splash to protect the rear and underside of the pickup box. (Not available on Chevy pickups).

Re-designed galvanized steel rocker panels to provide protection of door panels from flying dirt and gravel.

Both Ford and Chevy use double wall construction in the hood, cab roof, doors, tailgate and pickup box, but...

On top of all-welded construction, Ford pickups boxes have coved corners with inner side walls, inner portion of stake pockets and wheelhousings formed from a single steel stamping, more than Chevy.

Chevy's pickup box, on the other hand, continues to be made up of many more pieces. Both the individual stake pockets and wheelwells have more seams than the Ford pickup box. So, there are more places on a Chevy pickup where moisture can collect and corrosion can begin. Chevy's box is also bolted together from the underside with more than 70 separate bolts.

Compare
FORD
CHEVY
and see what Ford offers.

Ford has the only completely re-designed full-size pickups for the 80's.

Pickups with:

- The best fuel economy ratings of any North American built full-size 6 or 8 cylinder pickup.
- More payload than Chevy per comparable G.V.W.R. (up to 401 pounds more).
- Proven, tough, truck type Twin-I-Beam front suspension.
- An all-welded box with coved corners and fewer joints and seams. Reduces the places where corrosive moisture or dirt can collect.
- Shorter turning diameter–more than 3 feet tighter than Chevy.
- A high level of standard features.
- New corrosion protection measures.
- Improved ride and handling characteristics.

Built Ford Tough

Some items illustrated are extra cost options

Ford Pickups are designed to ride and handle well.

New Steering Geometry: Ford has lowered the steering ratios on the new pickups so there's quicker steering response for less hand-over-hand turns.

Shorter Turning Diameter: To improve maneuverability, these new pickups have a turning diameter that's now three feet less than Chevy.

Rubber-Isolated Front Coil Springs: An additional pad on the front springs cushions contact with the axle and reduces sound, vibration and minor road shocks.

Computer-Selected Front and Rear Springs: By matching the spring rates to load requirements, the F-100 and F-150 4 x 2 models offer a smoother ride under a variety of load conditions.

P-Metric Radial Ply Tires: Now standard on the F-100 and F-150 4 x 2 models, these tires reduce roll resistance to increase fuel efficiency. Other advantages include prolonged tire life and better contact with the road surface when cornering.

Divers retiring

TORONTO (CP) — Three veterans of the Canadian national diving team said this week the 1980 Canadian national diving championships were their last.

The nationals, which finished up at the Etobicoke Olympium, also were noteable in that they marked the near-end of another diving career and the start of another.

Toronto natives Janet Nutter and Scott Cranham, and Ken Armstrong of Ingersoll, Ont., announced that this year's championship was their last trip to the nationals. Cranham, 25, and Armstrong, 26, both plan to become coaches while Nutter, 27, will be work with the Canadian Amateur Diving Association (CADA) in an advisory capacity.

All three won gold medals. Nutter won the women's three-metre springboard event, Armstrong the men's 10-metre platform, and Cranham the men's three-metres.

Linda Cuthbert, 24, almost saw her 12-year diving career come to an end Saturday when she banged her head against the diving board while attempting a reverse, double somersault, off the three-metre board. Cuthbert, who suffered a concussion and a cut on the back of her head and not a cracked vertabrae as was feared by doctors, said she plans to dive competively again.

Debbie Fuller, 13, of Montreal, made an momentous debut at the nationals with a second place finish in the women's 10-metre platform event. The 5-foot-2, 105-pounder gave gold medallist Elizabeth MacKay of Ste. Foy, Que., a tough battle, finishing only eight points behind.

U.S., Australians on collision course

BERLIN (AP) — Defending champion United States, led by Chris Evert Lloyd and Tracy Austin, and Australia won their way into the quarter-finals of the women's Federation Cup of tennis on Wednesday.

In consolation play, Canada beat Mexico 3-0 to advance to the consolation quarter-finals.

Lloyd beat New Zealander Brenda Perry 6-1, 1-0 (forfeit) and Austin brushed aside Judy Chaloner 6-1, 6-1 for the singles victories. Rosemary Casals and Kathy Jordan took the doubles against Chaloner and Christine Newton 6-2, 7-5 for a 3-0 win.

Dianne Fromholtz and Wendy Turnball provided the singles victories that gave Australia an unbeatable lead over Indonesia.

Britain ran into unexpected trouble with Argentina. Britain went ahead 1-0 on Sue Barker's 5-7, 7-5, 6-2 victory against Adriana Villagran, but Ivanna Madruga evened the score with a 7-5, 7-5 victory against Britain's No. 1 player, Virginia Wade.

The British girls finally clinched a quarter-final berth by beating Madruga and Villigran 5-7, 6-2, 6-4 in the doubles.

Britain now meets West Germans nipped Spain 2-1. In other second-round matches, Romania beat Switzerland 2-0 and Czechoslovakia beat Yugoslavia 2-0.

Coe not ready yet to tangle with Ovett

LONDON (AP) — Sebastian Coe, triple world record holder, won his first race of the season Wednesday night but his time of one minute 47.5 seconds for the 800 metres was much slower than his world mark of last year.

Coe won his event easily at an international meet at Crystal Palace. Andras Paroczai of Hungary was second in 1:48.1 and Dave Warren of Britain was third in 1:48.5.

Coe switched from the mile to the 800 metres at short notice to avoid a confrontation with countryman Steve Ovett, his arch-rival over both distances.

"My season, and I presume Steve Ovett's, is geared to the Olympic Games," Coe said. "I am not at this moment attuned to run a race at near-record schedule which might be misleading, not to say injurious for one or both of us."

Last year, Coe set world records of 1:42.4 for the 800 metres, 3:32.03 for the 1,500 metres, and 3:49.0 for the mile.

Merchant mistakes help Lumberworld

Five infield errors cost Victoria Merchants the game Wednesday.

Lumberworld of the Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior Baseball League utilized the miscues to score six unearned runs and trip the Pacific Coast Junior League club 7-4 in an interlocking contest at Lambrick Park.

Brian Meadmore picked up his first pitching victory of the season with a six-hitter.

Ken Ball had three hits in four trips to the plate and scored one run for Lumberworld, which counts the victory in league standings.

TOP CHOICE SIGNED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins of the National Football League have signed their No. 1 draft choice, wide receiver Art Monk of Syracuse, to a series of six one-year contracts.

Punter picks six for bonanza of $305,000

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A hot dog stand owner, who came to the United States from Greece 10 years ago, claimed the $305,000 Wednesday that he won at Hollywood Park for picking six consecutive winners in the HollySweeps.

Pete Isianos, a resident of San Gabriel who owns a hot dog stand in South Pasadena said he didn't find out until Monday that his $2 ticket was the only one correctly naming six winners during Sunday's thoroughbred racing. He got his cheque Wednesday because Hollywood Park is closed Monday and Tuesday.

"I have only one day off and my wife wanted me to do something with her Sunday," said Isianos, 36. "I told her I felt lucky and wanted to go to the track and make my bets and I would return.

"We left after playing pick six and watching the first race and I went to sleep without knowing I had won."

One of Isianos's five brothers ticked off the six race winners for him the next day, and Isianos said, ". . . I went a little crazy and just stopped in the middle of the road."

Isianos said he bet a total of $62 in the HollySweeps, going with horses he liked in two races and picking longshots in the other four.

Eintracht takes UEFA Cup

Times News Services

FRANKFURT — Eintracht Frankfurt beat Borussia Moenchengladbach 1-0 in their second leg all-West German UEFA Cup final Wednesday to win the European trophy.

Fred Schaub scored the goal which gave Eintracht victory on away goals scored.

Borussia had won the first leg game 3-2.

Schaub, 19, a former youth internatonal, had been on the field as a substitute for just four minutes when he got the ball during a melee at the edge of the Borussia penalty area and beat goalkeeper Wolfgang Kneibs in the 81st minute.

Frankfurt goalkeeper Juergen Pahl had made two successive close-range saves just six minutes earlier.

The match was played before a capacity crowd of 64,000.

Meanwhile in Glasgow, Willie Miller scored his first international goal to give Scotland a 1-0 victory over Wales and an outside chance of capturing the British championship.

The goal came in the 24th minute when Archie Gemmill's through-pass was touched-on by Kenny Dalgleish and Miller steered his shot past goalie Dai Davies from 10 yards.

In Vienna, Argentina finished its three-game European soccer tour Wednesday with a crushing 5-1 win over Austria.

The World Cup holders, in breathtaking form, were three goals up in the first 15 minutes and Austria's goal in the 20th minute was only a token gesture.

Living up to all expectations, 19-year-old Argentine Diego Mardona produced a brilliant display, scoring three goals and leaving the Austrian defence battered and bewildered.

Princesses' debut a win — or a loss

By JAKE BANKY

Depending on which set of figures you look at, the debut of the two-Princess service between Victoria and Seattle was either a winner or a loser.

The NDP says the Victoria Princess and the Flying Princess jetfoil between them carried just 1,782 passengers on the Victoria Day weekend, compared with 4,157 on the Princess Marguerite on the same three-day weekend last year.

"That's a 57-per-cent decrease," says NDP critic Bob Skelly.

But Transportation Minister Alex Fraser issued a different set of figures Wednesday.

Fraser's figures show 3,424 passengers carried from Seattle to Victoria aboard the two Princesses in the first six days of the service this year, compared with 2,406 passengers carried by the Marguerite in the first six days last year.

"We have experienced a 42-per-cent increase," Fraser said.

The disparity between the two sets of statistics is accounted for by the fact that the Marguerite was put into service three weeks early last year, to help in the traffic emergency caused by the washout of the Hood Canal bridge in Washington state.

That means Fraser's figure for the first six days of the 1979 season does not include the usually heavy traffic of the Victoria Day holiday weekend.

Socred and NDP MLAs shouted insults at each other in the legislature Wednesday in a five-minute outbreak of parliamentary mayhem sparked by the conflicting sets of figures.

Victoria NDP MLA Gordon Hanson drew cheers from his side when he asked Fraser to confirm that the Victoria Princess sailed from Victoria last Saturday carrying 83 crewmen and only 72 passengers.

Industry Minister Don Phillips caused an eruption of anti-NDP abuse when he shouted: "You guys want it (the service) to fail, don't you."

Outside the house, Phillips blamed the decline in holiday weekend traffic on a different eruption.

"The misadjustment of travel caused by the volcano (Mt. Saint Helens, Wash.) is temporary," he said.

Fraser agreed that comparing his figures with Skelly's is like comparing apples and oranges.

Nevertheless, he insisted the new Victoria-Seattle service is a huge success, despite the "negative Nellies".

Skelly said there is no use arguing over which set of figures more accurately reflects the situation. He expects that as the season progresses, the traffic statistics will prove his point — that the Marguerite was far more popular than the two-Princess service will ever be.

If American tourists want to travel on a modern vessel designed to transport passengers and cars quickly, they might as well take one of the Washington State ferries, he said.

$315M spending cleared

The B.C. government formally proclaimed into law Wednesday four bills, including two which outline spending $315.2 million of surplus 1979-80 funds.

The bills proclaimed were the Corporation Capital Tax Amendment Act, the Special Purpose Appropriation Act, the Forest and Range Resource Fund Act and the Trade and Convention Centre Act.

The appropriation act, authorizing the payment of $168.6 million, was criticized by the NDP because it appropriates money to 11 individual ministries.

The act provides for 17 different expenditures including $1 million to the science ministry for research; $2.65 million for a refugee settlement act; $6.5 million to the lands ministry for accelerated park development and $4.5 million to the labor ministry for a youth employment and training program.

Finance critic Dave Stupich (NDP—Nanaimo) said the fact the money is allocated for specific purposes indicates a lack of trust in the ministers' ability to spend funds, and insisted the opposition should have been given a chance to question the ministers individually, rather than just Finance Minister Hugh Curtis who introduced the bill.

The Forest Fund Act authorizes $146.6 million for the management of forest, range and recreation resources, while the Trade and Convention Centre Act provides the authority for entering into agreements for the construction of such centres in Victoria and Vancouver.

Blunder 'to cost millions'

Former health minister Dennis Cocke says B.C. taxpayers will be out millions of dollars because of a provincial government blunder.

Operating costs for the acute-care hospital built by the government at the University of B.C. will be three times the usual cost for similar hospitals, Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), said Wednesday.

He said the proposed operating budget will be $600 a patient a day compared with $200 a patient a day at Vancouver General Hospital.

Mair tells critical MDs fee talks will suffer

Statements made by the out-going president of the B.C. Medical Association are only going to hamper delicate negotiations between the provincial government and B.C. doctors for a 1981 fee schedule, Health Minister Rafe Mair warned Wednesday.

Mair was upset about remarks contained in the association's journal in which Dr. Mel Petreman said doctors should go for broke in the negotiations with what he termed a weak Social Credit government.

"It was misleading, it was impolite and badly timed and I am angry," Mair said.

"However, it's not going to upset my position as a responsible health minister going into negotiations with the doctors later this year.

"It has made me very angry, upset and hurt because I have worked very hard to establish a good relationship not only with Dr. Petreman but with the BCMA."

Mair said he will continue to try to deal fairly with the medical profession in the negotiations slated to start in November.

The minister was upset with the doctors earlier this year when they suggested they might begin billing patients for part of their services if they did not get a good deal with the government. The doctors said they want medicare billings to yield doctors an average $100,000 a year.

Mair said such statements are posturing on the part of the association and that the doctors had better be careful about judging public opinion on the issue.

Travel break set for June

Government House Leader Garde Gardom Wednesday officially announced the legislature will get a week off next month as cabinet ministers catch up on their out-of-province commitments.

The house will not sit for the week of June 8.

More than half the 20 cabinet members will travel on government business during the adjournment, Gardom said.

This is the second such recess called by the government this session. The house enjoyed a three-day adjournment last month while Premier Bill Bennett and a half dozen of his ministers attended the Western Premiers' Conference in Lethbridge.

These intermissions are the result of the narrow Socred majority in the house. The NDP will not agree to "pairing" of members. The Socreds won't take a chance on losing a vote when cabinet ministers are travelling.

Gardom would not confirm the possibility of another adjournment in July. "We have to deal with July when July comes," he said.

Any adjournment adds to the length of the session, which has accomplished very little since it opened Feb. 29. Most members have resigned themselves to sitting right through the summer.

Hydro retains pension index

The pension plans of 140,000 B.C. teachers and public servants soon will lose their automatic cost-of-living indexing but 9,000 Hydro workers will retain inflation-proof benefits.

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe last week introduced amendments to several civil servant pension plans which effectively place a limit of 7.5 to eight per cent on cost-of-living adjustments for those now receiving benefits.

He said the amendments were needed to cover a $1 billion shortage in long-term benefit commitments.

Under the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority Act, the government can alter pension provisions for Hydro employees but Wolfe did not include a change to that act in his list of amendments.

But 2,800 former Hydro bus drivers and office workers, employed since April 1 by the Urban Transit Authority, will be under the new limit because their pension credits will become part of the B.C. civil servants retirement plan later this year.

Flutter killing all-jazz radio

VANCOUVER (CP) — The plight of CJAZ, Vancouver's new 24-hour jazz FM radio station, is best summed up by an announcer from a rival station.

"They've got a good product, but that signal is going to kill them," said Bill Koehler, a broadcaster at the soft-rock FM station CFMI.

"When they first came on the air, I listened to them quite a bit. But I don't listen to them now. The signal wavers in and out and I can only get it in mono in New Westminster (south of Vancouver.)"

CJAZ managing director Tom Peacock says the problem is multipathing — radio signal distortion which causes mid-range and high frequencies to come across distorted and raspy.

Unless the 100,000-watt station gets approval from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications commission to erect a booster on the city's north shore, it stands to lose much of its audience.

Multipathing occurs when the signal, beamed from the station's transmitter on Salt Spring Island in the Georgia Strait, is bounced around between the southern ridge of the Lower Mainland and the North Shore hills.

The situation is worse in areas where the station hopes to attract its biggest audience — Kitsilano, central Vancouver and the concrete canyons of the West End.

The advantage of the Salt Spring site was that it allowed regional coverage. CJAZ can be tuned in on the east coast of Vancouver Island, in the Fraser Valley, the Whistler Mountain resort area and northern Washington state — but at the expense of the Vancouver core.

"The CBC establishes booster transmitters all the time," said Peacock. "In private radio, there have been low-power repeater transmitters away from the central coverage area, but the only case of a booster being installed was in Sherbrooke, Que."

Two weeks ago, the federal department of communications approved the North Shore booster, but the CRTC has yet to respond.

Artistically, Peacock is pleased with his product.

"Jazz is difficult to program because you have so many fractionalized concepts about what jazz is," he said. "Herbie Hancock may be jazz to one person, but not to the listener who likes New Orleans."

The number of young listeners the station attracted has been a surprise. When CJAZ began broadcasting March 1 it aimed itself at the 25-40 age group, but there appear to be a large number of 17 and 18-year-olds contributing to the 67,000-member audience.

Members of Vancouver's jazz community are generally complimentary toward the new station.

Gerry Vineberg, a Vancouver promoter and manager, says he is grateful for the airplay of a once-neglected music form.

"Prior to the birth of CJAZ, Vancouver had a grand total of 16 to 20 hours a week of jazz from the major radio stations and people really had to search to find those 16 hours," he said. "Now the music is getting out."

Ocean Falls switch delayed

Logging and sawmill operations at the soon-to-be closed Ocean Falls newsprint mill likely won't start until early next year — some five months behind schedule, the chairman of the B.C. Cellulose Corp. said Wednesday.

Ray Williston said the corporation will convert one of the mills' rooms to allow experimental logging and sawmilling of waste wood and timber large forestry companies considered uneconomical.

But Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie) believes that it could be closer to 12 months before the sawmill is opened, and said Williston and Premier Bill Bennett are guilty of a "cruel hoax" in their treatment of Ocean Falls employees.

Major reason behind the delay, said Williston, is that corporation and forests ministry personnel have had difficulty in finding timber, marked as economically unmerchantable, that they can use at Ocean Falls.

Cable merger merit stressed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The joining of the country's two largest cablevision companies would create a strong, national firm that would be a unifying force in Canada, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission was told Wednesday.

But corporate officials arguing before the federal agency on behalf of a proposal by Toronto-based Canadian Cablesystems Ltd. to take over Premier Communications Ltd. of Vancouver tempered their enthusiasm by saying that although their new company would be big, it wouldn't be too big.

Ted Rogers of Toronto, Canadian Cablesystems' chief executive officer, told the regulatory agency that the application for the $86.5-million deal was a vision of the future on the way to a "national electronic highway."

"We propose an east-west communications grid linking us together in a way that the railroads and transportation carriers never could," said Rogers.

Fish price terms near

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wage negotiations for shoreworkers and tendermen in the B.C. fishing industry are proceeding smoothly, despite the industry's proposed 25-cent-a-pound cut in the price paid for sockeye salmon, says Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

The Fisheries Association of B.C. has made an initial offer to the fishermen of 80 cents a pound, down from last year's $1.05.

However, Nichol says the two sides are near enough on wages for shoreworkers and tendermen to come to an over-all agreement.

Nichol disputes the industry's contention that sockeye prices must be cut because of diminishing markets and expected competition from the Alaska salmon fishery.

He said the domestic market with its protective tariffs, will furnish enough extra sales to handle a catch the industry is estimating at 20 million fish.

Kelowna driver killed

OYAMA (CP) — A Kelowna man was killed and another injured in a single-vehicle accident Tuesday night just south of this Okanagan community.

RCMP say Wilfred Joseph O'Brien, 23, was the driver of a car that went out of control and overturned. He was thrown from the vehicle.

Peter Quenby, 26, was taken to hospital in Vernon with undetermined injuries.

Trees planted by machine

KELOWNA (CP) — A Kelowna consulting firm is developing a mechanized tree-planting machine capable of planting 8,000 seedlings in an eight-hour shift.

Alan Moss, president of Alan Moss and Associates, Ltd., of Kelowna, told the city's chamber of commerce his $250,000 prototype should be ready for testing by September.

He said tree seedlings are placed into square plastic bullets which are placed into magazines on the planter. The operator moves the machine across the terrain and two guns, firing every three seconds, plant 40 seedlings a minute.

Lawyer again raked over ads

VANCOUVER (CP) — City lawyer Jack James and his views on lawyer advertising are in trouble with the B.C. Law Society for the second time in almost as many months.

Earlier this year, James was convicted by a benchers' committee of the law society of conduct unbecoming a society member because of a newspaper advertisement proclaiming his new Howe Street Law Shoppe and listing the prices he proposed to charge for his legal services.

The society ruled the advertising was slick and promotional and breached the law profession's standards of good taste and dignity. James was reprimanded and fined $1,000.

James now has been found guilty of conduct unbecoming a member of the law society for two letters containing Law Shoppe brochures he sent to real estate firms advertising his legal services. The firms were not clients of his at that time.

Following a hearing, a committee of benchers has held that James breached one of the law professions' canons of legal ethics which prohibits a lawyer from soliciting business by use of circulars.

Judge's probe of RCMP conducted by phone

VANCOUVER (CP) — The investigation by the B.C. Police Commission clearing members of the Fort St. John RCMP detachment of irregularities in internal investigation procedures was done by long distance telephone and one of the principals involved was not directly questioned.

Judge Roy McQueen, as chairman of the commission, was asked by Attorney-General Allan Williams to conduct the investigation after Dolores Schubert had contending that her letter to the attorney-general's department criticizing three RCMP constables was used by the officers' lawyer as partial grounds for a threatened libel suit.

The B.C. Police Act says that constables can hear the complaint against them but cannot see the written correspondence.

McQueen said Wednesday he interviewed the force commander by telephone from Vancouver, and the commander said he had not given the letter to the constables and had not passed it along to the constables' lawyer.

McQueen also said he was satisfied with the emphatic denial by the three constables that they did not see the letter and did not pass it on to their lawyer.

But he said he did not question the constables' lawyer, Brian Harrison, who said in April that he had seen the letter.

McQueen said he relied on information supplied by Staff-Sgt. Des Johnston, commander of the Fort St. John detachment, who said Harrison did not see the letter.

Neither Harrison nor the RCMP officers challenged published reports that one of the officers had shown Harrison a copy of the letter, but Wednesday, Harrison said: "In retrospect I believe that I did not see the letter. It certainly wasn't the letter that I had in here."

He said he had read notes supplied by the constables and mistook them for the letter when originally questioned by reporters.

Harrison said he was in the middle of another case when asked about the letter and this may have led him to make the mistake. He added that the libel suit would have needed more material to proceed with and he now has no direction to proceed with the case.

McQueen said he didn't question Harrison directly because Johnston had already done so and had said that Harrison now is claiming client-solicitor privilege.

Johnston said he could not comment on the matter as it, and other matters brought to light because of the publicity given to the Schubert case, is still under investigation by the internal investigation branch of the RCMP.

Polish actress Kaminska dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Polish actress Ida Kaminska, who was nominated for an Academy award for her portrayal of an aged Jewish shopkeeper in the movie The Shop on Main Street, died Wednesday of a heart ailment at the age of 80.

A veteran of the Yiddish stage, Miss Kaminska emigrated to the United States in 1968.

In 1946 she became the director, manager and star of the Jewish State Theatre of Poland — which she brought on tour to New York City in 1967 — and she attempted to establish a Yiddish repertory theatre after settling in New York.

Miss Kaminska won international fame for her performance in The Shop on Main Street, a 1965 Czechoslovakian film about an 80-year-old widowed shopkeeper whose deafness and senility prevented her from understanding what was happening to her and other Jews.

Actor's dilemma: getting right roles

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — An actor's greatest dilemma: to accept a role in a movie or TV series or to pass it by.

It can be a do or die decision.

An outstanding role, i.e., Dustin Hoffman's in Kramer vs. Kramer means millions of dollars in future earnings, not to mention Academy Awards.

Conversely, a poor role, i.e., George Segal's in The Last Married Couple in America, presages loss of future bargaining power and a dip in professional prestige.

A few stars fall into a special category where the actor himself is more important than any role. Currently, Burt Reynolds and Clint Eastwood find themselves in that rarified strata.

Many major stars prove time and again to be horrible judges of material — Marlon Brando and Jack Nicholson in Missouri Breaks, Paul Newman in Quintet, Gene Hackman in Bite The Bullet. The list is endless.

Richard Crenna, whose career has spanned radio, TV and movies, takes an oblique view of the never-ending perplexities of role selection. He's made good choices and bad over the years.

"Actors were born to be frustrated," he said, grinning.

"Even when an actor gets a terrific role, he's wondering why he didn't get the Academy Award part another actor is playing.

"In learning to deal with this kind of frustration the actor must face the fact that he goes through life always feeling he is deserving of something better than what he's actually playing."

The watchword for any actor, star or tyro, is to keep working, Crenna says.

Steve McQueen ditched movies for almost five years and has become almost unknown to the younger generation. His recent return in Tom Horn and The Hunter have not as yet set the world afire.

Robert Redford took a couple of years off after All The President's Men. It is thought his lengthy hiatus did nothing to help The Electric Horseman at the box office when he returned.

"Talk about the life of a moth," Crenna said. "The recognition factor in an actor's life is just as short. An actor must keep acting. In order to survive you accept what is offered.

"When someone asks me why I did such-and-such a picture, I say, 'Frankly, I wanted to play Kramer but they gave it to Hoffman.'

"You can't really tell if a picture would have succeeded with you in it or not. Who can say if another actor in the Kramer role would have succeeded as well as Hoffman did?"

Selectivity in roles is the province of the rich and independent actor. Crenna, who is both, has discovered selectivity is a tricky business.

"I was much more selective when I was younger," he said. "Looking back, I can't determine whether my decisions helped or hurt my career.

"I suppose the amount of money you have in the bank determines how astute you can afford to be. If you own your car and house, you can be more selective. It's all in direct proportion to how long you can eat.

"Usually selectivity comes into play at the beginning of a career or at the end of a long career when you've become a superstar — every decision is then frought with significance.

"I think it's terrible that Bob Redford and Warren Beatty make only one picture every two or three years. What a waste of talent.

"If acting is your craft, I don't think you can sit back and wait for the right part. But maybe if I earned $3 million a picture, I'd sit back, too.

"On the other hand, Burt Reynolds never stops working. His movies aren't something you would put in a time capsule, but he's visible and approachable. He's doing what he's good at all the time.

"When you work as often as Burt does, you can afford to make an unsuccessful picture. But if you make only one movie every three years and it's a turkey, then you're in trouble.

"Reynolds could star in one turkey out of three and people would put up with the turkey, even make it a hit."

Crenna, who switches back and forth from feature films to TV, currently is starring in Joshua's World, playing a country doctor in the pilot film of a prospective series which Earl (The Waltons) Hamner produced.

He's also the star of Fugitive Family, a TV movie with Diane Baker and Ronnie Cox, to be televised later this month.

Actor Crenna also directs television movies and series and is especially sought after for pilot films.

"As a director I'm a lot more selective," he said. "Directing is more difficult and time consuming that performing.

"Unlike acting, the director doesn't need high public visibility. All that's required is visibility among people in the industry who hire him. Perhaps that's why directors usually have longer life spans than actors — or moths."

Return to acting after career as mother

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For years Joan Plowright, one of England's most acclaimed actresses, subordinated her career to roles as wife of Sir Laurence Olivier and mother of their three children.

That has been changing. Earlier this season she starred on Broadway in Filumena, directed by her husband. Now she is acting in her first Hollywood film, a new version of The Diary of Anne Frank which 20th Century-Fox is producing for NBC. Melissa Gilbert of Little House on the Prairie plays Anne, and Maximilian Schell and Miss Plowright are her parents.

Why the revival in her acting career?

"At last my youngsters are past their '11-plusses,'" the actress explained. "What is an 11-plus? That is the period that all English children face when they are 11 or over — when they pass their elementary studies and are judged to determine their further education. It is a very important time, because their futures can be determined by what schools they get into."

The Olivier children are Julie-Kate, 13, Tamsin, 17, and Richard, 18. Richard is enrolling at UCLA with the goal of film studies, and his mother has been spending her spare time furnishing his Westwood apartment. Olivier, who recently completed The Jazz Singer with Neil Diamond, has gone to Venice to finish a British TV film of Brideshead Revisited.

Does Miss Plowright regret losing important years of her career?

"No," she replied immediately. "If I hadn't been home I wouldn't have had the children and I wouldn't have been a mother to them. I certainly wouldn't like to have the children write about me the way Joan Crawford's daughter did about her."

Joan Plowright was schooled in the classics, first as a scholarship winner then member of the Old Vic Company. She did modern plays for the English Stage Company at the Royal Court and made her New York debut in 1958 with The Entertainer, starring Olivier.

The Oliviers, married in 1961, have been through good times, especially his prolific 10 years as director of the National Theater, and bad — his series of grave illnesses. He has amazed everyone by going from one movie to another, many in far-off locations under trying circumstances.

17-1 vote for centre on Helmcken road

The Capital Regional District's hospital and health planning commission on Wednesday reaffirmed its intention to have a single regional facility for pediatrics and obstetrics at the new Helmcken Road hospital.

The decision was made despite opposition from Oak Bay, Saanich, Saanich Peninsula municipal councils and Indian bands.

After receiving a report from its joint advisory committee made up of physicians and hospital administrators, the commission voted 17-1, with two abstensions, to recommend all obstetrical services in the regional district, with the exception of the Gulf Islands, be located in the Helmcken Road hospital.

A group of doctors led by Dr. G. Scott Wallace has been lobbying municipal councils over the past month urging that obstetric services should also be maintained at the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Physicians at the Saanich Peninsula Hospital have also opposed elimination of obstetric services at that hospital.

"I don't think this commission can overlook that," RJH board chairman Eric Simmons said Wednesday.

He said in spite of the fact that various committees have voted in favor of a single regional unit, many members of the public and physicians want obstetrical care maintained in other facilities.

Saanich and Oak Bay councils alone, he said, represent about 95,000 people in the regional district.

Commission chairman Charles Perkins said decision-making lies with the commission and cannot be placed anywhere else.

"The best means of convincing the public that it is a good decision will be time," he added.

"The public will back the commission's decision as the regional facility proved its advantages."

UVic workshops focus on human service work

The changing focus of human service work in B.C. will be explored in 31 workshops being offered in the second annual Beyond Caring conference on children and families opening Friday at University of Victoria.

Sponsors are B.C. Child Care Services Association and UVic school of child care and subjects are designed to interest child care and social workers, teachers, nurses, psychologists, parents, volunteers and doctors.

The object is to provide a forum for dialogue with professionals, expand knowledge of issues and treatment, and to develop personal skills.

Subjects in the 2½ days of workshops include child abuse and neglect, separation and grief, art therapy, professional supervision and management, children of alcoholics, single parents, working with handicapped, and growth games as an aid to communication.

Most are three-hour sessions but 11 last all day. Discussion leaders are largely from professional ranks, including private and government agencies, and universities.

Registration opens today at 6 p.m. with a no-host bar in the student union building.

Scattering sunshine

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

GOT $44,000 TO SPARE? That's the price tag on this "Super-Corvette" built by California Custom Coach of Pasadena, Calif. The four-door dandy gets 16 miles a gallon on the highway and inside it's as plush as a Rolls Royce. The manufacturer plans to turn out about 100 such cars a year.

Iran scolded by U.S. for ignoring appeals

Times News Services

The United States rebuked Iran on Wednesday for ignoring international appeals for the safe release of the 53 American hostages who spent their 200th day in captivity.

"Every day is one day too long," said state department spokesman Hodding Carter.

"It's an additional day in which Iran continues to violate international law and the basic precepts of both human rights and diplomatic behavior."

The World Court at The Hague said it will rule Saturday on a U.S. claim that Iran should not only release the hostages but also pay damages for seizing them and prosecute those responsible.

Meanwhile, U.S. allies in Europe continue to be split on the issue of economic sanctions against Iran.

Britain's decision at the beginning of the week not to impose retroactive sanctions on Iran split the nine-nation European Economic Community (EEC) on Wednesday and apparently weakened Western efforts to secure the release of the hostages.

Despite some grumbling, the eight other EEC members said they will stand by their pledge to ban trade contracts concluded since Nov. 4, the day the hostages were seized.

All nine countries had agreed at a foreign ministers' meeting Sunday in Naples to impose retroactive sanctions. But Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, faced by a revolt among ruling Conservative party legislators, reversed itself Monday and said it will bar only new trade.

The new Swedish ambassador to Tehran, Goran Bundy, said today it's "business as usual" with Iran as far as his country is concerned, however, a special committee of the Japanese Cabinet recommended today that Tokyo support EEC sanctions.

In other developments:

— Saboteurs reportedly blew up an oil pipeline at Chagha Hamman in southwest Iran Wednesday night in the second raid in the area in the past 24 hours.

— Nine more convicted drug smugglers were executed in Iran today, bringing to 29 the number of people shot for drug offences in the last two days.

— Moussavi Garmaroudi, press aide to Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, said Anglicans in Iran are not threatened.

He was reacting to an request from the World Council of Churches (WCC) in Geneva that Bani-Sadr protect the lives of members of the Episcopal Church of Iran, saying church members have been subjected to "threats and violent acts."

Tampa race unrest as Miami quietens

Times News Services

TAMPA, Fla. — A sniper wounded a policeman during an outbreak of racial unrest in Tampa Wednesday night and an anonymous bomb threat shut down the remaining span of the Sunshine Skyway Bridge.

After the anonymous bomb threat, the bridge was closed at 8:56 p.m. Wednesday and remained closed this morning.

The span carrying the two southbound lanes of the Sunshine Skyway was closed May 9 when the phosphate freighter Summit Venture struck a bridge support, plunging 35 people to their death. The two northbound lanes were reopened to two-way traffic the following week.

Tampa policeman R.H. Cooke, 28, was wounded in the cheek by a sniper during one of a number of sporadic outbreaks of rock throwing and car burning in a predominantly black neighborhood.

Meanwhile, Miami schools reopened today and liquor sales resumed for the first time since the outbreak of the nation's worst rioting in 10 years, but bans on firearms and gasoline sales remained.

The FBI was investigating death threats against the four white ex-policemen acquitted in the beating death of a black man.

In Wrightsville, Ga., a shotgun blast fired from a passing car wounded a black man active in civil rights demonstrations the past several weeks. Cesare "Chip" Howell, 22, underwent surgery to remove shotgun pellets from his side.

Coast guard cuts boatlift to a trickle

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The wave of Cuban refugees arriving on the Freedom Flotilla appears to be ebbing, and officials believe the number of boats at Cuba's port of Mariel finally is dwindling.

"We do see a faint glimmer at the end of the tunnel," said Cmdr. Samuel Dennis, chief of U.S. Coast Guard operations in Key West.

Only 28 boats with 1,150 passengers arrived here Wednesday, and officials believe there may be only 500 boats in Cuba.

Nearly 68,000 Cuban refugees have arrived here in the 33 days of the boatlift.

A string of coast guard cutters blockaded the Straits of Florida to stop boats trying to leave for Cuba, but four small boats slipped through Tuesday while cutters were busy on rescue missions, Dennis said. Radio Havana reported that 10 boats slipped through.

Two Cuban-American representatives, meanwhile, were in Washington trying to win permission to continue the boatlift.

Laser aimed at satellites?

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carter administration has an authoritative intelligence report that the Soviet Union has developed a ground-based laser weapon that could be used to destroy U.S. space satellites, the New York Times reported today.

The intelligence estimate also reports that the Russians are working an orbiting anti-satellite laser weapon.

Giscard takes flak over Soviet talks

Times News Services

PARIS — In a deepening split with the United States, France angrily rejected criticism by U.S. State Secretary Edmund Muskie and vowed Wednesday to maintain contact with the Soviet Union without "prior approval" from Washington.

However, there was mounting displeasure expressed in the Western European press and within France itself over French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's summit meeting Monday in Warsaw, Poland, with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet, defending the summit in a speech to the National Assembly, acknowledged that it had left Paris and Moscow "far apart" over the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

He said it would be a "grave political error" to isolate the Soviet Union diplomatically and rebutted Muskie's criticism of France for not consulting its allies before the summit.

"Why is it that what is judged useful and necessary when it involves Mr. Muskie and Mr. Gromyko becomes damaging and unnecessary when it involves the president of the French republic and Mr. Brezhnev?" he asked.

This referred to Muskie's characterization as "useful and necessary" his meeting in Vienna, Austria, last week with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Saying dialogue must not be "reserved exclusively to the superpowers," Francois-Poncet insisted.

In Washington, U.S. state department officials, who asked not to be identified, said Francois-Poncet did not address himself to Muskie's complaint Tuesday about the lack of adequate prior consultation by the French government.

Meanwhile, the 39-country Islamic Conference formed a three-member committee today — including Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh — to work for a withdrawal of Russian forces from Afghanistan and unanimously condemned the U.S. for last month's unsuccessful attempt to rescue the 53 American hostages in Iran.

The Afghan crisis committee was authorized to take any initiative it considered necessary including visits to the Soviet Union and Afghanistan, conference spokesman Kacem Zaheri said.

The Islamic Conference stand on Soviet actions in Afghanistan was considerably milder than its members' sharp condemnation in an emergency session in January.

"If we really want to solve the Afghanistan problem," said Ghotbzadeh, "there must be talks with the parties concerned: the Soviet Union, Pakistan, Iran, Kabul and the Afghan rebels."

"I don't want to talk with the Babrak Karmal regime," said Ghotbzadeh speaking to American reporters, "but you've done it with the Vietcong."

Starving hoards

gardening
jack beastall

Every year vegetable gardens are started on ground which has never before been tilled, or has been idle for many years. The would-be gardeners are seldom happy with the results because most of the vegetables are found to be damaged by insects.

There is nothing unusual about this, in fact a few minutes thought will show it was a condition to be expected.

Any piece of soil that has not been interfered with will be in perfect balance. The natural population of each insect present has been strictly controlled by predators and the available food supply. Wild plants will suit the soil conditions, each taking its requirements and returning its quota of discarded foliage and stems to be converted to soil for future generations by the various micro-organisms within the soil. The whole unit has become a self-supporting community.

When the gardener tilled this mass of soil the effects were comparable to a devastating earthquake in a highly populated area. The natural homes of the various insects were destroyed together with their supply of food and moisture.

The natural food supply is then replaced by plants which have been bred especially for human food, most of which no longer retain the natural built-in resistance to insects and diseases.

In many instances the plants from which the food crops have been developed originated in various parts of the world and were never subjected to the same pests and diseases, therefore never developed a built-in control to these species.

So we end up with the food growth, which is common in a well-balanced virgin soil, being devoured by hordes of displaced, starving insects.

Fortunately for the gardener, this condition will not continue. Some insect populations will die out entirely, others will move to adjoining areas where natural food is available.

There could remain an undesirable population which thrives better on food crops than on the wild food of the area. This the gardener will discover in the following year, after which control measures can be taken if necessary.

It is not advisable to rush to controls which would conceivably further upset the natural balance, just because of damage done last year. There is more wisdom in waiting to see if the problem is repeated.

At the same time, normal preventive and sanitary measures should be practised.

Sow thinly to eliminate the need for later thinning. Keep fertilizer applications to a minimum to prevent soft growth which is attractive to growths that are infested with aphids; they never attack plants with tough skin and hardened cells. Balance watering with growth to keep the plant cells stiff. Make small sowings at frequent intervals, and use the plants before insect damage is severe.

And finally, at all stages, remember you are a home gardener, not a farmer.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

Most squeezes come ready-made, but in some hands declarer must construct the position he requires to make the squeeze effective. Here is a typical case.

West leads the king of diamonds and shifts to the king of spades, won by South with the ace. At a quick glance it seems that declarer must sooner or later lose a heart trick and go down one, but actually, on the bidding, he is a favorite to make the slam.

West almost surely has five spades for his bids, and all that declarer requires in addition is for West to have the king of hearts. In that case, properly played, a squeeze is sure to develop nine tricks later and render West helpless.

Proceeding on that basis, declarer enters dummy with a trump to the eight, ruffs a spade, then plays a trump to the nine and ruffs another spade. The purpose of the ruffs is to extract East's spades and so place the burden of guarding against dummy's nine solely on West.

When declarer now plays four more rounds of trumps, this becomes the position:

North

♠Q
♡K 6

East

South
♡Q 7

South leads his last trump and West is in bad shape. If he discards a spade, declarer discards a heart from dummy; if West discards a heart, declarer discards a spade from dummy. Either way South scores the last three tricks and makes the slam.

Things may be a little wonky

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A major solar flare occurred immediately south of the sun's equator Wednesday, and it is expected to cause a storm in the earth's magnetic field and could affect radio communications, a federal agency said.

The U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration officials said the flare was rated x-1 in terms of its output of x-ray radiation. That means it carries 10 times more x-ray radiation than does a moderate flare. The flare began at 3:07 p.m. PDT.

Forecaster Howard Sargent said the flare was first detected by x-ray sensors aboard a government satellite orbitting 35,200 kilometres above the earth's Equator.

In addition to the expected magnetic storm, which Sargent said would follow the flare by about 48 hours, another expected effect of the flare is proton bombardment of the high northern latitudes of earth. Most such radiation is stopped by the atmosphere.

Sargent said the region of the sun that produced Wednesday's flare would face the earth about six more days and could affect the earth for another nine days.

'Sent to kill' by Libya says arrested hitman

ROME (AP) — A 25-year-old Libyan accused of attempted murder in Rome was quoted today by police as saying he was "sent by the Libyan people to kill opponents" of Libya's radical government, which is believed behind a string of eight murders of Libyan dissidents in Europe in the last two months.

Police said Monsur Mezaroni Belgazem was arrested outside a Rome restaurant Wednesday night minutes after a gunman fired three pistol shots at the Libyan-born proprietor, Salem Mohamed Fezzani, a naturalized Italian who has lived in Rome since 1959.

Fezzani, 45, escaped injury by diving to the floor as the shots rang out. Police said they were looking for a second man seen fleeing the restaurant with Belgazem.

The attempt came as gunmen murdered two more of Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy's exile foes in Europe.

Police in Athens found the body of Abu Bakr Abdel-Rahman on Wednesday. Authorities said the 23-year-old furniture factory worker from Tripoli had been virtually decapitated with a large knife one to two days before his body was discovered.

Neighbors said Abdel-Rahman was a known critic of Khadafy. But Athens police said they had information he was an officer of the Libyan police. They refused to elaborate.

The hit men struck in Rome on Tuesday night, killing the Libyan-born owner of a lumber trading company who recently took out Tunisian citizenship.

Investigators found the body of Mohamed Fouad Buohjar, 55, under his bed in a rooming house in downtown Rome. He had been strangled with a nylon cord and then stabbed repeatedly in the chest and stomach, police said.

A note attached to the cord was signed Libyan Revolutionary Committees in Rome and warned that "the enemies of the people will be reached wherever they are," authorities said.

Three other Libyan exiles have been murdered in Rome, two in London and one in Bonn since March 21.

The murders aboard have coincided with a crackdown on Libyan dissidents at home. More than 2,000 persons have been reported arrested, most of them senior officials in state-owned companies and banks. Dissent also is reported growing in army ranks over Khadafy's long-simmering border feud with Chad and his ill-fated support for deposed Ugandan dictator Idi Amin.

MDs strike over killings in hospitals

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Seven hundred doctors walked out of hospitals in a one-week nationwide strike to protest assassinations that have occurred in operating rooms and the killings of two physicians.

Only hours after the strike was announced Wednesday, 15 gunmen burst into the emergency room at San Salvador's Rosales Hospital, seized an unconscious victim awaiting surgery for a bullet wound and fled in a van, authorities said.

It was the seventh attack by gunmen on a hospital patient this year, officials said. The other patients all were shot to death, often while on the operating table undergoing surgery for bullet wounds.

Spokesmen for the doctors said the 700 medical interns and residents at hospitals across El Salvador are protesting the operating room assassinations and the kidnapping, torture and shooting deaths of two doctors last week in the town of Cojutepeque, 18 miles west of the capital.

The terrorist victims were Dr. Carlos Alfaro, 22, and Dr. Miguel Garcia, 28, both of whom worked at the local town hospital and were graduates of the National University's Medical School.

The doctors' strike came after six unions belonging to a powerful leftist labor confederation announced a 24-hour nationwide strike today to protest government repression.

In another development, a Christian Democratic member of El Salvador's ruling junta, Jose Antonio Morales Ehrlich, Wednesday said he would go to Washington to discuss "Central American politics" with American congressmen.

Thatcher rejects Eire plan

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Charles Haughey of the Irish Republic failed Wednesday to talk Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher into abandoning a plan to restore limited powers to Northern Ireland's Protestant majority — something which he said "cannot succeed."

In his first summit with Thatcher on the sectarian conflict in the British province, Haughey hoped to persuade her to give the government of his overwhelmingly Roman Catholic republic a voice in determining Northern Ireland's future.

Official British sources said Thatcher is determined that the problem be solved by Britain and the people of Northern Ireland without "outside interference."

Haughey, a fervent nationalist who considers uniting partitioned Ireland as one of his government's priorities, said: "A solution put forward purely in the Northern Ireland context and without any other dimension cannot succeed."

A carefully-worded communique said the two leaders agreed "to develop new and closer political co-operation . . . and hold regular meetings" in future.

But it was clear the two governments were still far apart on a solution to the violence in Northern Ireland, which has claimed more than 2,000 lives since August, 1969.

Haughey said the British plan will accentuate differences between the rival Protestant and Catholic communities and perpetuate the conflict.

Thatcher's plan appears designed to pacify the Protestants, who have threatened rebellion if London pushes them into union with the republic.

Thatcher's blueprint for restoring power to the Protestant minority is expected to be unveiled in the next few weeks. Official sources said it envisions restoring some of the autonomy suspended by London eight years ago.

That means the Protestant majority, twice as large as the province's Roman Catholic population, will again dominate any provincial legislature, sources said.

Paul McCartney says he has no hard feelings about his nine days in a Tokyo jail last January after Japanese customs officials found eight ounces of marijuana in his luggage, but admits the experience was a jolt. He has not, however, given up the drug. "I still don't think that grass is that dangerous a drug," the former member of the Beatles. "I wish the medical people would get together and make up their minds what it is. I know Scotch is worse for you than grass — it is for me anyway. Being in jail was a bummer. They only let me have two cigarettes a day and I usually get through a pack a day. The first morning they gave me breakfast of seaweed and onion soup — and me a bacon and eggs and toast man. They offered me bowls of hot water. Yuck."

Paycheck

Huntington, W.Va. officials want country singer Johnny Paycheck of Take Your Job and Shove It fame to take his jobs elsewhere. They've banned him from performing at their civic center. City Manager Dick Barton says Paycheck's on-stage beer drinking "left a bad taste in the city's mouth." But the singer's troubles don't end there. An advertising agency is suing the concert's promoter for $10,000 in debts and Paycheck's manager, Tony conway, says the unhappy singer wasn't even paid his full salary for the ill-fated gig.

Two Vermont single mothers don't think they should have to get rid of their children in order to join the army reserves. So 33-year-old Sarah Caldwell and 31-year-old Barbara Provost are filing suit. The women say it's discriminatory and unconstitutional for the army to forbid single parents to enlist unless their children are placed for adoption. Maj. Robert Lacheen said the enlistment requirements are designed to protect children.

A dog could be a policeman's best friend — unless the cop is allergic to his canine companion. Dover police chief Anthony Mackron had been looking forward to obtaining a police dog for this northern New Jersey community. But he had to scrap his plan, at least temporarily, because Carmen Pennella, the only patrolman who volunteered to train with the dog turned out to be allergic to German shepherds, the breed used in police work. "I would get a headache when I arrived in the morning, and it would go away when I returned to the hotel at night," said Pennella, who trained with four animals.

Dear Abby:

The letter from the woman with the deep voice who was tired of being called "sir" on the telephone could have been written by me.

I like the way Bea Arthur handled it on one of the "Maude" episodes.

When a telephone caller said, "Yes, Mr. Findlay," Maude replied, "This is Mrs. Findlay. Mr. Findlay has a moustache."

Vera

Dear Vera:

Should you ever sprout a moustache (and many 45-year-old women do), here's an alternate solution for handling it:

Dear Abby:

Regarding the 45-year-old woman with the deep voice who is frequently called "sir" on the telephone:

Why should anyone assume you are a "sir" or a "madam"? My solution works great. Example:

Me: "Operator, may I have the number of so-and-so?"

Operator: "Sir, the number is —."

Me: "Thank you, sir."

Operator: (Slightly annoyed). "You are speaking to a lady."

Me: "Oh, really? Well, so are you."

Operator: (Somewhat surprised). "Oh, please excuse me."

Abby, as you said, skip the correction unless it's important to the gender-bender.

But I have found this a good way to treat myself to a chuckle instad of being annoyed.

Snappy Comeback

Dear Abby:

Here's a suggestion for you older people that will make future generations bless you: Get busy and go through all those family pictures you have stored away in boxes, and label them with names, dates and places if possible.

I recently found a box of family pictures in my mother's attic, and so many of them had no identification whatsoever, I could have cried.

There was one wedding picture of a stunning couple with only "1882" scribbled on the back. Abby, I just can't tell you how I wish I knew who they were!

Another picture shows a couple, about 60, with "Missouri" stamped on the back. My great-grandparents left Missouri in the mid '20s, so it could be them. But we'll never know for sure.

There were several beautiful baby pictures, but very few had names or dates on the backs and no one in the family can identify them now.

Future family genealogists will bless you for providing names, dates and places for these old family pictures.

ELEMENTARY STUDENTS at Quadra school in Victoria were treated Wednesday to a special preview concert by the Himig Ng Lahi choral group from the Philippine Islands. The 14-member group, currently winding up a North American tour, will hold a public performance Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Victoria High School auditorium. The music will trace the lives and legends of the Philippino people through several centuries and will feature ethnic Philippine instruments such as the bamboo nose flute demonstrated above at Quadra school by Magdangal de Leon while singer Marivic Hontiveros looks on. Tickets for the show, sponsored by the Victoria Philippino-Canadian Association, are at the door or in Hillside and Mayfair malls.

New heights for short people

By BETH ANN KRIER
The Los Angeles Times

Ralph Keyes, at 5 feet, 7.62 inches, has built a successful career writing about his inadequacies, studying their humor, their complexity and their universality in We, the Lonely People (1973), Is There Life After High School? (1976) and his recently published The Height of Your Life.

Though the books seem to have helped ease if not exorcise lingering psychological impairments for Keyes and his readers, people still ask him why he doesn't write on something he feels good about, a positive subject for a change. He has no such intention.

"My attitude is to want to confront directly anything I think might stand in my way in life," the Philadelphia-based writer insists during lunch in Los Angeles. "And failure is more interesting to read about than success. Woody Allen is much more interesting than Bruce Jenner. Failure is much more universal than success and I'm looking for universal subjects. I'm much more interested in exploring areas where I feel room for growth."

Once again, a book seems to have diminished Keyes' demon, in this case his height, or lack of it. If someone had asked him if he'd rather be 6 feet, 7 inches, when he started the book three years ago, he'd have said "Yes. Where do I go?" Like many students of human behavior, Keyes knew there were a multitude of subliminal advantages to towering over other people and that all sorts of studies confirm that "tallness stands head and shoulders above any other size in the competition for rewards social, sexual, financial, athletic and practical (like being able to see in crowds)."

But he soon learned of the subtle yet powerful disadvantages of extra height: "Tall bodies for some reason are considered public property. — much like the Statue of Liberty, the Washington Monument or the Eiffel Tower — and are treated with about as much sensitivity ... The paradox in being tall is that precisely because everyone assumed them to be extra powerful, talls are never supposed to exercise any power directly. Short people can be as feisty as they like. Who cares?

"But if a tall person starts acting up, the existing trickle of fear in his presence may turn into a flood of terror. The tall man is painfully aware of this danger — because he's never allowed to forget it. From the time he first begins to shoot up over the heads of his playmates, a tall boy gets constant messages subtle and overt that he has to restrain himself; he must learn to hold things and never lose control, because if he did he might hurt someone."

Keyes also discovered that almost nobody is happy with his or her height. Short people want to be taller almost without exception. Tall people complain of problems in finding clothes, friends and comfortable seats on airplanes. And people of "average" stature feel ordinary, undistinguished and occasionally invisible.

In the course of his research, Keyes recognized that he grows every night and shrinks every day. "I learned that after a full night's sleep the human body normally measures from one-half to a full inch taller before it once again compresses under the weight of the day.

Keyes grew beyond 5-feet, 8-inches when he came to California in the '70s to explore some aspects of the human potential movement. He was rolfed (a body realignment therapy), shot up past 5-8 and promptly offered to pay his rolfer by the inch. With time, his body recoiled but his research again proved conforting: "It (height) changes during the course of a day and also over a lifetime. After age 30 we all shrink an inch or two."

Among other bits his rather unconventional research turned up:

— Former FBI director J. Edgar Hoover ("no more than 5-feet, 8-inches) coped with shortness by instructing Bureau employees to say he was "just under six feet." Hoover also had a riser under the chair behind his massive desk, used toilets constructed so that his feet wouldn't dangle from them and had a couch facing his desk that was cut extgra low so visitors would sit beneath him.

— One study correlating North American men's heights with their salaries found an apparent $500-an-inch height payoff per year for men ranging between 5-feet, 6-inches and 6-3.

— One of the rare remarks about his 7-foot-1 height that ever amazed Wilt Chamberlain came from a frightened drunk who looked up at the basketball star and begged, "Please don't fall this way." Chamberlain has claimed, "The only way I'll ever get any privacy is to cut off my legs."

— In different reference sources, Julius Caesar has been listed among "Short Men in History" and also among "Tall Men in History."

— Everything in 6-feet, 2-inches Julia Child's Kitchen was installed higher than usual: stove, sink, counters and shelves.

— In a poll of 79 college women, only two said they could date a man shorter than themselves. They were both 5-feet, 11-inches.

— At 5-7, Napoleon was not short compared to other Frenchmen of his time.

Keyes has his opinions on the matter, too. He suggests sex discrimination may just be height discrimination in disguise. He concludes the best reward for confronting a height issue directly can be discovering that height itself was never really the issue.

Nontheless he prefers his maitre d's tall and reserved, his agents short and scrappy. And though he first proposes that a tall stature would be handy for a secretary of state, he reconsiders, saying, "I think Muskie may be a tad too tall. He's 6-feet, 4-inches and he's going to be looking very far down on a lot of the world's leaders. And that, in all seriousness, does not make people feel comfortable. I often wondered if the source of Henry Kissinger's prowess and popularity as secretary of state was the fact that he was looking so many of the world's leaders right directly in the eye, people like Chou En-lai, Le Duc Tho, Anwar Sadat."

It's such observations that have helped Keyes overcome most of his height anxiety. In fact, he's finding he's a terrible example of syndrome of which he writes and that's creating a mild dilemma as he promotes the book: "I play on my height constantly. I probably make myself out to be smaller than I am. I don't feel little, though, or like I have a low self-image. I feel kind of cocky if anything."

Salt big factor in high blood pressure

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Two interesting letters about high blood pressure have recently come to my attention. The first asked:

"Is it possible to lower blood pressure with just diet and without taking pills? I'm not a pill taker and would like to avoid it.

Salt is sodium cholride. It is the sodium that is the trouble maker. Numerous medical studies definitely indicate that salt restriction can lower blood pressure and can play an important role in its control.

Yet, the remarkable effect of the newer drugs must not be overlooked by those for whom they have been prescribed. There are many instances when dietary salt restriction is not sufficient, and treatment must be amplified by these drugs.

One of the major problems with dietary salt restriction is the fact that many people consume a tremendous amount of salt that is "hidden" in prepared foods. In fact, so great is this problem that the Food and Drug Administration has proposed a sweeping change in labeling foods. This would require stating the exact amount of sodium chloride in each product.

Look, and you will be surprised to learn how much hidden salt is present in carbonated drinks, baking soda and even in some antiacids that are commonly used.

People with high blood pressure can substitute potassium chloride for sodium chloride for the seasoning of food.

The second letter asked:

"Is there any truth to the fact that black people have a greater tendency to have high blood pressure?"

It is well-known that there is a much higher incidence of mild and severe hypertension, or high blood pressure, among black people. In fact, it is thought that this condition occurs almost twice as frequently among blacks as it does among the white population.

There has been a great deal of speculation about this, but no definite scientific explanation. Now it comes to light that black people may be unusually sensitive to salt and that their bodies are less able to get rid of sodium chloride. For it is well established that there is a distinct relationship between high salt intake and high blood pressure.

An intensive study at the Indiana University School of Medicine has resulted in a newer understanding of the link between genetics, sodium retention and high blood pressure.

This study opens wide horizons for the understanding of high blood pressure, its early detection and its control.

It is imperative that all people, black and white, limit their salt intake if the penalities for high blood pressure are to be reduced.

Merry May banquets are chaos for dieters

Creamed chicken on toast points. Canned fruit cocktail in thick sugar syrup. Strawberry shortcake and whipped cream. Or ham and scalloped potatoes. How about these rich parfaits of every kind and flavor? Sound familiar? If so, you, like us, have been on the round of numerous banquet-style annual dinners that seem to always take place during the "merry" month of May. "How can I", asked a friend, (also on the banquet circuit), "ever stay on any diet? Not only do I have to eat high-calorie dinners (I feel obligated to "clean my plate' because often I'm the speaker and hence a guest) but I also have to travel extensively, dine with clients, eat-on-the-run and have too many business lunches, he moaned. How do I cope?"

It's not easy to resist temptation when tempting soft rolls and butter are passed. Or when chicken comes fried in a batter. Or the ice cream flambe is being served with a hot cherry sauce. But you can learn to say no — politely. It becomes a question of trade-offs.

You've got to learn to stick to your guns. T smile back at the waitress who tells you the stak tastes better with the Bernaise sauce or the vegetables with butter. Or well-meaning dinner companions who tell you one bite of dessert won't hurt. And you're not going to lose friends just because you refuse a rich sauce or ask for small portions.

Thers are a few simple things you can do to help you cope when you're eating away from home—be it on a plane, a restaurant, or banquet, or at a friend's house.

Tell your friends you're on a diet and some what may you're going to stick to it. Enlist their help and ask them not to serve you salads with dressing (plain greens are fine, thank you) or rich dishes. Tell them it's "in" these days to serve fresh fruit with cheese for dessert.

— If your're invited out, eat some filling, yet low calorie, muncies ahead of time to fill you up. A hunk of cheese (protein keeps you feeling full longer, it's been found), a wedge of lettuce, some grapes, half a melon or small banana, 10 mushrooms are all under 100 calories.

— At a cocktail party, sip mineral or soda water with lemon and go after any raw vegetables that are offered. (But no dip.)

— If you're eating in restaurants, order poached or broiled dishes, avoid sauces. Stick to fresh fruit for appetizers or dessert. Ask the waiter to substitute sliced tomatoes or green beans for higher caloried peas or corn. Choose lean meats (veal, chicken or fish). Remove the batter or skin from foods such as chicken or fish. Better still, skip the fried dishes. Order a baked potato (no sour cream) instead of frieds. Tell the waiter you don't want any gravy. Haunt the salad bar but watch the chick peas and potato salad and the dressing. Substitute lemon juice or vinegar for the dressing or tote your own homemade low-calorie version. If you have a choice, go to a Japanese restaurant. Usually there's not as much meat served and plenty of vegetables simmered in soy sauce. And very few desserts are offered.

— At a fast-food restaurant, eat half the bun only, order a single burger, no fires, and make sure a salad bar is offered. And stick an apple in your pocket for dessert!

— If you're flying over a meal period, check with the airline first. Air Canada, for example, offers diabetic or low-cholesterol menus as well as ones low in calories. But you have ask for this service at the time of booking.

— For movie-munching, take a package of unshelled sunflower seeds with you (about 100 calories). It's as noisy as buttered popcorn but has fewer calories!

— If you eat on the run, don't give in to high calorie snackes to tide you over. Learn to reach for an orange, an apple or banana, some strawberries or grapes, an ounce of cheese and some soda crackers, unbuttered popcorn instead of a sticky Danish. Choose carefully. Three cups of unbuttered popcorn only has about 100 calories — a handful of peanuts has many more.

— Watch those after-work get togethers for a few drinks after a hectic day. This can be as fatal, calorie-wise, as the business lunch! Order a glass of wine, if you must (there's 100 calories in a dry wine) or a spritzer (half wine and half soda over ice). And place the "complimentary" peanuts on the next table! Rember, the higher the proof of liquor, the more alcohol and the more colories!

Tempters trimmed

Newsday

Dieters are tempted from all sides by the enticements of a whipped-cream, butter-sauced, deep-fat-fried world.

Even if resistance is high, there frequently is just one food that cannot be forgotten. "I could stay on my diet except for . . ." chocolate mousse . . . fettucinie alfredo . . . cheesecake.

All the saccharin, all the non-dairy creamers cannot turn low-fat milk into 4 per cent butterfat, or farmer's cheese into Philadelphia cream. What makes those dishes unforgettable is the high-fat, high-sugar content.

An unofficial survey of the foods that most plague dieters found recurring themes: pasta, cream sauce, cake. The results of the search for facsimiles follow. If not on a diet, you can afford to add a couple more tablespoons of oil or up the sugar.

LINGUINI WITH SHRIMP SAUCE

- 3 shallots, minced
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 small dried hot red peppers, crushed
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- ⅓ cup dry white wine
- 1 (16-ounce) can stewed tomatoes
- ½ (10-ounce) package frozen peas
- ⅓ pound small fresh shrimp, removed from shell and deveined, cut into 2 or 3 chunks
- ¾ pound linguini

1. Saute shallots, garlic and red pepper in oil over low heat, stirring constantly. Add shrimp and cook until pink about 3 to 5 minutes. Remove shrimp. Add wine and cook until reduced, about 5 minutes. Add tomatoes and juice; break up tomatoes with fork. Simmer until sauce thickens, about 15 minutes.

2. Add peas to sauce and simmer about 5 minutes or until cooked. Add shrimp and keep warm over very low flame. Meanwhile, cook linguini in boiling salted water until tender but still firm. Drain linquini thoroughly, then toss with sauce. Makes 6 servings.

LOW-CALORIE BEEF STROGANOFF

- ½ cup beef broth
- ½ cup dry red wine
- 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
- 1 onion, chopped
- ½ cup beef broth
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- ½ cup plain low-fat yogurt
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard

1. Preheat broiler to hot. Broil steak on a rack in a broiler pan 6 inches from heat source until rare, about 5 minutes on each side. Cut diagonally into thin strips, about 2 inches long; set aside.

2. In a large skillet, bring ½ cup broth and wine to a boil. Add mushrooms and onion; reduce heat, cover and simmer about 5 minutes, or until vegetables are cooked. Remove vegetables from broth with a slotted spoon. Set aside.

3. Simmer broth mixture until reduced to about ½ cup; remove from heat. Combine remaining broth, flour and cornstarch; mix well. Stir into broth with a wire whisk. Cook and stir over low heat until thickened, about 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Combine yogurt, paprika, salt and mustard. Add to thickened broth, stirring until smooth. Mix in reserved beef, mushrooms and onions. Warm over very low heat, stirring constantly, until hot. Serve over noodles or rice, if desired. Serves 4.

1. Peel potatoes and cut into strips about a quarter-inch wide. Dry on paper towels thoroughly. Toss in a bowl of oil as if you were making a salad.

2. When coated, spread in a single layer on a cookie sheet and place in a 425-degree oven for 20 to 30 minutes. Turn periodically. Serves 6.

- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ⅓ cup unsweetened cocoa
- 3 eggs, separated
- 1½ cups skim milk

2. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; gradually add remaining ½ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold in chocolate mixture.

3. Spoon into 8 little pots or small dessert cups. Chill 2 to 3 hours. Makes 8 servings.

- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- ⅓ cup cold water
- ½ cup sugar
- 3 cups low-fat creamed cottage cheese

Trot for cancer funds wins over grass roots

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Terry Fox says his only regret is that he hasn't been able to get to better know the people who support him as he runs by them from sunrise to sunset, day-in and day-out.

The 21-year old Port Coquitlam native arrived here on a cross-Canada run he hopes will raise millions for the Canadian Cancer Society.

He left St. John's, Nfld., April 24 with two replacements for his artificial right leg, and hopes to be in Vancouver by the end of October.

He lost his leg to cancer, and when his fund-raising run is over, Terry Fox will have overcome a formidable challenge.

But to Fox, there's more than the challenge.

"The people have been great, just great all the way across," he said. "Some of the receptions I have had have been tremendous.

"I remember when I got to St. George's, Nfld., the whole town came out and made me walk in front of a marching band on the way to city hall while This Land Is Your Land was played.

"And running down the road in the middle of nowhere, five miles away from anything, and seeing signs 'Go Terry Go' really helps my day go along."

Each day, Fox gets up at 4:30 a.m. and runs about 15 kilometres before breakfast. Then after three hours of sleep, he eats and runs another 15 kilometres before resting again. After another light meal and sleep he tries to finish his daily goal of 45 kilometres.

So far he's only had minor trouble with the artificial leg and when it developed he simply took it off and attached a new one.

A van accompanies him to provide shelter when accommodation isn't available.

He said he decided to run across Canada while undergoing therapy. He trained for 14 months before flying to St. John's to start the trip.

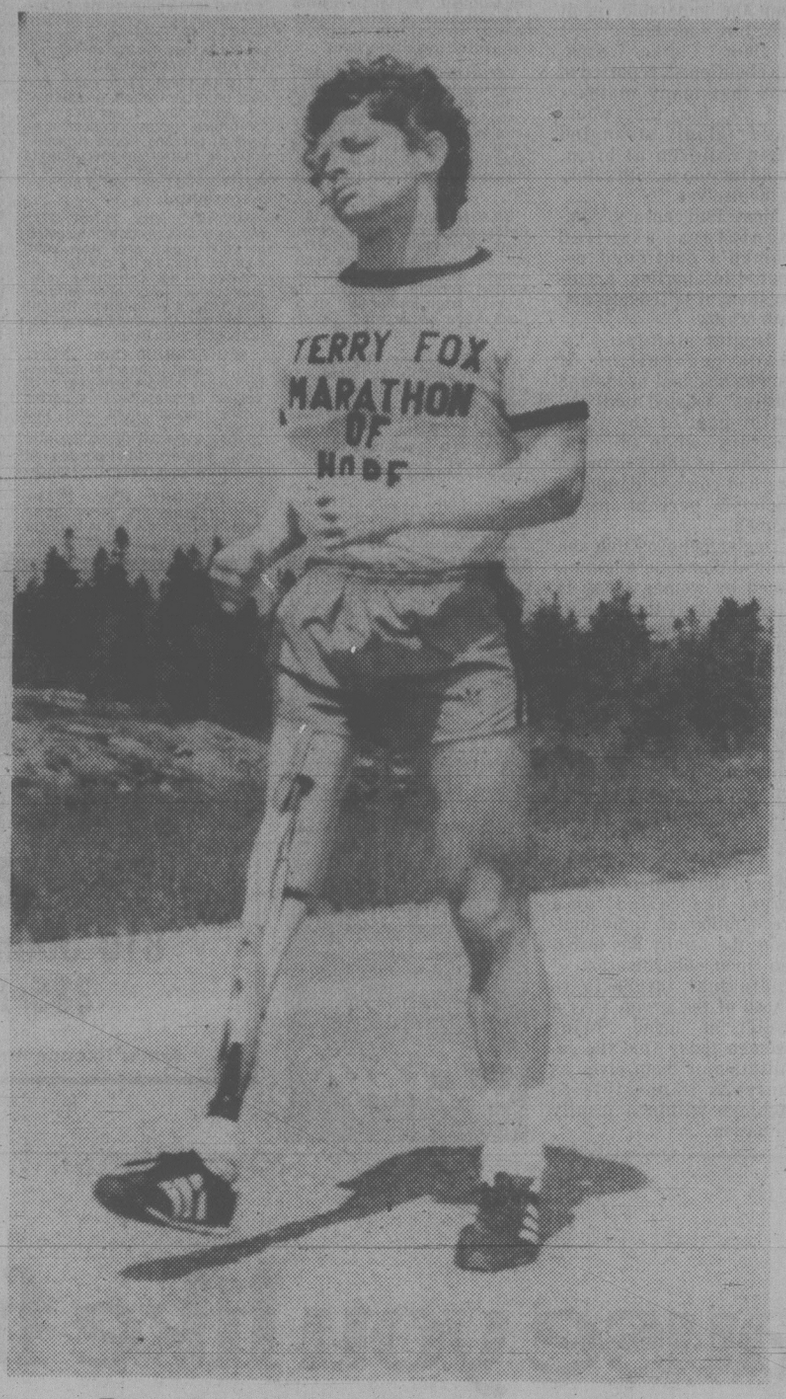
Fox said he had been east only once before, a week-long trip to St. John's, and didn't know what to expect from Atlantic Canada. But he says if the trip to date is an indication, there will be many memories.

"I got some salt cod in Newfoundland and people are always asking me in for meals," he said, adding when he arrived in Port aux Basques, Nfld., the town greeted him with a $10,000 donation for the cancer society.

Some towns have set up stages from which he's asked to speak to local residents about his trip. "But I regret not having enough time to talk to them and talk about things I would like to."

People ask him to stop and talk in most towns. Others offer meals or tea.

"But I didn't know really what to expect about fund raising," he said. "I know that I have gone as far as I have, and I have a bit of an empty feeling that in some towns I did well and others I didn't."



Terry "Fox trots" into Dartmouth, Nova Scotia

Discrimination charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Family doctors are being urged to lobby for laws to protect cancer patients from job discrimination.

Dr. Ruth Alison, a cancer specialist from Toronto's Princess Margaret Hospital told a medical conference that cancer patients who have managed to survive the disease frequently have trouble finding jobs.

Yet the absentee rate for patients with a cancer history is generally lower when compared with persons who have suffered from other diseases, she told members of the College of Family Physicians this week.

"Employment and rehabilitation agencies have regularly considered the cancer patient to have low recognizable potential," she said.

"This is not true, and doctors may find that their views presented to legislators may be influential in encouraging the enactment of laws that bar discrimination in employment due to a history of cancer."

Dr. Alison, a University of Toronto medical professor and president of the Canadian Cancer Society, says about 67,000 people are found each year in Canada to have cancer.

More than 40 per cent can be cured within five years.

"However, the cancer patient is usually ignored as he is not considered to have rehabilitation potential."

In comparison, there is a 35 per cent death rate for coronary patients within a month of initial attack, and many of those able to return to work must limit their activities, she said.

"If we are honest, many of the cancer patients do better than those with other chronic diseases."

She noted, for example, that 77 per cent of the 1,350 employees of Bell Telephone Co. treated for cancer in 1972 were able to return to work.

Podium phobia erased

TORONTO (CP) — Your palms perspire, you tremble, your throat constricts and all you want to do is run away.

No, it's not an attacker in pursuit, but a fear of public speaking. However, a Toronto man has developed a special speaking course to help the faint-hearted face an audience.

Murray Minuk who runs Stage Fright, says fear is the common denominator that sends people to courses like his.

Minuk, who charges $75 for eight twice-weekly sessions in a downtown office, starts people reading to one or two other people, then takes them into speaking to a couple of others.

Later he uses such means as videotape, role-playing, an evening of telling jokes and speaking on surprise topics as an introduction to addressing a group.

The course ends with speeches before about 20 people — something participants couldn't have hoped for a month earlier, he says.

Minuk says his students leave the classes in an almost euphoric mood after they've been able to conquer their fears.

One couple was getting a divorce because the wife, who weighed 190 pounds, had beaten her husband with a stove lid and broken his ribs; on another occasion she knocked him down with a chair. Another wife had taken all the covers off the bed, leaving her husband to "shiver until morning," he complained in his divorce suit; she had also jumped on him "with her knees" and stabbed a knitting needle four inches into his arm. A third wife, angry that her husband wasn't eating his dinner, had told him, "If you don't eat I'll cut your heart out."

Militant women galvanized into hostile action by the social turmoil of the last few years? Hardly. All three were wives of the mid-1800s, a period in which women are often imagined to have been models of Victorian docility.

These and other unexpected women are among those who march through the pages of a new book called At Odds: Women and the Family in America From the Revolution to the Present, written by Carl Degler and published by Oxford University Press.

Degler, a Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and a professor at Stanford University, has spent more than seven years investigating the role of women in the family during the last two centuries. Using libraries from Cambridge, Mass., to Palo Alto, Calif., he turned up volumes of original source material — letters between husbands and wives, diaries and journals in which women confided their secret thoughts, even a turn-of-the-century survey of women's sexual habits.

Degler attributes his interest in part to the 16 years he spent teaching at Vassar, during which he came across the writings of Charlotte Perkins Gilman, a 19th-century feminist author.

Motherhood was often feared by Victorian women

"I was so struck by the modernity of what she had to say," Degler recalled in a recent interview, "and by her thesis that it was a necessity for married women to work and have interests outside the home in order to be independent." He ended up editing a new version of Gilman's Women and Economics, and has dedicated his latest book to the memory of her and her daughter, "who were there at the beginning."

According to Degler, many of the stresses women feel today have existed for centuries, and there has long been a fundamental conflict between the interests of women as individuals and those of the family. That conflict manifested itself in growing resistance to traditional female stereotypes — a resistance that often had as its common root in what Degler sees as women's frustration and anger at the burdens imposed by motherhood.

Women's correspondence and diary entries frequently express dismay at the prospect of childrearing or happiness at having avoided it.

Although contraceptive methods were unreliable and misinformation about reproduction common even within the medical profession, the size of the average family declined by 50 per cent during the 19th century. (In 1800 the fertility rate, the average number of children born to a woman, was 7, and by 1900 it had fallen to 3.5.)

Often women passed along information to friends in letters that testify to their horror of pregnancy. Of the condom, one woman wrote, "It sounds perfectly revolting, but one must face anything rather than the inevitable result of Nature's methods."

Henry Clarke Wright, the abolitionist, reported in 1858 that many mothers had told him they would have "gladly strangled their children at birth, could they do so with safety to themselves."

Most 19th-century commentators assailed women's continued recourse to abortion, accusing them of selfishness and immorality.

Degler maintains "a frank recognition of women's sexual needs and desires" existed until the latter part of the 19th Century, when the constraints of the Victorian era had come to dominate society's perceptions of women.

Degler believes that the critical domestic dilemma faced by women today is fundamentally the same as that of the past, despite enormous progress in other areas.

"The central values of the modern family stand in opposition to those that underlie women's emancipation," he said. "Where the women's movement has stood for equality, the family historically has denied or repudiated equality. Where the women's movement has called for a recognition of individualism, the family has insisted upon subordination of individual interests to those of the group." As a result, he added, "Many women today find the realization of themselves as persons impossible to achieve within a family situation."

Card family survives first winter

MATTAWA, Ont. (CP) — The Cards say the stresses and hectic pace of urban living are all behind them now as they happily adjust to isolated life 65 miles northeast of North Bay.

Bill and Betty Card and their four teenage children moved to the Ottawa River district from Toronto almost a year ago, mostly to "get out of the rat race," Card said.

However, there were dire warnings from their friends that they "wouldn't survive a winter on our own," he said.

Card had worked in construction for 33 years and he accepted the challenge of change.

He brought with him many of the tools of his trade including a small bulldozer, welding equipment, a compressor and various small engines.

"It's a different atmosphere — the people, the teachers and the other students at school go out of their way to be friendly," said 14-year-old David.

"But we get satisfaction from the work we do, and as a family we are more closely knit," he said. "We don't want to go back to the city — we couldn't hack it now."

Card has established large batteries for emergency lights but they are used sparingly. He is talking about a water wheel he plans to install in a nearby creek and he already has the essentials of a wind generator.

In the meantime, the family have adjusted to using coal-oil lamps for reading in their bedrooms and they already know the experience of waking on a cold morning without the benefit of a furnace.

The Cards had been contemplating the purchase of a country property for some time. Eight years ago Mrs. Card visited the old farm.

They purchased 80 acres and Card said, "It's like being free."

He doesn't miss the excitement and activity of construction and there is a new feeling of accomplishment in his daily tasks.

Card is working as road superintendent for the Mattawa Township and drives a school bus.

The Cards cut their own wood and bake their bread. Radio and television are limited to news and weather broadcasts or special events.

"We don't miss the telephone and certainly not the hydro bills," Card said.

"Yes, we have made a whole new life," said Card, "and we're staying here."

TEA DRINKERS are an invididual lot and Sam Twining of the English tea family urges them to "do their own thing" when picking their brew.

Breakfast lapsang . . . only in Canada

By BRUCE LEVETT

TORONTO (CP) — The ladies of the ensemble were sawing away on Tea for Two in the background and Sam Twining, scion of one of England's oldest families, was engaging in some missionary work.

"In the evening, after dinner, I usually have Formosa oolong, which is a lovely China tea, very thin, with a flavor likened to ripened peaches," he said.

Twining was on safari across Canada, promoting the family product — be it bag or loose — as a beverage, if not a way of life.

Noel Coward would never have cast Sam Twining as a tea lord. He's tousle-haired, about welterweight size, and with a bent nose that attests to time spent in the Royal Marines.

With it all, he's a democrat and wouldn't dream of dictating tastes.

"It's horses for courses, as we say. Some teas are ideal at certain times of the day as a thin tea, full of bouquet. Others are brisk and take the milk (never cream, of course) well.

"There is nothing to prevent people from doing their own thing."

But Twining manfully suppressed a shudder as he confessed that some Canadians are in the habit of having lapsang for breakfast.

Only when pressed, did the master of Over Wallop, Hants., admit that ingredients other than milk, sugar or lemon are sometimes infused in this nectar.

"Let us say you never hear about it, but I can assure you people 'spike' their tea — is that the word you se here? And it's jolly good, too.

"I must tell you we have a blend called Russian caravan which is a most beautiful tea and when you come in on a cold winter's day and want to warm up quickly, make the tea, add a little milk and a wee drop of scotch. It's the most wonderful drink."

Twining, who ingests an average of nine cups of tea a day, advocates the Ceylon breakfast variety as the basic ingredient of "a delicious iced tea."

"It remains crystal clear. A little gin in that is very, very nice."

Sam Twining declines even under pressure to disparage the tea bag, of which the family firm purveys 50 million a year in Canada.

"Tea bags are a fine convenience food — particularly in Canada with your busy way of life and your lovely long summers where you do a lot of things out of doors."

Somehow, you get the message that lovely long summers and a brisk way of life are not experienced in Over Wallop.

The ladies busy on flute, cello and oboe swung into a fugue and Sam Twining — after a short lecture on the brewing of tea — rose to go.

It would have been appropriate, somehow, had he reached for a sun helmet, but he didn't. Pity. He would have donned it at a rakish angle.

Consumer optimism slips

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers are more pessimistic about their short-term prospects than they have been since 1960, the Conference Board in Canada said Wednesday.

The board, which conducts a quarterly survey of consumer confidence, said confidence in the first quarter of 1980 hit one of the lowest levels since it began the surveys 20 years ago.

"This result, together with the record low established in the fourth quarter of last year, implies that Canadian consumers have never been this pessimistic about their near-term prospects since the survey began measuring consumer confidence in 1960," the board said.

The board is an independent, non-profit research institution with facilities here, the United States and Europe.

The low level of confidence reflects increased concern about financial prospects, the short-term employment outlook and the advisability of making major purchases.

However, the pessimism isn't as bad everywhere — confidence brightened from late 1979 in British Columbia, the Prairie provinces and Quebec.

But attitudes worsened from the last survey in Ontario and the Atlantic provinces.

Slightly more than 20 per cent of respondents said their family financial position had improved in the last six months, a similar percentage to the last quarter of 1979 but down from 22 per cent from the fist quarter of that year.

The proportion of respondents who feel their financial position will improve in the next six months was unchanged at 24 per cent, down from 27 per cent a year earlier.

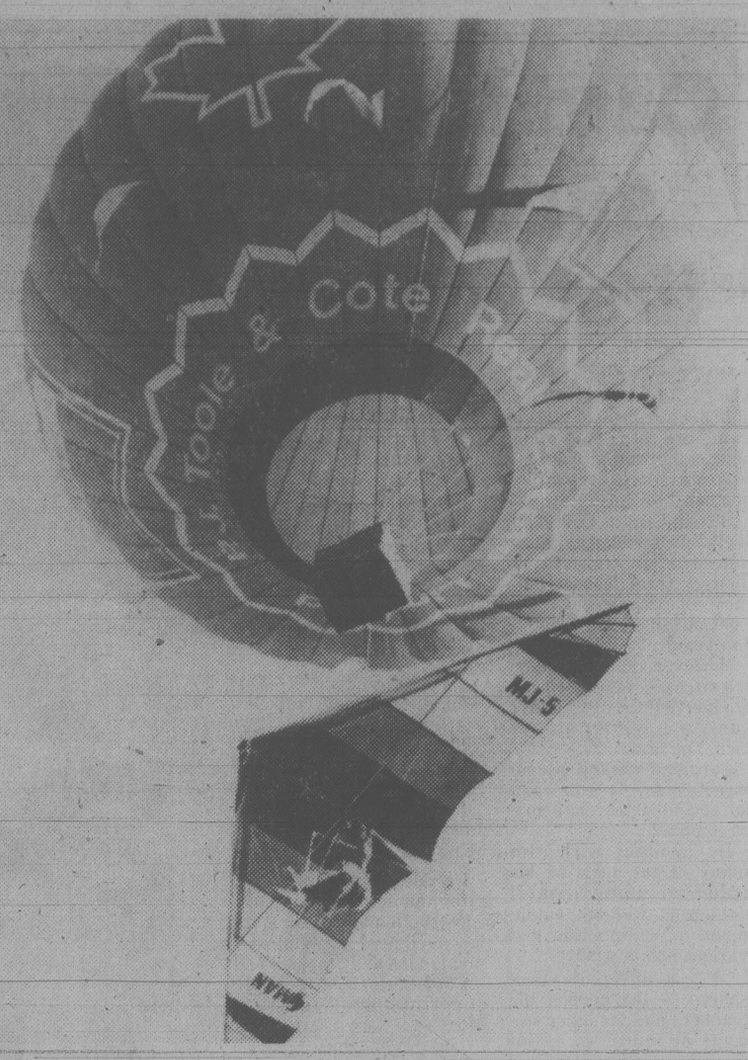
Sixteen per cent said they expected more jobs in six months' time, up from 11 per cent in late 1979, but down from 17 per cent in the first quarter of 1979.

But respondents were most pessimistic about buying a major item, even more so than they were in the last survey which established a record low for optimism.

Only 17 per cent said they thought the present was a good time to make a major purchase, down from 18 per cent in the previous survey and a slump of 33 per cent during the first quarter of 1979.

Respondents also expressed gloom about the economy and inflation. Only 11 per cent expected economic conditions as a whole to improve in the next six months, up slightly from nine per cent in the last survey, but down considerably from the 19 per cent recorded in mid-1979.

Even though respondents said they expected recession conditions, especially through their reluctance to buy major items, nearly 52 per cent said they felt inflation will worsen, compared with 54 per cent in the fourth quarter of 1979 and 46 per cent a year ago.



FLYING HIGH over Edmonton is the aptly named John Bird, 25, who set a new Canadian record last weekend for the highest altitude start for a hang glider. He was carried to a height of 4,028 metres before being released for a 28-minute descent.

Most favor halt to refugee tide

TORONTO (CP) — Almost two-thirds of Canadians questioned in a Gallup poll said they are against admitting more Vietnamese refugees to Canada if a government quota of 50,000 refugees is reached ahead of schedule.

The poll, based on in-home interviews with 1,051 Canadian adults, found 63 per cent would not approve of the Canadian government allowing more refugees into the country. Twenty-nine per cent would approve of such a move and eight per cent were not sure.

In July, 1979, the government announced that 50,000 Vietnamese refugees would be allowed into Canada by the end of this year.

The poll was taken in response to suggestions that more refugees should be admitted because the 50,000 level will be reached before the December, 1980, deadline.

Those under 30 years of age (36 per cent) favor the proposal more than those between 30 and 49 years of age (31 per cent) and those over 50 years of age (20 per cent), the poll found.

A sample of this size is regarded as accurate within a margin of four percentage points, 19 times out of 20.

In Edmonton, Jack Pickett, chairman of the Committee of Silent Majority, said results of the poll supported his position that Canada should be cautious in admitting refugees.

"I believe the majority of the Canadian people do not support government action to take in these people. We simply cannot absorb every refugee."

Pension hike ripoff feared by Begin

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Monique Begin appealed to the provinces Wednesday to ensure Canada's poorest pensioners are not ripped off after Parliament gives its expected approval to a $35-a-month increase in the guaranteed income supplement.

Miss Begin told the Commons she has asked the provinces to make sure the $35 goes into the pockets of pensioners living in institutions and public housing rather than toward increased rent and board.

British Columbia and Nova Scotia have already advised her the full increase will be passed on, she said.

Miss Begin made her comments during debate on legislation to increase the supplement to about 1.3 million of Canada's poorest pensioners, beginning in July.

The bill would increase the current supplement paid to single pensioners to at least $188 a month. The supplement is paid to persons with little or no other sources of income and is in addition to the old age security pension of $186.60 a month.

The bill is expected to receive speedy approval, but opposition spokesmen complained it still does not go far enough to meet the needs of thousands of pensioners living below the poverty line.

Miss Begin said in an interview she is concerned institutions will automatically increase rents and board once the increase has been approved.

Pensioners living in institutions turn over their old age security and supplement cheques to the institutions, which keep a portion of it to cover room and board, she said.

The institutions return to the pensioners between $65 and $75 a month for pocket money.

Miss Begin said she wants assurances that once the increase is in effect, pensioners will receive the additional $35 a month as their own spending money.

She told the Commons about 700,000 recipients of the income supplement — 60 per cent of them women — are living below the poverty line.

Miss Begin admitted the increase will not raise all of them above the poverty level but urged the opposition parties to approve the legislation.

It will cost the government $345 million to implement the increase.

Boogey by stop light

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Somebody in Burlington may be boogeying at the city's expense.

A $7,000 traffic signal controller has been stolen and the city's public works director says he suspects the complicated electronic system is powering a heavy-duty disco lighting system.

"Someone probably has it in their basement right now," Matt Koevoets told the city's public works committee Tuesday night.

He said that whoever broke into the city's traffic signal control box knew what they were doing.

They also had a case of Saturday night fever. The system was stolen on a Saturday night in April.

The committee voted to replace the controller system.

CIA man a U.S. Ottawa attache

WASHINGTON (CP) — Covert Action Information Bulletin says an official at the U.S. embassy in Ottawa listed as an attache is the top Central Intelligence Agency man in Canada.

The publication, which specializes in exposing CIA activities and agents, says the Canadian CIA station chief is John Kenneth Knaus, 56, an Iowa native who has been with the embassy since 1978.

An embassy official in Ottawa said Wednesday that Knaus holds the title of attache in the political division.

A CIA spokesman refused comment on the report, saying his agency "does not respond to anything published in Covert Action Information Bulletin."

The publication says Knaus may have been with the CIA for almost 30 years and his previous jobs have included a two-year stint in Tokyo. In Ottawa, it says, Knaus replaced Stacy Hulse, who served for a time as station chief in Greece.

PQ referendum Indian opportunity

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Quebec referendum result gives Canada's native Indians an opportunity to obtain legal protection of their rights, said Noel Starblanket, National Indian Brotherhood president.

As a result of the Quebec vote, there will be constitutional discussions, and Indians must "sit at the table as full partners" to have their rights entrenched in the constitution, he said Tuesday.

Starblanket said governments cannot give Indians rights, although they have tried to take them away.

"These rights came from our ancestors, the Great Spirit and the land," he said. "We need not ask anyone for them. We need not beg for them."

Train derailment claims at $9.5M

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — CP Rail said Wednesday it has paid more than $9.5 million to people who claimed out-of-pocket expenses during the Nov. 10 train derailment in this city just west of Toronto.

The company's compensation claim service made payments to 49,900 claimants who were among the more than 225,000 residents forced to leave their homes when the chlorine-laden CP Rail train derailed and exploded into flames.

Total claims paid out represent 148,450 people, a CP Rail spokesman said. The company closed its claims office April 3 but agreed to accept mail-in claims until May 16. About 500 claims still have to be processed, the spokesman said.

Medal awarded

OTTAWA (CP) — Selma Barkham says the Royal Canadian Geographical Society gold medal she received from Lily Schreyer Wednesday was "the icing on the cake" after eight years spent searching through dusty Spanish archives for an ancient link between Basque Spain and Canada.

She won the medal, the society's highest honor, for her discovery of the records of the San Juan, a Basque whaling galleon that sank off Red Bay, Labrador, in 1565.

The discovery helped fill in a 72-year gap in Canadian history between Jacques Cartier's 1536 visit and Samuel de Champlain's 1608 arrival in Quebec.

Professor predicts Quebec violence

By ROBERT WINTERS

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice Pinard, a McGill University sociologist whose opinion poll last week came closest to Tuesday's referendum result, says violence could break out again in Quebec if the Levesque government loses power.

"If the Parti Quebecois were to lose power, some people could feel it is necessary to resort to violence," said the 51-year-old Pinard, who has acquired a reputation as a sharp observer of developments in Quebec's murky political waters.

But in an interview Wednesday, Pinard said tensions will be lower because French-speaking Quebecers voted in favor of the no side. He said a preliminary analysis of the result shows that between 52 and 55 per cent of French-speaking people voted no, although this total could be as high as 57 per cent.

"It's healthy that the majority of French-speaking voters was not different from the over-all total," he said. "This could have caused social and political problems because of the divisions of two societies within Canada."

He said he would not be surprised if the Levesque government called an election within the next month "because the current high rate of satisfaction with the government can only drop, although I'm not sure how fast."

Pinard, who said there was about a 68-per-cent rate of satisfaction with the government during the referendum campaign, said the Levesque government would likely have been re-elected if there had been an election at the same time as the referendum.

"I would be very surprised if they waited until next year to hold the election," he said. The government's five-year term expires in November, 1981.

As for the possibility of violence after the no vote in the referendum, Pinard estimated at less than 50 per cent the possibility that there will be a resurgence of the Front de Liberation du Quebec (FLQ) — a pro-independence terrorist group active in the 1960s and early 1970s.

"The probability does not seem high but it is very difficult to say whether there will be violence or not. If democracy is prevented from expressing itself, we could have some.

"But the FLQ is disorganized now and they are not in fashion. They could reorganize but there would be a better chance of this if the PQ loses power."

As for the unrest late Tuesday evening which included a crowd of youthful yes supporters throwing rocks at windows as they headed through an English-speaking district of the city's west end, Pinard said he had predicted this would happen in private conversations in the last two weeks.

"I told people such an eruption could occur the evening of the vote if the no side were to win," he said.

"I said there would be some street riots because yes supporters would want to celebrate if they won. But if they were to lose, I knew they would feel hostility towards English-speaking people the same evening. I even said they might break windows in the west end."

Pinard's poll, conducted along with fellow McGill sociologist Richard Hamilton, was commissioned by Montreal's Le Devoir, Quebec City's Le Soleil and the Toronto Star.

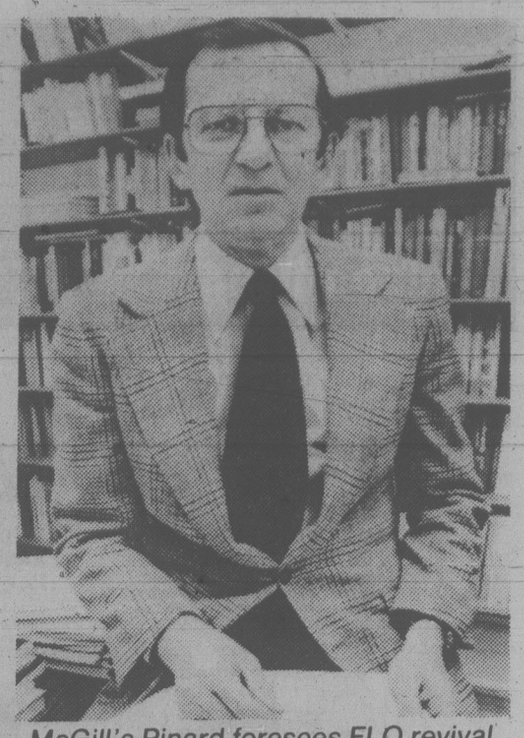
The survey included a projection that the no vote would be about 57 per cent compared with 43 per cent voting yes — compared with the final result of 59.5 per cent for the no and 40.5 percent for the yes.

Other polls indicated a higher proportion of voters in favor of the yes side, while Pinard said in an introduction to the poll that there was a good possibility of a 60-40 split.

He said it was difficult to determine how English- and French-speaking people would vote since anglophone voters who favored the yes side were reluctant to say so "because of the pressure they felt." French-speaking people who intended to vote no also felt pressure within their community to vote yes.

Pinard has been running up an enviable track record with his polls, which included one before the 1976 Quebec election that predicted the Parti Quebecois would be elected. "Our poll clearly predicted this would happen," he said.

He said he was very happy with the results of his poll released last week. "It was by far the closest."



McGill's Pinard foresees FLQ revival

Life of heart patient not for senior cyclist

CRAWSHAW . . . setting records at 80

By ELAINE McCLUSKEY

HALIFAX (CP) — Shortly after Harry Crawshaw of Vancouver suffered a heart attack at the age of 67 he realized the life of a inactive invalid wasn't for him.

"I decided one day to throw the nitroglycerin tablets out the window and go heavy into the physical training," he said in a recent interview.

Crawshaw's never looked back in the 13 years since his attack and the 80-year-old Superman is accomplishing feats many younger man could only dream of.

He's earned a third degree black belt in karate, completed an 1,500-kilometre cross-country ski journey over western mountains, run a marathon and cycled across Canada and back in five weeks.

Last week Crawshaw completed his latest unbelievable feat. He cycled from Vancouver to Halifax in 15 days — putting in an average of 190 kilometres a day.

Crawshaw, a Salvation Army officer, explains his motivation simply." I like a challenge. . When I say I'm going to do something I do it."

Crawshaw, who carried a tent and sleeping bag and spends most nights on the side of the road, says the toughest thing about his cross-country trip was the weather.

It rained most of the time. And while crossing the prairies Crawshaw found it so cold that he drove 73 hours without sleep. He came to a stop when his generator-run light overheated a tire and caused a blowout."

"I thought that I'd die when I fell asleep. But instead of dying I only took two hours sleep, got up fresh as anything and started out again."

The retired businessman says the 15-day trip shaved more than four days off a record set several years ago by a 23-year-old Vancouver man.

With that record tucked under his belt, the amazing octagenarian is taking time to catch his breath, making a quick visit to Newfoundland and preparing for another challenge.

He's jogging back to Vancouver to raise money for the Canadian Cancer Society. "I've decided it's time to do something for somebody else besides myself."

Crawshaw has constructed a small cart made of bicycle wheels, and ski poles to tow his gear behind him.

He says he'd like to meet up with another Canadian Cancer Society runner when he reaches southern Ontario. Terry Fox, an amputee with an artificial leg, is running from Newfoundland to British Columbia.

Crawshaw says he won't try and run any big hills but walk them and jog down the other side. He's in regular training. Besides instructing karate he runs five miles before breakfast and puts in another 25 to 50 during the day.

Like most Canadians, he led a fairly sedentary life through his middle years. But Crawshaw says he was a competitive runner in early life — just missing a berth on the 1932 Olympic team.

Crawshaw started his second athletic career with karate. He says people misunderstand the sport. "I don't go bruising anyone. I took it up for the mental and physical aspects."

He says most people he encountered on his bicyle trip were friendly although police in Quebec made him leave the main highway and continue on backroads. His clothes were also stolen along the way.

But people in Edmundston, N.B., gave hime a warm reception and paid for a motel room for the night and others paid for meals along the way.

His bike, a well-worn 10-speed held up well on the journey. Crawshaw says he "worked off" payments on the bike in B.C. When he couldn't afford the cost of the expensive machine, the company offered him landscaping work for a week and picked up half the bill themselves.

Provincial funds awarded

Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe has announced five grants to recreation and cultural organizations in Greater Victoria for equipment or facilities.

The Juan de Fuca recreation commission was given $105,530 to construct six tennis courts, a lacrosse box, installation of night lighting for a playing field, construction of a softball score shack and renovations to the Little League ball field, all at the main park off Sooke Road.

Victoria received a grant of $48,050 to develop a softball and soccer field in Topaz Park off Blanshard Street.

The Victoria Operatic Society received $25,449.50 to purchase two warehouses at 798 Fairview Road in Esquimalt for rehearsal and set construction.

This space will be laid out to match McPherson Playhouse stage so that productions can move easily to the theatre. It will also be available to other performing groups in the city.

The McPherson Playhouse was given $24,141.73 to purchase new lighting instruments and for repairs to the building's roof.

The Langham Court Theatre received $3,528.33 for the installation of sound equipment and curtains.

City food source of future

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber wants the B.C. government to establish an office of urban agriculture.

Barber said the office would help urban dwellers become partly responsible for their own food production because in 20 years there will be no choice but to produce food in cities.

Food can be grown on rooftops, in basements, in solar greenhouses, vacant lots and on Crown land, he said, adding it is not a frivolous proposal.

The office initially would be used by senior citizens, residents of co-op and public housing, and employees of buildings who want to put a garden on the roof, Barber said.

He said that at the turn of the century, the planet will be trying to house and feed seven billion people, and urban agriculture is the answer.

Arts display this weekend

The fine arts section of the Juan de Fuca Arts and Crafts guild will hold a two-day show starting Saturday.

It will be held in the Pacific Centre for Human Development at the end of Heatherbelle Road in Langford.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

The show and sale will feature at least 100 works from more than 36 artists.

Forest service workers' dispute threatens to end in strike action

VANCOUVER (CP) — The union that represents B.C. Forest Service employees in the southern interior says the provincial government has not dealt satisfactorily with members' concerns about the reorganization of the service.

The B.C. Government Employees Union released a statement Wednesday saying that after province-wide meetings last month, members gave the union executive the power to take job action to settle the dispute.

Jack Adams, director of BCGEU membership services, said the union is not satisfied with the Government Employee Relations Bureau proposals to deal with the long-disputed issues of early retirement, job vacancy, arbitrary transferring and the hiring and promotion of non-union and out-of-province personnel.

Forests ministry employees in the southern interior indicated Wednesday they would begin a two-day strike this morning to back up their concerns.

Disagreement has raged between the forests ministry and the BCGEU since reorganization plans were announced in 1979. Deputy forests minister Mike Apsey said the streamlining was implemented to make the service more efficient and to move decision-making from Victoria to the regional and ranger district offices.

Tough bill aids consumers

STILL RUNNING, but only just, a Washington State Highway Patrol officer wearing a mask steps out of his cruiser into several inches of volcanic ash in Ritzville, about 440 km east of Mt. St. Helens. The cruiser has kept going because of the truck air filter, marked "water", mounted on the front, but many other vehicles have succumbed to the effects of the ash — "like pouring sink cleaner through the carburator," according to one mechanic who tried to get an ash-damaged vehicle running.

Courts can authorize $2,000 compensation

Consumer compensation is the keynote of tough new government legislation introduced Wednesday.

The government's move will beef up protection for consumers and make it easier for them to collect compensation if they are victimized in the market place.

The Amendments to the Trade Practices Act, introduced by Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen would:

—Authorize courts to order defendants in consumer-related disputes to pay up to $2,000 to consumers who have suffered financial losses.

—Force motor dealers to display asking and list prices for all vehicles offered for sale and provide for enforcement of violations by private sellers who sell more than four cars a year.

(At present, dealers are required only to post prices on vehicles they advertise for sale, or when written representations are made.)

—And ensure that reasonable prominence is given to advertising disclaimers indicating the merchandise is available only in limited quantities.

The changes were welcomed by the Victoria business community.

"It's a major step forward," said Mayor Bill Tindall, former manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau.

"They should plug some of the gaps in the existing legislation."

Tindall said victims of unscrupulous trades practices have had little chance of getting their money back unless they were prepared to initiate separate and often costly civil action.

He said the changes should be particularly effective in ensuring persons who sign long-term contracts for recreational purposes such as dance studios and health spas will be better protected.

Current BBB manager Denny Ryan also applauded the amendments.

"Hopefully it will put more weight or credence to applications to the courts made by consumers."

Nielsen said the legislation will protect such consumers as someone who had television repairs done and found out that $300 of the work was unnecessary.

Under present legislation the repair company can be found guilty and fined, but the consumer is left on his own to sue for compensation.

Under the amendments, which still have to pass second and third readings in the house, the courts could order that the company reimburse the consumer.

Another amendment would permit the courts to decide whether a supplier has violated the legislation by exceeding a prior estimate when billing consumers.

"We receive numerous complaints every year from consumers who say they were given a work estimate much lower than the final bill," Nielsen said.

"Rather than set arbitrary limits in the Trade Practices Act, we decided to let the courts determine if a supplier's bill exceeds his estimate by an unreasonable amount."

Statutes affected by the amendments include the Motor Dealers Licensing Act, Debt Collection Act, Mortgage Brokers Act, Society Act, Securities Act and Vancouver Stock Exchange Act.

The legislation would also increase to four from two the number of public governors on the Vancouver Stock Exchange and transfer regulation-making powers under the Securities Act from the cabinet to the superintendent of brokers.

Boycott setback for Carter

Newsday

WASHINGTON — Only two days before the deadline for accepting invitations to the Moscow Olympics, it appears that President Carter's call for a boycott is being rejected by most major Western European nations — a significant diplomatic setback for the United States and for Carter.

Of the Western European countries, only West Germany, Norway, Liechtenstein and Monaco are participating in the U.S.-initiated boycott. Also, Canada, China, and Argentina have said they will not go to the games, as have many Third World nations, including Kenya, Egypt, Pakistan, Thailand and Somalia.

But there are strong indications West Germany might change its mind.

And, alarmed by this development, Canada is applying pressure to prevent the U.S.-led initiative from crumbling, External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said today in Ottawa.

The West German Olympic Committee, under pressure from athletes and sporting associations to attend the games, is reconsidering its boycott decision taken earlier this month. MacGuigan said he feared this would weaken the boycott.

Over-all figures showed that as of Tuesday, 58 nations had said they would participate and 47 had said they would not.

Just in the last week, the Olympic committees in Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Ireland, Sweden and Austria decided to send teams to the Moscow games, joining the French and British committees.

U.S. foreign policy officials said Wednesday that they were continuing to pressure the allies, particularly the French, British and Japanese, but that they were coming to the conclusion that the boycott would have mixed results at best.

French sources said a reversal was highly unlikely, particularly in light of the nasty diplomatic exchanges this week between Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. (For earlier story on this dispute, see page 38.)

Many Carter administration foreign policy officials admit that, if there is no dramatic change by Saturday, the situation will be a serious blow to America's — and Carter's — prestige abroad. Coming soon after European rebuffs on economic sanctions toward Iran for holding American hostages, it only adds to tensions within the Atlantic alliance.

The purpose of the boycott was to send a clear, unequivocal message to the Soviet Union that the Unit-

Fires spread in Ontario, the Prairies

Times News Services

FORT HOPE, Ont. — Forest fires were raging across Northern Ontario and the Prairie provinces today as emergency crews worked to evacuate the residents of at least three small communities.

As forest fires swept through heavy bushland in several areas of Northern Ontario, emergency procedures were brought into operation and people were evacuated from remote communities and isolated summer homes.

The major evacuation was in the lumbering centre of Fort Hope, 350 kilometres north of Thunder Bay where five aircraft — three 748s and two Hercules — were pressed into service to fly almost 600 persons to safety in Geraldton and Nakina.

As the last of the people were flown from the community the 35,000-acre fire was still getting closer and had moved to within 12 kilometres.

About 120 members of the community were elderly or ill and needed special attention on the flight out. The local school has been closed.

In the Dryden area where a fire sweeping through 30,000 thousand acres of jack pine and spruce forced the closing of the Trans-Canada Highway, 145 persons were taken out of the village of McIntosh and widely-separated summer homes.

Special fire-fighting crews have been sent into both these areas in an effort to slow down the fires, which are more serious than natural resources persons can remember so early in the season.

At Foleyet, north of Kapuskasing, the Joe Bink gold mine has been evacuated as a 4,000-acre fire burns out of control.

Meanwhile, for the northern Manitoba of Snow Lake, anything but a southeast wind could spell disaster, in the middle of four forest fires threatening to join forces.

Winds were steady from the southeast and the immediate forecast was for

Right royal steal!

LONDON (UPI) — More than 30 guests at a charity dinner went hungry because the fish course ended up in Buckingham Palace.

Centre-piece of the meal Tuesday was to have been a rare 26-pound sturgeon caught off the Cornish coast and purchased by a local hotel operator.

But under a 650-year law passed by Edward II, the sturgeon is a royal fish and it is the prerogative of the sovereign to enjoy any caught in British waters. According to custom, hotelier Bruce Henderson offered the fish to the Queen — and to his surprise she accepted.

The meal at a charity dinner had to be cancelled but Buckingham Palace said it was all a mix-up.

The queen waived her right to the fish when she learned it had been promised for charity, but by then it was too late and the sturgeon was already in the kitchens the palace.

Post-referendum euphoria pervades Parliament Hill

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The words were ordinary and the ideas unoriginal, but a rare spirit of goodwill and celebration engulfed the House of Commons Wednesday as the three national leaders pledged to set aside their differences to re-write the ground rules of Confederation.

Political veterans compared the day-after-the-referendum mood to the spirit that pervaded Parliament 16 years ago when Lester Pearson gave the country a new flag.

It was as if Ottawa needed to breathe one huge, happy sigh of relief after the two-month struggle over Quebec's destiny that had ended in triumph the night before for supporters of a united Canada.

Everybody congratulated everybody. MPs applauded a string of referendum actors from Quebec's leading man, Claude Ryan, to the thousands of faceless separatists who had just witnessed the collapse of their vision for Quebec.

In a spontaneous outburst of unanimity Parliament decided it was, at last, time to make O Canada the country's official national anthem. MPs competed with one another to find ways to assure Quebecers they were valued and respected by the rest of the country.

As one round of applause succeeded the next, the 280-odd MPs in the House seemed to surprise even themselves with their enthusiasm to get to work on the tough, failure-ridden problem of re-writing the country's outdated 113-year-old constitution.

Trudeau promised no miracles, no surprising new initiatives. His only immediate plan was to send Justice Minister Jean Chretien off to the provincial capitals immediately to feel out the premiers on the possibility of reaching agreement on a flexible, modern constitution.

Chretien barrelled out of the Commons after the speeches, full of good intentions and planning to hit Toronto and Winnipeg before nightfall. He looked like a man in a hurry and wanted everybody to see it.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark urged the government to take advantage of the "climate of near-celebration" across the country.

"For the first time in a long time, the public of Canada is now interested in constitutional renewal," he said with a trace of wonder.

The endlessly tangled issue of changing the constitution to please all Canadians has been tackled by every prime minister since Louis St. Laurent. Each time so many roadblocks, deadlocks and complications have developed that ordinary citizens have been left utterly bored by the whole affair.

"Our spirit must be one of reconciliation and imagination," said NDP leader Ed Broadbent.

And for one afternoon, in the warm afterglow of Quebec's historic decision to stick with Canada, that spirit seemed possible.

Rate hits 11.8

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate fell today to 11.83 per cent from 13.34 per cent last week, the lowest level since July, 1979.

The expected sharp drop, for the sixth week in a row, was brought about by the pro-federalist result of the Quebec referendum and the continued drop in U.S. interest rates this week.

Langford recreation plan riles few

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A proposal to turn Western Speedway in Langford into one of Greater Victoria's largest recreation areas met with almost no opposition at a public hearing Wednesday.

The expansion plan includes such facilities as an outdoor theatre, a bowling, curling and indoor recreation centre, a tennis club, a recreational vehicle campsite, a swimming pool, a dog race track — if the sport is ever legalized — a go-cart track, a skate board bowl and picnic grounds

Speedway operator Tony Mortel told about 25 people at the Juan de Fuca recreation centre the Speedway plans to carry out the development over a period of five to 10 years.

Mortel said the facilities proposed might change as the project develops, depending on what the public wants for recreation over the next few years.

At present, the 64-acre site has an auto racing track and grandstand and Mortel said the outdoor theatre will be the next project developed.

Earl Pallister, one of two residents who spoke against the proposal, said the development would create serious traffic problems on Millstream Road, the only access to the property.

Pallister also said he is concerned about the noise generated by the motorcycle and go-cart tracks.

But other nearby residents spoke in favor of the expansion, saying it will increase the tax base and provide recreation facilities for the community's youth.

"I think it's something we could be proud of — something that wouldn't be found in downtown Victoria," said Lyle Kahl, who helped develop the expansion proposal.

Langford fire chief Al Le Quesne said he supports the proposal because there is nothing for the young people to do in the area.

Le Quesne said Millstream Road may be widened soon and would accommodate increased traffic.

But Pallister, who was Langford's previous regional director, still objected.

"In all the years we've been considering developments, tax base has never been given as the reason to go ahead — that's the poorest argument of all," he said.

The phased development of the site would be controlled by development permits issued before construction of each stage but Pallister questioned the amount of control the regional board would have.

"Mr. Chairman, I've sat in your place and I know just how limited you are to control these things," he said.

A BOATING PARADISE.

COHO SALMON ON THE FLY.

TRAILS to ADVENTURE

Vancouver Island just has to be the outdoor paradise for all of Canada. There is something to do in the outdoors every day of the year and the variety seems endless.

SALMON fishing, trout and bass fishing, steelheading, camping, hunting, boating, hiking are the traditional activities when one thinks about the outdoors... and opportunities abound.

But you don't have to do any of those to enjoy a full outdoor life on Vancouver Island.

MANY ISLANDERS hardly leave their homes to participate. They find their gardens and patio barbecues provide them with a full outdoor life.

Others enjoy outdoor activities like golf on the scores of courses on the Island - some of them world famous.

Those who like crowds and entertainment take in the auto races at Victoria's Western Speedway on Saturday nights or the numerous horse shows, the occasional rodeo, and the hundreds of outdoor sporting events held throughout the year.

BEACH PATHS and wooded trails are a magnet to joggers and horseback riders and the sport-minded can play tennis the year-round.

Vancouver Island is surrounded by sandy beaches and rugged coastline, a delight for beachcombers, swimmers, clam diggers and hikers.

There are scores of private campgrounds and provincial parks with wilderness-type campsites.

For the more rugged there are more than 2,000 miles of logging roads which recreational vehicle enthusiasts with their campers, motorhomes, four-wheel drives and even trail bikes can use for exploring, fishing, hunting, camping.

HIKERS ENJOY a variety of walking terrains ... from the Elk River alpine ridge trail which leads to 7,219-foot-high Mount Golden Hinde in Strathcona Park to the sea-level 45-mile West Coast Trail.

HUNDREDS of other short and long trails require various skills, from seashore strolls along Victoria's Dallas Road waterfront to the day-long hikes to be found in the Capital Regional District's East Sooke and other parks. Island Mountain Ramblers and the Outdoor Club of Victoria, which has published several hiking trail books, are always ready to help new hikers.

BICYCLISTS, too, enjoy the lovely outdoor setting of Vancouver Island and sometimes make ferry trips to the unique Canadian Gulf Islands to cycle the country roads in a world that almost seems out of reality in this day and age.

TO ENJOY Vancouver Island you really should have access to a boat, either for year-round salmon fishing or for cruising and sailing in the sheltered waters between Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands, with camping trips to the many marine parks or isolated little bays and inlets.

But, if you don't own a boat it doesn't present a big problem. There are plenty of places to rent boats and/or guides.

CHARTER BOATS, sail or power, are available for holiday cruises through coastal waters.

There are also charter boat operators who provide day cruises to interesting coastal spots for scuba divers or sightseers.

If you travel to Ucluelet you can even get in on a charter that will take you to the deepsea salmon fishing banks.

CANOEING is also popular in the lakes, rivers and saltchuck and the Victoria Canoe and Kayak Club is prepared to help newcomers get started and join members on organized canoeing trips.

Hundreds of lakes and rivers on Vancouver Island beckon to boaters, canoers, water skiers, anglers and campers to come and enjoy them.

This supplement has been designed to get you started on enjoying the outdoor fun available on Vancouver Island. We hope it puts you on the trail to new adventures.

Preference Is Key In Choosing An RV

What kind of vehicle is best for recreational use in the outdoors?

The answer to that question is: Whatever vehicle suits your personal needs ... and that can be anything from a tiny Volkswagen beetle or a trail bike, through the range of trailers, campers, luxurious motorhomes and four-wheel drive all-terrain trucks.

IT ALL DEPENDS upon your activities and it is all a matter of compromise. No one recreational vehicle is ideal for all purposes.

A TRAVEL TRAILER is the answer for family campers who plan to drive to one spot and set up housekeeping for a week-end or longer. A 12-foot cartopper can always be transported on top of the car.

The newish fifth-wheel trailers for use with pickup trucks are the last word in comfort ... almost like mobile homes.

You can drop your trailer at a base camp and use the tow vehicle for travel to the outdoor fun spots.

But a trailer isn't any use to the fisherman who wants to tow a boat to the recreation spots, or to an explorer who likes to keep travelling and make loop trips.

MOTORHOMES are great for travellers and they come as luxurious as you wish, some quite comfortable to live in the year-round. You can tow a big boat with a motorhome and you can carry a cartopper on the top with aid of special lifters.

But once you are finished travelling for the day in a motorhome and you set up camp, you must stay put or pack everything up again before you move.

The answer to mobility with a motorhome is to take along bicycles, trail bikes or mopeds for exploring the logging roads, outdoor trails and finding those special fishing and hunting spots.

MINI-MOTORHOMES are usually classed as self contained vehicles in the under 20-foot class. They can be the walk-through camper-top type or the new wide-body aluminum skin types like Vanguard's new Security cruising van which bristles with advanced technology. They have the same advantages and disadvantages of motorhomes, except they are suitable for every-day use and downtown driving. But, they lack a little of the comfort that may be found in their bigger brothers.

PICKUP TRUCKS with piggy-back campers are the nearest thing to a compromise and they come in all sizes from canopy tops to huge campertops equipped with all amenities you find in the motor homes, including galley unit, stove with oven, refrigerator, dinette, flush toilet, shower, even a bathtub, swivelling seats, stereo, television, full-sized beds, or whatever meets your fancy.

You can tow a boat with a camper setup and you can always drop the camper and use the pickup truck for transportation to the outdoor fun spots.

VAN CONVERSIONS are becoming increasingly popular and they can double as town vehicles as well as recreational vehicles.

You can tow a boat with a van or you can cartop a small boat.

Probably in no other field of RVs has there been so much advancement as with camper van conversions, which started with the Volkswagen vans, which are as popular now as they were when they first came out in the early 1960s.

Today vans, which are available in most makes of vehicles, are nearly as comfortable as the mini-motorhomes.

Nowadays one could easily live comfortably in a van for a month-long trip ... and they are just as suitable for Sunday drives or commuting to work ... ideal for the one-car family.

FOUR-WHEEL drive vehicles are for the young and adventurous and for the serious hunter and fisherman. They will go almost anywhere.

They are a far cry from the early four-wheel Jeeps of the Second World War.

Today the four-wheel drive vehicles may be purchased in the tiny get-about size, handy for day-trippers who want to take to the bush and the logging roads, as well as the big truck size that can carry piggy-back campers, tow trailers and boats, or be converted for overnight sleeper-camper accommodation. They also can be fine-looking vehicles suitable for town use and family trips. Some regular model cars now have four-wheel drive.

More than anything else the four-wheel drive vehicle probably symbolizes the macho outdoorsman

TENT TRAILERS are gaining increasing interest these days because of gas costs. They are low profile, can be towed by even the small compact cars, and it is easy to carry a cartopper boat on top of them.

They can be luxurious or simple according to your taste and your pocket books.

Simply, they are canvas-sided tents carried on a trailer.

When you arrive at your campsite you simply flip open the sides or crank up the top and you have a full-size camping rig, not much different in amenities from the small travel trailers.

The low profile while travelling offers the least wind resistance and that translates into lower gas consumption. They also cost much less than travel trailers, motorhomes or pickup camper outfits.

STATION WAGONS, small or full-size, are fine for family tent campers and it is quite feasible to throw in a mattress and use them for overnight sleeping accommodation. You can use the tailgate for setting up a camp kitchen.

And there is nothing wrong with the family car for touring the recreational spots. Most of today's logging roads are quite suitable for use by any car.

MOTORBIKES can also be used for travelling to the recreation spots and trail bikes and mopeds are the in-thing for taking along mounted on your recreational vehicles, so you can use them for exploring the rugged spots after you arrive.

Trail bikes add versatility to outdoor trips and they are almost a must for the serious outdoorsman.

TENTS shouldn't be forgotten for camping accommodation.

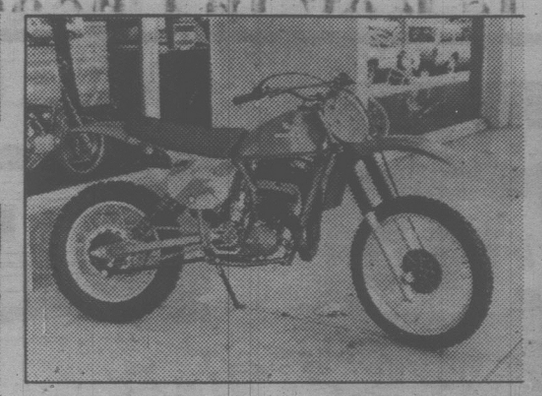
A small tent is almost a must on an early or late season backpacking trip.

Styles of tents have changed drastically and now range from the simple one-man tent for backpackers to the luxurious family-style tents, complete with separate room compartments. Some tents are even specially designed for cold-weather use.

There is no great storage problem with tents ... you can take them to places where it is impossible to take an RV vehicle, they can be carried in any vehicle, even on a bicycle or on a backpack and they are the cheapest of all outdoor accommodation, which is a major consideration.

MANY RVers carry a tent with them on their travels ... to use as auxiliary accommodation, to take out temporary ownership of a particular camping space, or to use for extended trips beyond where they can take their RV vehicle.

LIGHTWEIGHT TRAILERS ... can be towed by smaller vehicles.



TRAIL BIKES ... auxiliary transportation for impossible places.

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVES ... go anywhere for macho outdoorsmen.

Age of Propane Has Arrived

The age of propane has arrived in the recreation vehicle field and there are now RVs on Vancouver Island operating with both gasoline and propane gas ... all it takes is a flip of a lever to change from one to the other.

TWO DAYS and from $1,500 to $2,000 is all that is required to convert an RV or private car to use both gasoline and propane and the job can be done in Victoria through RV sales companies.

Frank Wille, who is pioneering propane conversions through West Coast Carburettion, says "people do not have to be afraid of propane. A converted engine is easy to operate and maintain. Propane is safe and a very clean fuel. It should double the life expectancy of an engine and any unit of any year-age can be converted."

On new vehicles there must be a break-in period with gasoline for at least 2,000 miles before propane is used. But the conversion can be installed on a new vehicle and after 2,000 miles you just have to pull a lever to use propane.

CANADIANS planning trips through the United States where gasoline is more expensive and harder to get would find it advantageous to fill up with gasoline in Canada and then when in the United States use propane at a 25 per cent to 50 per cent saving.

Vehicles get approximately the same miles a gallon with propane as they do with gasoline and propane is usually a little cheaper.

Various size propane tanks can be installed and that has a bearing on the cost of conversion. A 40-gallon propane tank is feasible and that would take you the same number of miles as 40 gallons of gasoline.

NO SHORTAGE of propane fuel is foreseen for Canada, says Wille, "because propane comes out of natural gas and we have natural gas in abundance."

Winnebago Industries entered the propane-gasoline field last year when it offered dual fuel units as an option on its motorhomes. This year Winnebago has gone one better by offering propane conversion kits for installation on vans, pickup trucks and motorhomes.

The kits include LP gas regulator, an air valve assembly, LP gas diffuser plate, gasoline shutoff valve, LP gas fuel lock, a fuel selection switch with a control panel ... and can be obtained for around $1,000.

PROPANE, or liquified petroleum gas, LP gas, or butane as it is also called, are light hydrocarbons extracted from natural gas or produced during the refining of crude oil. About 70 per cent of LP gas is obtained from natural gas.

Liquifying the gas provides a highly efficient and safe method for storing and transporting propane. As a liquid it occupies 1/270th the space of the gas and it returns to its gas state when released to the atmosphere under normal pressure.

ALL RVers are familiar with propane gas, because they use it for cooking, heating, hot water heating, refrigerators, some toilets, and lighting.

LP gas is heavier than air, clean-burning and negligible pollutants are produced during combustion. It is also odorless and artificial odorant is added for safety so its presence can be detected by smell.

It is one of the most versatile sources of energy, as it is portable, safe and easy to regulate. Its minimal emmissions during combustion make it especially desirable as an engine fuel.

Propane has an octane rating over 100, which is higher than most gasoline and results in smooth engine operation. It is clean burning and virtually free from combustion odors and fumes. Complete combustion extends engine life with little or no carbon and sludge build-up in heads, ring grooves, cylinder walls or in spark plugs.

RECREATION VEHICLE DESIGN REVOLUTION

Recreation vehicles are facing a design revolution with emphasis on lighter vehicles, fuel economy and especially luxury ... and those are challenges to any builder.

ENGINEERING innovations are leading to lighter bodies and improved fuel consumption in travel trailers, campers and motorhomes. And Canada, with federal government encouragement, is about to lead the way in design of a new lightweight van.

One brand of 22-foot trailer available this year has been pared down to 1,900 pounds, from 3,600 pounds. In the same line, the 19-footer now weighs in at 1,700 pounds, half its former weight.

SOME OF THE weight-saving is accomplished by utilizing honeycombed resin-impregnated wood-fibre and aluminum skins for sidewalls, using less wood for cabinets, making table tops out of rigid foam components and switching to aluminum propane bottles.

Motorhomes are starting to undergo wind tunnel tests to reduce wind resistance.

WIDE BODY van conversions which now come on Dodge, Chevrolet, GMC and Ford trucks are specially designed for wind resistance coupled with the last word in comfort.

They even feature swivel chairs, plush carpeting and a choice of layouts to sleep and travel with four people. Oven, four-burner stoves, stainless steel sinks, hot and cold running water, three-mode refrigerators, forced air propane furnaces, ac/dc switches, flush toilets, wash basins and showers are pretty well standard in all recreational vehicles nowadays.

BUT, YOU CAN also have microwave ovens, power plants, piped-in stereo, color TV, even video-recorders complete with sound color cameras to record trips for later showing on home TVs, adult-sized bathtubs, mother-in-law bedroom compartments, even kid's rooms as optional equipment.

THE VOLKSWAGEN Westphalia camper van which was first in the field of van conversions is as popular today as it was when it was introduced in the late 1950s and early 1960s and is still a favorite with the serious family camper who likes to reach hard-to-get-to places.

For those who seek more comfort, but the versatility of a town car on weekdays and recreational vehicle on weekends, there are now raised-roof vans with almost all the comforts of home, ranging in the $14,000 to $18,000 bracket.

The aerodynamic design of the van tops ensure low wind resistance and the fibreglass roofs are specially constructed to carry a canoe or light boat.

NO-FRILL RVs are also available and Frank Wille, who has spent 10 years specializing in RV design, has worked with Raven manufacturers to come out with an 18½-foot mini-motorhome that is cheaper and more economic and ideally suited for hunters, fishermen and campers.

It has the bare-bones necessities of a camper on a Dodge 1½-ton chassis, 318 cubic-inch motor and 127-foot wheelbase and sells in the $15,000 bracket. It has oven, flush toilet, three-way fridge, shower and furnace, which today are considered necessities, but the frills have been eliminated ... and one thing that means is more space.

It may not be the unit for mother who seeks all the comforts of home-away-from-home, but it is a versatile unit for the tough outdoorsman.

They are made in Victoria and are available for rental or sale.

OTHER BIGGER and more plush motorhomes can be more luxurious than many family living rooms and they range up to $30,000 and higher ... and those who own them say they are worth every cent.

It is quite common for owners of the bigger motorhomes to tow a small car behind their recreational vehicle when on an extended trip and it can be quite handy when settled down at a camping spot for a couple of days, or even a month or so, as some of the year-round travellers do. But, if you plan to tow a car be sure it is not an automatic transmission vehicle.

TOW VEHICLES should always be equipped with transmission coolers and transmission shift kits. These can be installed on any vehicle, but be sure to get the right cooler or right kit for the job intended and the vehicle to be used.

Transmission shift kits are uniquely designed to re-calibrate the transmission to shift far more efficiently.

MANUFACTURERS say that "in terms of performance and durability for an automatic transmission, the most important improvement that can be made is to re-program the control assemblies." Most kits offer shift command that allows you to shift back to low at any speed, but they also retain fully automatic shifting in the "D" position. A re-programming kit, manufacturers say, "will at least double the life of friction materials in the transmission ... the difference between a few months service without repair and several years."

Beat Inflation With Tent Trailer

How to keep on camping in the face of soaring inflation and possible gasoline shortages is a problem facing cost conscious Canadian families.

But, camp they will, say close observers of outdoor recreation.

Canadian Coleman Company spokesmen see a return to tent camping, a move that was noted in 1979.

SHORTER TRIPS and longer stays in one place also are finding favor.

But, for real cost cutting without depriving mom and the kids of the comfort and convenience facilities they may have become accustomed to, evidence points to the fold-down or push-out camper and more use of compact cars and vans to tow them or carry them.

TWO SOUND reasons for growing interest in the canvas-sided campers are that they tow effortlessly and practically double in size when the campsite is reached.

What mjnutes earlier was a rectangular box on wheels, expands quickly into a recreational vehicle with sleeping and eating accommodations for five to seven persons.

TENT TRAILERS may not offer all the conveniences of a $25,000 motorhome, but neither do they bear a close resemblance to old-style wall or umbrella tents.

The camping trailer sets up in minutes and offers excellent protection from wind, rain and pesky insects.

MOST TENT trailers have a galley, with sink, running water, propane fueled cook range, folding dinette table, portable icebox or fridge, electric lights, deep foam mattresses and many other amenities.

OPTIONAL equipment includes such items as an add-on screen room that doubles the trailer's floor area, awnings, a forced warm air furnace with wall thermostat, boat and luggage rack, even a roof-mounted air conditioner.

A tent trailer may be towed by the smallest of compacts and its low profile (usually less than four feet) greatly reduces wind resistance, side sway and offers good over-the-top visibility.

BUT THE BIG feature is the tent trailer's minimal effect on gas useage, about one extra gallon of gasoline in 100 miles.

FOLD-DOWN TENT that slips into bed of mini-size pickup truck has been designed by Coleman.

Campers Ready To Pay

The average Canadian camper will travel 2,545 miles in 1980, spend more time camping, and be prepared to pay as much as $1.50 a gallon for gasoline to get there, according to a recent survey.

The survey of KOA Canada Ltd., among campers in its 56 franchised campgrounds across the country, is the first of its kind in Canada. It follows the pattern of Kampground of America surveys taken in the U.S.A.

Seventy per cent of the sample responses tabulated indicated that replacement of the presently-owned vehicle would be with a full-sized car or truck capable of towing a large trailer. Thirty-two per cent said they would be willing to pay up to $2.50 a gallon of gas and a further 20 per cent said it didn't matter one way or the other.

The average number of nights respondents expect to camp in the 1980 season is 28, up from 26.5 for 1979. Of these nights, 22 will be in Canada and six in the United States.

KOA spokesman Don Lowe said: "We feel this indicates positive growth trends for the camping industry."

The survey disclosed that the majority of campers using KOA campgrounds are in the 25 to 44-year-old age bracket and as much as 50 per cent of the chain's business came from those using tents and fold-down trailers.

Easy Living In Wilderness

So other campers get all the good shady spots? No matter. Roll down the awning, plug in the air conditioner, and tap the cooler for a cool refreshing drink.

Sounds like easy living? It is if your RV is equipped with the latest accessories in addition to the basics for eating, sleeping and just plain relaxing.

NO MATTER how much goes into the modern fold-down camping trailer, travel trailer or motorhome, there's always a demand for accessories.

A camper without a few well-chosen options is like buying a new car "as is."

Many of the available accessories are directly tied to the owner's lifestyle. Not everyone, for example, wants a boat rack. And still others would have no use for a bicycle rack. But both are available this season.

OTHER POPULAR accessories this year are a hangup vanity with mirror, paper towel rack, cup dispenser, toothbrush holder and towel hooks, and dressing room drapes for privacy.

MINI-TRIPS CLOSE TO HOME

Gasoline prices got you worried? There is a simple answer! Try mini-trips close to home, or a vacation almost in your own backyard.

SOOKE AREA, 36 miles (58 km) west of Victoria is a good spot for a base camp to use for mini-trips.

You can camp at Pedder Bay Marina; Cheanuh Marina at Becher Bay, off the East Sooke Road; at Pacific Lions off Becher Bay Road; at Sunny Shores Resort in Sooke's Saseenos area; at Sooke Harbor Marina.

And boaters should note that Sunny Shores has recently installed new wharfage for more than 100 boats, completely serviced with electricity and water ... and there is still space available.

All of these places are salmon fishing resorts with launching ramps, boats and tackle. But they may also be used as a base for Sooke area explorations, either by car, bicycle, moped, or on foot.

Fish in the mornings and evenings when winds are light on the water and explore in the afternoons.

HIKERS will find East Sooke Regional Park a delight and there are enough trails to keep vacationers busy for two or three days. The park can be reached by turning left off the Sooke Road by the 17-Mile House (Royal Ensign Hotel) and travelling to the end of Gillespie Road. Then turn right for the Pike Road western entrance and parking area, or left and up Becher Bay Road past Pacific Lions Marina for the eastern entrance and parking area. You can also reach the park by travelling the Metchosin-Rocky Point-East Sooke Road.

MOST POPULAR of the trails is the one that skirts along the rugged waterfront where you are able to explore tiny islets you can jump to at low tide, watch the sport fishing fleet in action, maybe even see killer whales or sea lions passing by. You can even take along a line and spin cast for salmon from the rocks near Beechey Head.

CLAM DIGGERS will find lots of little neck and butter clams off the mouth of the Sooke River at low tides ... that is the Sooke Harbor side of Billings (Jacksons) Spit, or on the inside of Whiffen Spit, under the rocks at about the centre of the Spit.

SHRIMPING is good in the deep hole in Sooke Basin in late September, through December.

Crab pots may be set in Sooke Harbor and Basin and off beaches like Gordon Beach and French Beach.

Low tides are ideal for beach walks and there are fossils at Kirby Creek beach.

Whiffen Spit, Sooke Bay Beach, Gordon Beach and French Beach provincial park are all good beachcombing and rockhounding beaches. Reach French Beach by a short trail which starts at the parking area, 13.4 miles from Sooke along the West Coast Road.

CANOERS will find some excellent canoeing water in Sooke Basin and Sooke Harbor and they can launch at Sunny Shores or from Sooke Harbor Marinas. There is also some good searun cutthroat trout fishing in the harbor and basin.

SOOKE POTHOLES, on the Sooke River, reached by turning right just after passing Milnes Landing Store and before Sooke River bridge, are a major attraction the year-round — for swimming in summer and steelheading in winter. There is a nice picnic ground where there are deep river pools and a sandpool upstream, followed by a long falls. But, parking can be a problem in mid-summer.

On the west side of Sooke River bridge turn right for the Sooke Museum and Sooke River Flats park where All Sooke Day is held in July, and horseshows and other activities nearly every weekend.

JORDAN RIVER, 20 miles west of Sooke, is an interesting place to visit. Rayonier has provided a little picnic area beside the beach just before the bridge and there is an interesting pub on the other side of the river.

The Pacific breakers crash in over the shallow beach at Jordan River and when the surf is running the surfers don their wet suits and take out their surfboards to ride the breakers ... just as they do in Hawaii. Great to watch.

ON THE WAY to Jordan River you will find an interesting trail that leads to Sandcut Creek and 2.6 miles west (along the Port Renfrew Road) from Jordan River is China Beach provincial park and 3.7 miles west of Jordan River is the Mystic Beach trail.

Fishing Big Business In Victoria Region

Fishing is big business in the Greater Victoria region and the importance to economy is about evenly divided between sport and commercial fishing.

Approximately 21 per cent of total sport angling effort in British Columbia and 21.4 per cent of the province's sport salmon catch occur in Greater Victoria waters, with 45,260 resident anglers and 10,480 visitors participating in Greater Victoria angling in 1978.

GREATER Victoria derives $18 million a year net income from sport fishing activities, $15.98 million from commercial fishing activities and another $5.41 million from fish processing plants, for a total of $39.4 million.

Those are the facts presented in a 1978 study made on Fisheries in Greater Victoria, prepared by K. van Western and Associates for the provincial environment department.

THE REPORT says sport fishing expenditures in Greater Victoria amount to $30.72 million a year. For every dollar spent by sport fishermen an estimated 37 to 68 cents results in new income to someone else in the region. It estimates at least $11.25 million direct income comes from sport fishing expenditures and that another $6.75 million is generated in indirect income in other sectors of the economy.

Sport fishermen are big spenders.

BREAKDOWN of sport fishing expenditures in 1978 showed $4.25 million on food and lodging; $5.5 million on transportation by car, ferry and air; $1.32 million on fishing services; $2.97 million on fishing gear; $6.59 million on boat operating costs; $1.56 million on other costs, for a total of $22.19 million, of which researchers estimated $16.25 million was spent in Greater Victoria.

MAJOR SPORT FISHING related purchases included $13.5 million for boats, motors and accessories; $4.5 million for camping equipment; $3.44 million for special vehicles like ATV's and campers; $6.93 million for recreation land and buildings; $568,000 for other expenditures, for a total of $28.94 million of which the researchers estimated $14.47 million was spent in Greater Victoria.

Half Million Anglers

A 1975 federal recreational survey estimates 204,404 anglers owned boats with a market value of $432.1 million, which they used in 1975 for 5.4 million days of recreation. They spent 1.8 million of those days fishing in freshwater and 1.5 million days on the saltchuck. About 61.3 per cent of their time was spent fishing.

A NEW SURVEY, soon to released, estimates there were 423,000 tidal sport fishermen in British Columbia in 1979, 340,000 of them adults. They fished for salmon, crabs, shrimps, clams, bottom fish and some were scuba divers.

The new preliminary survey estimates anglers averaged 10 fishing days a year and on the average caught seven salmon in a year.

MOST POPULAR type of boat, according to the 1975 survey, was the outboard, of which there were 75,577 owners, with a fleet valued at $94.3 million and they spent 2.1 million days of boating recreation, about evenly divided between fresh and saltwater.

ALTHOUGH there were fewer inboard-outboard boat owners they mostly used their boats on the saltwater. There were 10,051 inboard-outboard owners with boats valued at $88.9 million and they spent 488,600 recreation boating days. But since 1975 the popularity of the inboard-outboard has soared and the owner-number must have at least tripled, along with the dollar value.

OUTBOARDERS spent 58 per cent of their boating time fishing and inboard-outboarders 68.1 per cent of their time fishing.

Some 7,215 inboard boat owners, with a boat market value of $65.1 million used their boats for 250,700 recreation days, with only 39.2 per cent of those days for fishing.

THERE WERE 25,051 rowboat owners, 28,073 canoe owners and 7,213 sailboat owners ... and the ownership of sailboats and canoes also must have skyrocketed since 1975.

Spent $40 To Catch

In 1975 some 209,000 saltwater anglers in British Columbia spent $33.5 million to catch 1.5 million salmon, which comes to $22.33 for each salmon, regardless of size.

But, to that direct expenditure, can be added $225 million for equipment and property, used in whole or in part for sports fishing.

Those disclosures come from a 1975 survey of sport fishing made by recreational branch of federal fisheries ... and with soaring inflation since 1975 it is more likely that sport anglers are spending more than $40 to catch a salmon.

The survey estimated that B.C. residents average nine salmon a year and non-residents four fish, for an overall average of eight fish an angler.

One Elusive Salmon

A provincial fish and wildlife review of resource values of freshwater fishing in British Columbia in 1976-77 estimated 290,000 anglers fished 3,915,000 days and spent $103,004,000, or an average of $394.65 an angler.

Hatcheries Ensure Fish for Sportsmen

Coastwise the salmon fishing outlook this year is not bright.

But sport fishermen in Juan de Fuca and Georgia Strait waters can look forward to some excellent fishing ... largely because stocks of coho and chinooks returning to the Capilano, Big Qualicum, Rosewall Creek, Puntledge and Quinsam hatcheries ensure ample fish for sportsmen.

LAST FALL the largest escapement of chinook salmon in the history of the Big Qualicum River returned from Strait of Georgia waters — some 8,200 heavyweight chinooks, one went 53 pounds. And hatchery manager Dick Harvey expects an even bigger catch of Big Qualicum chinooks by commercial and sport fishermen this year.

For each chinook that comes back to the river at least four are caught by commercial or sport fishermen, he explains. "That is what we raise them for."

HATCHERY FISH provide a rosy outlook for the future for Gulf of Georgia sport anglers. Scheduled release from the Big Qualicum this spring included three million chinook fingerlings into the Big Qualicum, up from 2.2 million in 1979; one million coho smolts into the Big Qualicum; 65,000 steelhead smolts into the Big Qualicum, Little Qualicum, and Englishman River with some of the eggs coming from those rivers; and 55 million chum fingerlings into Big Qualicum.

Some 500,000 chinooks have been raised in Big Qualicum hatchery from Little Qualicum eggs and will be released in the Little Qualicum, along with 52 million chum to be raised in the new Little Qualicum rearing channel.

BUT THAT ISN'T all. Some one million summer chinook and 236,000 fall chinook, some of them super smolts, were raised in the Puntledge hatchery, as well as 250,000 coho smolts and 20,000 steelhead smolts; from Robertson Creek some 6.4 million chinooks, 500,000 coho and 50,000 steelhead for release into Alberni Inlet to provide fishing for west coast commercial and sport fishermen; from the Quinsam hatchery one million chinook fingerlings, 1.5 million coho smolts and 20,000 steelhead smolts.

And of special interest to Muchalat Inlet anglers some 36,000 chinook fingerlings and 8.64 million chums were raised from the Tlupana hatchery system.

THAT ADDS UP to 13.7 million extra adult salmon expected to be produced from those releases from Vancouver Island streams ... 3.5 million of them chinook salmon.

Also contributing to the Gulf of Georgia fishery is the Capilano hatchery on the mainland where one million chinooks, 600,000 coho and 40,000 steelhead were scheduled for release and expected to produce an adult production of 30,000 chinook, 90,000 coho and 1,600 steelhead.

ADD TO THAT the untold numbers of extra salmon produced through small stream enhancement and incubation boxes by Amalgamated Conservation Society's Goldstream program; Percy Brown's Aid The Fish Society of Sooke; Jack Brooks and Bill James and the Sooke Conservation Society; the Jordan River prisoners and volunteers from Port Renfrew who have been improving the San Juan River; the fish and wildlife branch and Saanich municipality's work on the Colquitz and Craigflower systems; Nanaimo Fish and Game Club-sponsored programs in the Nanaimo area; Barry Thornton's river rehabilitation work with his Comox students; the joint provincial-federal project on the Keogh River in the North Island; stream improvement and chum and chinook hatchery on the Cowichan; rearing of 100,000 chinooks on the Chemainus by private contract; plus numerous other small stream improvement-programs undertaken by other volunteers ... and there appears a bright outlook for salmon populations of the future.

Keith Sadler ...with 51-pound Muchalat tyee.

ROWBOATS ARE USED to catch 50 and 60-pounders in Campbell River's Tyee Pool.

Lures To Catch Fish

For the average fisherman a bonus is that blueback and coho fishing may be done on light tackle.

In early season, small spoons, flies and hootchie-type lures — anything with a little red on it — seem to get them.

THE LURES are fished at a variety of depths, although often on the surface.

Later in the season, bait in a Strip Teaser, Minnow Teaser, or other bait holder and fished behind a flasher on a medium long leader (32 to 36 inches) is effective for both coho and chinooks.

Drift fishing with Pirkens, Sildas and Buzz Bombs is effective, especially in the fall.

At Campbell River they fish tyee from rowboats and use big plugs and wobbling spoons.

THE COHO can be taken near the surface, but for chinooks it is best to fish very deep. However coho are also caught very deep and sometimes chinooks are caught near the surface. It all depends on the feed, the winds, the tide and time of day.

STEELHEAD, or similar spinning reel and rod can be used for much of the salmon fishing, with 15-pound-test nylon line. This gear is particularly good for mooching, strip casting or drift fishing.

However a five- or six-inch drum-type reel with at least 600 feet of 25 to 30-pound-test nylon is more commonly used for salmon trolling. Specialists use wire line (especially in Saanich Inlet), or downriggers with five to 10-pound weights . . . and this fishing closer to the bottom is credited with an ever increasing sport-catch success.

ESSENTIALLY a downrigger is a hand-operated winch used to lower a heavy weight on a wire line. The regular fishing line from the rod is attached to the wire line with a quick release pin, so that when a fish takes the lure the angler can play it with no weight to encumber the action. You can actually fish close to the bottom with a fly rod if you use downrigger and quick release.

But anglers can get plenty of summer and fall fishing without dredging.

FISHERMEN planning a visit to the Island should bring their regular tackle, but plan to buy lures locally. Each area has its own special lures.

There are scores of marinas on Vancouver Island and most will provide guides, charter, or rental boats.

Those who have a car-topper or a trailer boat should by all means bring it. There are ample launching ramps.

Follow the Salmon

Although 275-mile-long Vancouver Island offers year-round salmon fishing the most exciting time is July, August and September when the salmon move toward the rivers.

BIG EXCEPTION is in the Oak Bay to Sooke waters where a run of heavyweight - 30, 40 and 50-pound chinooks starts building in May and stays around until July. Most of them are heading for the Fraser or Columbia.

They run in the 20 to 50-pound class and provide what is probably some of the world's finest sport salmon fishing.

ALSO IN MAY and June the big chinooks start coming in from the Pacific Ocean through Johnstone Strait to the north.

These chinooks are not as plentiful as the Sooke summer chinooks, but they are bigger — called tyee when they are 30-pounds or heavier — and they are taken during a short season in August and September in Campbell River, Muchalat Inlet and Alberni Inlet.

In odd-numbered years pink salmon provide great family fun fishing in Juan de Fuca waters in July, August and September.

AT THE SAME time the big chinooks are on the move, resident young coho also migrate. They are called grilse until they reach three pounds and bluebacks from three to five pounds.

Some of the grilse head through Juan de Fuca Strait for a brief visit to the ocean before returning as maturing fish in July, August and September.

Others mill in Saanich Inlet, near Victoria as they prepare to move up the coast through the Strait of Georgia.

ANOTHER GROUP moves northward from the Crofton area and another big population moves south from Johnstone Strait to Campbell River.

AS THEY MIGRATE they bring fabulous light tackle fishing along their 200-mile-long route. Campbell River gets them from both directions in late June and July when they have reached five pounds and better.

They seem to come in waves. The Five Fingers Islands and Thrasher Rock off Nanaimo are excellent bluebacking grounds in April, May and June. Then they move around to Nanoose and Northwest Bay waters, but another wave seems to replace them in Nanaimo waters.

BY MID—APRIL the Northwest Bay waters off Nanoose, Ballenas, Gerald and Mistaken Islands are producing limit catches which have reached 3½ to 4½-pound size. By the end of April they are moving northward along the east coast of Vancouver Island to French Creek, then on to Qualicum Beach, Qualicum Bay, Bowser and Deep Bay where they are usually around the 4½-pound size by the May 24 holiday weekend.

WHEN THESE BLUES reach Comox waters they intermingle with schools from the north and tremendous fishing develops as the fish grow fat on shrimp hatches.

BUT IN RECENT years, since hatchery stocks started to fill the Gulf, it seems one big stock (suspected hatchery fish) keeps to the middle of the Strait and anglers go out further to get them.

Best of all, these bluebacks grow into five to 12-pound coho and stick around Vancouver Island shores until the fall when they are ready to enter the rivers to spawn.

BY THIS TIME they are joined by other runs of coho from the ocean, usually bigger and called "northerns." They come through Johnstone Strait on the north and Juan de Fuca Strait on the south. It is these coho that provide fine bucktailing in east coast waters in October.

Good News and Bad News

GOOD NEWS for sport anglers is that the run of coho through Juan de Fuca Strait this year is predicted to be above average and equal to the 1977 brood year, when the King Fisherman Contest broke all entry records.

But, while coho fishing should be hot in Juan de Fuca this year, don't look for as hot general fishing as last year because this is not an odd-numbered pink salmon year.

AN AVERAGE run of chinook salmon is predicted through Juan de Fuca and two days a week of netting is planned for Juan de Fuca until Sept. 24, but federal fisheries warns that "should coho stock strength show a greater than anticipated return, openings (for net fishing) will be adjusted."

COWICHAN area chinooks are expected to return at equal or better than the brood year, but coho returns are expected to be slightly lower than the brood year.

Below average return of coho is expected in the Comox-Parksville area and an average return of chinooks.

In the Johnstone Strait area a below average return of wild chinooks is expected, but returns to the Quinsam hatchery will make up the difference.

ABOVE AVERAGE returns of coho is expected to the Quinsam hatchery and average or below average stocks of wild coho expected in Campbell River area.

In Barkley Sound-Alberni Inlet a low return of wild chinooks is expected, but a good return of chinooks is expected to the Robertson Creek hatchery and a limited gillnet fishery on chinooks is anticipated. A below average return of wild coho is expected to Alberni Inlet and no net fishery is expected on Robertson Creek hatchery coho stocks because of a changeover to chinook prouction.

GOOD RETURNS of coho and chinooks are expected to the Capilano hatchery, which should mean some good sport fishing in the Gulf of Georgia.

But relatively low returns of coho are expected to the upper Fraser and average returns to the lower Fraser. Low returns of chinooks are expected to some upper Fraser stocks and for the late-timing Harrison River run.

BUT, NOT so good news for sport anglers is that federal fisheries is planning to institute new chinook area closures and limits for sports anglers, along with intensified chinook conservation measures to be imposed on commercial fishing.

- Commercial and sport fishing special period closures will be implemented for areas adjacent to outlets of the Nanaimo and Chemainus Rivers for protection of returning chinook salmon.
- Effective April 15, 1980, sport fish bag limit in some Johnstone Strait areas including parts of Kincome Inlet, Wakeman Inlet, Thompson Sound and Knight Inlet was reduced to two chinooks a day and two-day possession.
- Nimpkish River will be closed to sport fishing for chinook in mid-July.
- The head of Bute Inlet will be closed to sport fishing for chinooks.
- Phillips Arm and Phillips River will be closed to sport fishing for chinooks above the commercial boundary.
- Loughborough Inlet, Stafford River and Apple River was closed to sport chinook fishing above the commercial boundary, effective April 15.
- Effective April 15 sport bag limit was reduced to two chinooks a day in Bute Inlet, above Alpha Bluff.
- Closures may be implemented, or gear restrictions imposed, on late Harrison River chinook fishery.
- A total closure of the the sport fishery on the Squamish River and tributaries from June 1 to Dec. 31 is proposed.

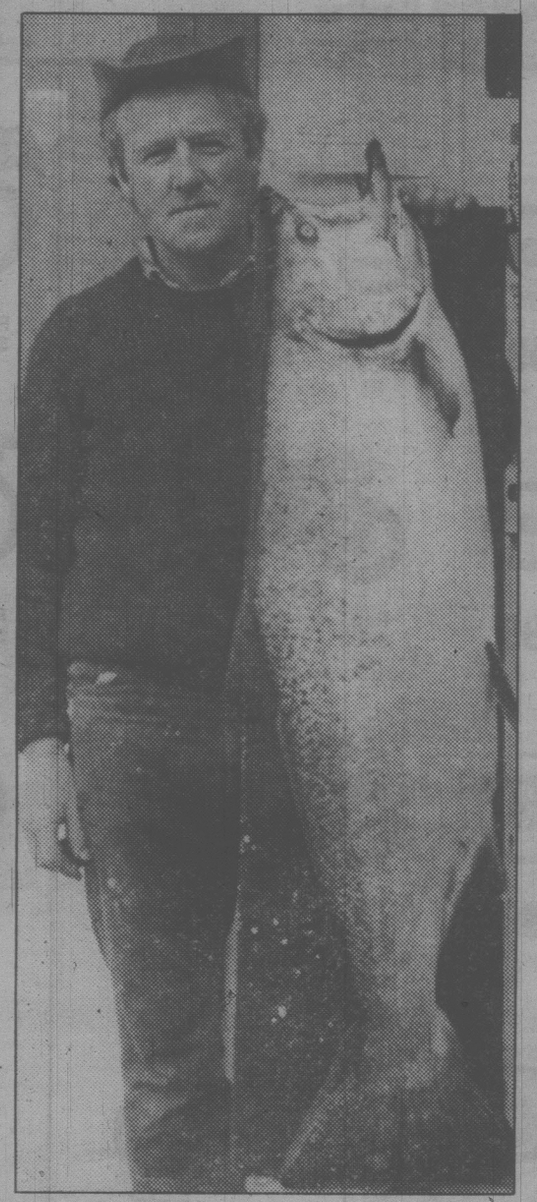
PUT SOME FLASH IN YOUR ACTION

Putting the flash into salmon fishing is one of the most complex problems in sport fishing.

Should you use a flasher or dodger at all? If you do what kind should you use? How long a leader should you use behind a flasher or dodger?



JIM GILBERT . . . with 38½-pound chinook from Saanich Inlet.

MOST SPORT salmon anglers today use some sort of attractor when trolling for salmon.

A few years ago the rolling-type plastic flashers, like Hot Spot and Okie, started to become popular. Before that the Abe and Al commercial-type revolving flasher was a popular one and still is. The Pal and Silver Horde flashers were other favorites, particularly with Sooke anglers. In the past three years some Sooke anglers have been getting big chinooks on the huge Mk IV flashers. Gibbs Skipper revolving flashers are also popular.

DODGERS are attractors that flip from side to side, slowly or violently, according to the bend placed in them and among them the Roy Smith has been one of the most popular, particularly in Saanich Inlet waters. The Jim Gilbert dodgers are similar in design. Gibbs dodgers have been a universal favorite for years.

FLASHERS revolve and swing the lures in a wide arc and also flip them from side to side. These are becoming more popular with anglers, but a few years ago if a flasher rolled, it was thought you were trolling too fast and you either slowed down or changed the bend in the dodger so it wouldn't roll ... just dodge from side to side.

Both flashers and dodgers, as well as being attractors, are used to impart action to the lure.

ONE THING to remember about revolving flashers, like the Okie and Hot Spot, is that they must be trolled faster than other attractors and you should use all flashers of the same type at the same time, rather than trying one type on one line and another on the other line.

A PROBLEM is that if you are using downriggers along with dodgers or flashers you have to push the quick release pin in so firmly it won't trip when you hit a small fish. If you don't push it in firmly action of the dodger or flasher will pull the release pin free.

But, it is not absolutely necessary to use the attractor on the fishing line. You can tie the flasher or dodger on to the downrigger weight, or just above and then fish a lure on a separate line above it. But remember, if you don't use a flasher or a dodger, you must use a lure that has its own action, like Super Strip Teaser, or spoons like Tom Macks, Krippled K, or Needlefish, even a plug.

. . . short leaders for coho longer for chinooks

ACTION Flashtails and Radiant Butterfly Squirts have built-in action and don't require a flasher or dodger. You can also rig a minnow with action, but that rigging is better for quiet waters like Saanich Inlet.

Bucktail flies can be used with or without flashers or dodgers, but for flies you must either have a pearl spinner ahead of them, or work your fly by quickly moving the rod back and forth and trolling at faster than usual speed. Bucktails do work in Sooke waters, especially behind a flasher or dodger, but they are better producers in Saanich Inlet and along the east coast of Vancouver Island.

SQUIRTS and hootchies require some sort of action to make them work and are best used with shorter leaders and heavy (40-pound-test) leader which gives them more action on a revolving flasher.

When fishing with flasher or dodger you can use anywhere from 12 inches of leader to six feet of leader. A good average length for bait fishermen is 42 inches.

VETERAN sport fishing guide Jim Gilbert advises that as a rule of thumb minimum leader lengths should be two times the length of the attractor for Octopus, hootchies, Squirts, Squids and fly-type lures, three times the length of the attractors for bait or spoons.

Generally you should use shorter leaders for coho and longer leaders for jack chinooks and chinooks.

LURES THAT don't have their own built-in action, like hootchies and flies, require shorter leaders than activated bait heads.

For a 12 or 14-inch Abe and Al-type flasher the minimum leader length should be 24 and 28 inches, but you can effectively fish an Octopus, Squirt, hootchie or fly with leader lengths from 24 to 48 inches. The shorter the leader the more action it gives the lure.

WHEN FISHING with small spoons and flasher or dodger close to the surface you sould use lighter test leader — say 15 to 20-pound-test — to give more freedom to the spoons to move around.

In Juan de Fuca Strait, where big chinooks are now being taken, and anglers are fishing in strong tides, 40 to 50-pound test leader is a must, but 30-pound-test leader is fine for Saanich Inlet.

HEAVY-GAUGE commercial-type flashers are best for the big tidal waters of Juan de Fuca Strait because they don't go haywire and whip around like the lighter flashers do.

Take Out the Twist

Do you have trouble with your flasher or dodger twisting your line? Here is one way to solve the problem.

THE MAIN LINE should be 35 to 40-pound-test down to a ball bearing or bead swivel.

Then put on about 25 feet of at least 50-pound-test monofilament, then attach it to the ball bearing swivel on the flasher.

COME BACK to the first swivel and attach a drop weight that you can detach when you are reeling in.

But make sure the first swivel is small enough to go through the eyes of the rod.

When the flasher starts to spin the 50-pound-test line is so rigid it won't twist. The bead swivel will go around first.

HOW TO TELL
... coho from chinook

With more and more sport fishing regulations in the offing concerning conservation measures for chinook and coho salmon . . . and for purposes of identification in the King Fisherman Contest and other fishfests it is become increasingly important to be able to tell the difference between a coho and a chinook salmon.

The chinook has noticeably black gums at the base of its teeth.

The coho gums are much paler — almost white.

Both have darkish tongues, so check the gums of the lower jaw to be sure.

Then there are the tails. The chinook tail is more flowing and is covered with spots. The coho tail is squarer and has only a few scattered spots on the top section of its tail. You can usually pick a chinook up by the tail, but a coho tail will slither through your fingers.

For even more positive identification keep the pyloric caeca (the string-like things at the end of the stomach) and count them. Chinooks have 140 to 185 and coho have only 45 to 60.

Coho seldom are heavier than 20 pounds, chinook reach the 70s, even 80s.

Fish-Happy Sayward Forest

. . . 40 lakes, hundreds of camping spots

Sayward Forest, north and west of Campbell River, is a 354-square mile fish happy, lake-studded paradise land with more than 40 lakes containing trout — mostly small cutthroat — and on nearly every one of them there is a spot where you can camp, often by yourself during the week.

Add to this playland the adjacent Campbell and Buttle Lakes and you have an even bigger vacationland.

June is the hot month for Sayward Lakes trout fishing and then comes September-October.

B.C. FOREST Service has roughed out (pit toilets, a garbage can and sometimes a launching spot, maybe even a picnic table) about 14 designated camping spots in the Sayward Forest area and if you drop into the forest station while passing through Campbell River you can pick up a map which shows where they are.

OR YOU CAN get a copy of Alec and Taffy Merriman's Logging Road Travels, Volume 2, Campbell River to Cape Scott, book which will lead you mile-by-mile to these happy holiday spots. And you should pick up one of Doris Stastny's detailed maps of the Sayward area.

There are also scores of undeveloped spots, where you can camp beside a lake in self-contained units.

YOU CAN ENTER the Sayward Forest by a number of different access points. Some of your travel may be on mainline logging roads and some of it on rather overgrown logging trails, but with care driving isn't usually difficult.

You can enter by turning left at the intersection just before the Campbell River bridge and crossing over the John Hart Dam into Sayward Forest.

THEN FOLLOW the North Shore Campbell Lakes Road to a dozen or more lakeside camping spots. There is John Hart Lake camping area (which may soon be closed because it supplies Campbell River water needs), Loveland Lake, Loon Bay, Fry Lake, and side roads leading to Boot Lake, Whymper Lake, Gray Lake, Merrill and Brewster Lake, to mention a few.

IF YOU TURN left, instead of going over the John Hart Dam and follow the Buttle Lake road you can reach McIvor Lake, Echo Lake, Quinsam Lakes, Wokos Lake, Snakehead Lake, Gooseneck Lake, Strathcona Dam camping area, Upper Campbell Lake and Buttle Lake. You can continue on to Gold River and North Island logging roads to Muchalat Lake, Vernon Lake, Schoen Lake and Woss Lake.

If instead of turning at the bridge intersection at Campbell River, you carry on over the bridge on the Kelsey Bay highway, you will come to several other Sayward Forest access points.

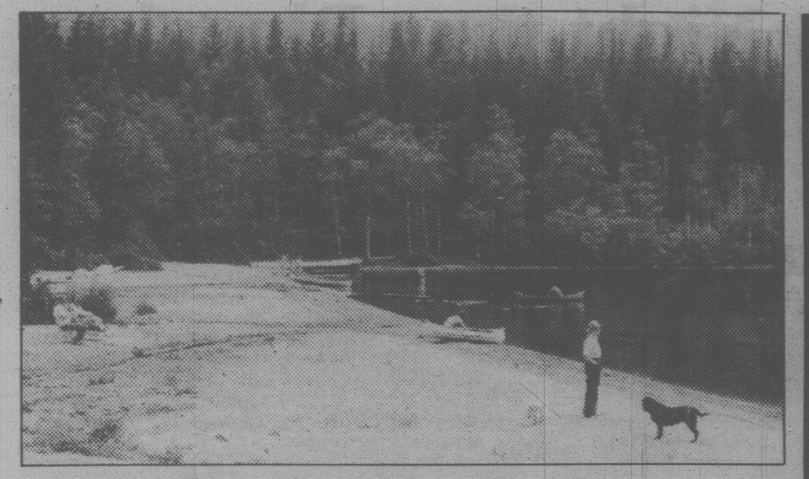
MENZIES MAINLINE is 9.1 miles (14.6 km) along the Kelsey Bay highway from Campbell River and it is the main access into many Sayward Lakes, including Mohun, Brewster, Boot, Gosling, Merrill, Gray, Spirit and Morton Lake ... all with camping spots and Morton with a provincial park campground.

The lake chain which includes Cedar, Farewell, Mud, Muskeg, Blackwater and Amor Lakes is reached by a left turn at the 19.1-mile (30.7 km) of the Campbell River-Kelsey Bay highway.

Roberts Lake Resort, with fishing for some big trout, is at the 19.3-mile (31.1 km) mark.

ROCK BAY forest access road is just before Amor de Cosmos Creek at the 25.5-mile (41 km) mark of the Kelsey Bay highway and a right turn takes you to McCreight Lake with several camping spots, Pye Lake, Pye Slough, Stella Lakes and on to Rock Bay where small cartop boats may be launched for salmon and cod fishing.

At the 29.2-mile (47 km) mark a left turn is an alternate route to reach Spirit Lake, but it can be really rough and it is best to go in by the Menzies mainline and follow the shores of Brewster Lake and on to Spirit.



STELLA LAKE . . . beautiful camping, full of trout.

MID-DAY CATCH . . . of Lower Campbell Lake trout.

BOB WHITE'S BASS TACKLE BOX.

Night-time Plugging for Small-Mouths

Ask a bass fisherman and he will tell you that pound for pound a bass puts up as good, or better, a fight than a trout. But, you could get an argument from a trout angler.

YOU MAINLY fish bass on the surface with great big plugs ... the uglier the better. And when a bass smashes through the surface of the lake to hit at a plug it is as exciting a moment as an angler may ever hope to experience. Best of all, if the bass misses the surface plug the first time he likely will come back for it again and again as you retrieve it.

Vancouver Island is blessed with some lively bass fishing lakes ... Elk, Beaver, Prospect, Durrance, Langford, Matheson, Quennell, Long, Spider, and St. Mary Lake on Salt Spring Island. All of them also contain trout.

ELK, BEAVER and Spider Lakes are closed to bass fishing from May 15 to June 15 to protect spawning bass. The others are open.

Night fishing for smallmouth bass can be exciting and the time to start plunking those bass plugs and fly poppers along the shoreline is in the hot months, starting around the middle of June through July and again in September.

There is quite a bit of skill involved in casting a plug, a bass fly, or a popper bug into a little indentation in the bushes along the shoreline, which is the kind of spot a lunker bass might be lurking.

SURFACE PLUGS are the most exciting to use. They gurgle, they pop, they sputter ... and the more noise they make the more likely they will catch fish. They are especially exciting in the darkness, because you can hear them, although you can't see them ... and when a bass strikes at a surface plug on a quiet evening you can hear him come right out of the water with it.

JITTERBUGS in red, yellow, frog and black colors will take bass day or night and their double-lobed lip creates a loud paddling noise. You can troll with a Jitterbug, retrieve it continuously when casting it or retrieve by hesitation.

THE NOISE of the Jitterbug seems to drive the bass crazy. Cast as close to shore as you can get ... you have to take a chance on getting tangled in bushes, but on hot days the bass come into the shallows to feed in the cool of the evenings.

When the plug lands on the water take up the slack line and let the plug sit still for 30 seconds. The pop of the plug landing seems to attract bass from some distance away.

THEY WATCH that plug and when you start to move it they are after it like a flash. Retrieve the Jitterbug with its gurgling noise for about three feet, then let it sit for about 10 seconds, and then repeat.

That method is pretty well the same for all surface lures.

HULA POPPERS, with their hula skirts are another favorite surface plug. The hula skirt squirms and moves in the water on retrieving. Mend your line and give a short sharp tug to make the plug pop with a "ker plunk" sound and then repeat the same way you fish a Jitterbug.

A fly rod bass bug can be used in the same manner and to fish bass with a fly you get an out-size fly in a red, yellow or black color.

Bobber Fishing for Trout

When plants start to come alive in the ground it is time for trout fishing on Vancouver Island, with the best trout months May, June, September and Oct.

BOBBER, or float, fishing is a good way to test-fish to see if there are any trout around. If they will take anything, they will usually take a worm fished below a bobber at the right depth.

You can pop a bobber into any lake, but it pays to use a little thought to find a point or place to fish.

Try a spot near to where a little creek enters the lake, or in a bay. Look for shallows with deep water adjacent. The trout live in the deep water, but they come out to the shallows to feed.

In the early part of the year the water in the shallows warms more quickly and provides more food.

TAKE ALONG a fly rod when you go bobber fishing. Then, if you get to the lake and find trout rising all around you, you can try a little fly fishing.

Use small floats for bobber fishing. A very slender tapered float works fine, with sufficient weight to make the float sit upright ... rather more weight than less.

Try two or three feet of leader and depending upon how finicky the fish are, you should use two or four-pound-test leader in the daytime and early evening.

In late evenings when the fishing warms up and things get lively you are better off with a six to eight-pound-test leader.

DISTANCE from float to hook is often determined by how long a leader you can cast with, although if you have one of Barney Steel's Antenna Floats or a Norwegian Anders float, which is a hollow and double-walled float, you can cast and fish bobber and bait at any predetermined depth.

The fish seem to swim in schools around a lake. When they hit the spot where you are fishing, you must get the fish in and your line out again in a hurry. Try to hold the school.

In the darkness use heavy leaders because it is hard to tie on fresh hookups if you lose them. Also in early season your hands get cold in the evenings and it is harder to tie knots.

NATURAL cork-colored floats are probably better to deceive the fish, but they place the angler at a disadvantage in watching the float in poor light.

You can see a fluorescent or white float as soon as it moves, and you can strike the fish. But, with darker floats in waning light you have to squat at water level to watch the float.

During the daytime the neutral colors are undoubtedly less offensive to fish.

WORMS are mostly used for bobber fishing, but you can use mud shrimp, corn kernels, roe, paste or single salmon eggs, as well as grasshoppers and bugs.

Use paste on small No. 10 or 12 treble hooks and your own prepared roe on No. 6, 8 or 10 hooks.

For worms try a No. 6 trout hook with a turned-up eye.

When using roe use the same bait hookup as for steelhead, with a loop along the shank of the hook to hold the roe.

DOUGAN LAKE TROUT . . . co-operated for Barney Steel.

FOR ROE try a fairly stiff leader, such as Bell, Berkley, Weber or Imperial. The stiff leader is easier to handle when pulling the line back to make a loop to hold the roe.

For worms try a soft or limp leader like Stren or Trilene.

Fly line dressing from float to rod will make it easier to pick up the line and strike a fish.

You should keep your line mended, so as to be ready to strike as soon as a fish dips the bobber in the water. Don't get a big wow in your line, or you won't be able to strike quickly enough.

FOR BOBBER fishing a little care pays off with fish in the creel.

Dress in dark clothes and keep as still as possible on the beach.

Noises make vibrations. Don't talk any more than necessary and of all things don't wash your hands in the water.

Bobber fishing is usually best when the bait is kept close to the bottom where the fish feed. You must judge the depth from float to hook.

When your hook fouls on the bottom your float will lay on its side.

When it is fishing right, it will sit straight up.

When it bobs down under the water, or pulls off to one side, that is what you have been waiting for ... a trout is taking the bait. Give the rod a sharp tug to strike the fish and set the hook.

THIS 9½-POUND BROWN TROUT . . . was taken from Cameron Lake by Ian Anderson.

New Trout Rules

Freshwater angling regulations brought many new rules for 1980.

Here are a few you should note, but before going fishing be sure to pick up a copy of the B.C. Sport Fishing Regulations Synopsis, 1980-81, for Non-Tidal Waters.

● Brown trout in Cowichan River now have a minimum size limit of 40 centimetres (15¾ inches) and brown trout fishing in the Cowichan is closed July 1 to April 11.

● Woss River has been made a trout and char release river, with the single barbless hook, no bait regulation applying.

● A total angling closure has been placed on Hemmingsen Creek and its tributaries in the Port Renfrew area.

● Year-round angling closures have been placed on Colquitz Creek and Craigflower Creek and their tributaries, and Consort Creek.

● An angling closure has been imposed on Miller Creek from Snakehead Lake to Campbell Lake.

● New fly fishing only restrictions have been placed on Council Lake and Panther Lake.

● New restrictions limiting power to electric motors only have been placed on Dougan Lake, Graham Lake, Durrance Lake, Thetis Lake, and Wowo Lake.

● New no angling from power boat regulations have been imposed on Chickadee Lake (electric only), Cougar Lake, Hell-diver Lake, Langley Lake, Lost Lakes, McKenzie Lake, Michael Lake, Northy Lake, Prior Lake, Regan Lake, and Rossiter Lake.

How To Release Fish

By following a few simple rules you have more chance of releasing your fish unharmed. Remember a fish that appears unharmed when released may not survive if it was handled carelessly.

Time is of the essence. Play and release fish as rapidly as possible. A fish out of water cannot live for more than three or four minutes because of brain damage due to lack of oxygen. A fish played gently for too long may be too exhausted to recover.

Keep the fish in the water as much as possible. A fish out of water is suffocating and, in addition, is twice as heavy. He may pound himself fatally if allowed to flop on beach or rocks. Even a few inches of water under a thrashing fish acts as a protective cushion.

Gentleness in handling is essential. Keep your finger out of the gills. Do not squeeze small fish ... they can be held easily by holding them by the lower lips. Nets may be helpful provided the mesh does not become entangled in the gills. Hooks and lines catching in nets may delay releasing, so keep the net in the water.

When unhooking remove the hook as rapidly as possible with longnose pliers, unless the fish is deeply hooked. If deeply hooked, cut the leader and leave the hook in. Do not tear out hooks roughly. Be gentle and quick. It is unwise to release a fish which is bleeding heavily.

Some fish, especially after a long struggle, may lose consciousness and float belly up. To revive always hold the fish in water, heading upstream. Move it forward and backward so that water runs through the gills. When it revives, begins to struggle and can swim normally, let it go.

Campgrounds Beckon

Provincial parks, private campgrounds, B.C. forest service wilderness camping sites and timber area camping spots provided by logging companies on Vancouver Island provide a delightful mix of camping opportunities.

MORE THAN 2,000 miles of logging roads which are open for public travel during non-operating hours (mainly on the weekends) are the key for the more rugged outdoorsmen with campers, trail bikes, four-wheel drive vehicles and even backpackers and hikers.

THE PROVINCIAL parks are mainly for the family campers with tents or camp vehicles and they are cleverly designed to give a wilderness atmosphere not far from civilization. At most of them you have to hike a short distance to get to the beaches, lakes and rivers you come to enjoy.

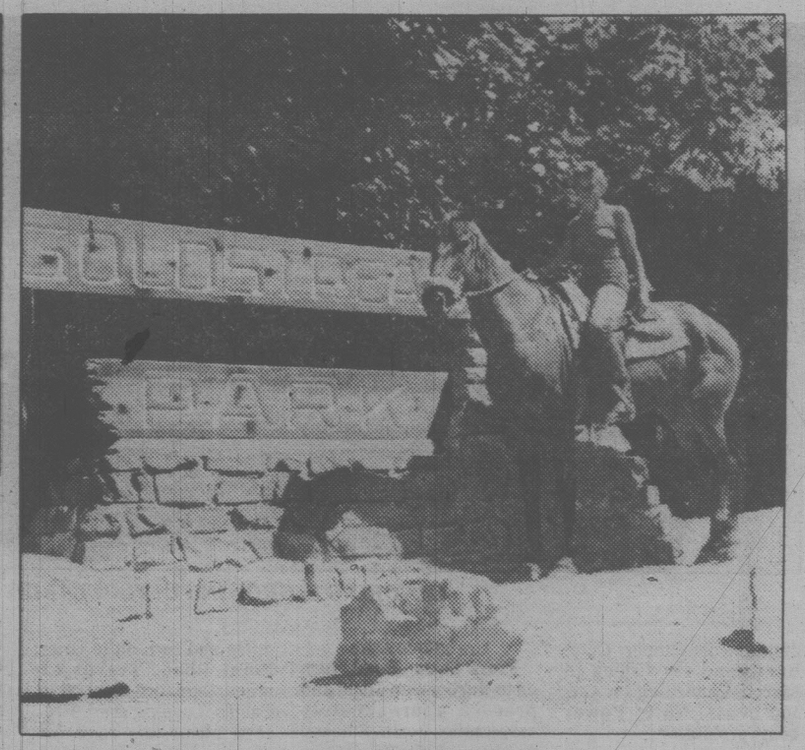
But, they usually have enough attractions to keep a family busy for at least a week, certainly a weekend — including nature walks, nature talks, nature houses and delightfully relaxing settings.

THE PRIVATE campgrounds usually have the choice locations ... right on the beach or lake ... and you pay only slightly more for a few of the creature comforts, like showers, electricity, laundry facilities, running hot and cold water and sewer hookups.

It isn't a bad idea to spend a few days in each type of campground.

Vancouver Island has 53 provincial campgrounds and picnic sites, including the adjacent marine parks.

MIRACLE BEACH, midway between Courtenay and Campbell River, is the biggest provincial campground on the Island with 185 camping units, 55 picnic tables, nature house, nature walks and a beautiful sandy beach.



CAMPER ON HORSEBACK.

Next comes Rathtrevor at Parksville with 174 camping units, large picnic areas and a wonderful sandy beach.

GOLDSTREAM, 12 miles north and west of Victoria, has 152 camping units, 46 picnic tables, nature house, and several lovely hiking trails which attract hundreds of Victoria outdoors people.

ON QUINSAM River is Elk Falls parks with 121 camping units and 10 picnic table and if you are lucky enough to get a riverside spot, you can fish steelhead, trout or salmon jacks almost from your tent or camper.

SPROAT LAKE, in the Albernis, has 57 camping units, 71 picnic tables, boat launching and fine swimming.

See Marine Life In Charter Boats

You don't have to have a boat or a car, or even a lot of time to enjoy the highly interesting marine life that is to be found around the shores of Vancouver Island.

Mike and Teresa Shepard, who three years ago started Swiftsure Tours Ltd. of Victoria, make it easy for you.

THEY SPECIALIZE in natural history and adventure travel and offer a variety of tours from four-hour cruises to see wintering sea lions to eight-day camping-boating expeditions in the Queen Charlottes.

They offer opportunities to photograph a 2,000-pound Steller's sea lion, track down elusive short-tailed shearwaters or horned-puffins, see the gray whales off Long Beach, or sail B.C.'s sheltered coast ... and many other adventures.

NATURALIST guides take parties for marine adventures aboard Zodiac inflatables

Day trips in the Victoria area include three hours of island and ocean exploration, tea/coffee and a snack.

SIDNEY ISLANDS is one destination for day trips and features changing patterns of shoreline and ocean, seals hauled out on rocks, seabirds in noisy feeding flocks, plus seascapes of the scenic waterways and islets off Sidney. They include time for observing wildlife, beachcombing for shells or driftwood, and taking photographs.

RACE ROCKS for a close-up look at sea lions, seals and marine birds, along with a visit to the light station and a climb up the tall sandstone and granite tower for a panoramic view, is another trip.

Some 150 of these huge mammals winter at Race Rocks, 20 kilometres (12½ miles) from Victoria, where swift currents and upwellings create an abundance of food. Harbor seals and large numbers of marine birds, such as cormorants and auklets are also attracted to the area.

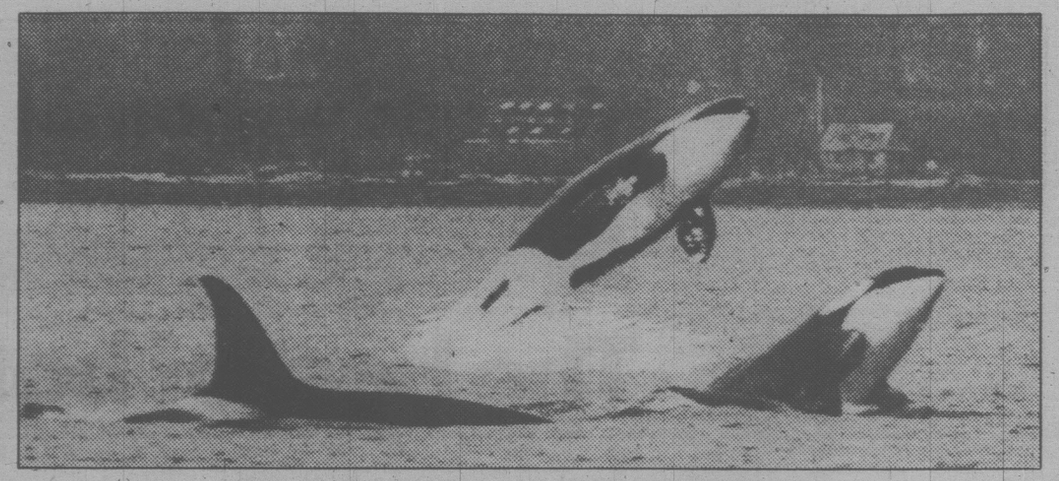
There participants will see a colony of nesting seabirds, numerous harbor seals and large concentrations of marine birds. The beautiful islets of Chatham, Trial and Discovery surround the bay and in the distance tower the Olympic Range and Mount Baker.



KILLER WHALES PUT ON SHOW FOR ISLAND BOATERS.

FEATURED on a Salt Spring and Galiano tour are waterbird concentrations in Active Pass and Ganges Harbor. Large numbers of brant, cormorants, arctic loons, surf scoters and old squaw ducks can be expected, as well as hawks, eagles and alcids.

SEA LIONS AND SEALS AT RACE ROCKS.

NANAIMO ISLANDS have fascinating sandstone wind sculptures, seabird colonies and quiet woodland paths.

On Protection Island crumbling concrete buildings mark the entrance to an old coal mine under Nanaimo Harbor.

OTHER TRIPS can be arranged on a charter basis and are sometimes made as family outings, birthday celebrations, fishing trips or for wilderness exploration.

Fishing Ranks Eighth

Fishing ranks eighth among other recreational activities in Greater Victoria in terms of providing the geatest enjoyment, but a survey indicates "sport fishing is participated in locally more frequently and for greater periods of time than most other pastimes.

Top seven recreation activities in order of preference included travelling to different places; beachcombing, walking or lying on the beach; reading or similar passive activities; camping; gardening; swimming, backpacking, hiking, mountain climbing, nature walks.

ISN'T YOUR FAMILY WORTH THE MONEY?

Many people buy wagons in order to get increased passenger space and cargo area. But how many people ever consider the safety of the most precious cargo they'll ever carry—their families? Volvo owners do. And here's why they pay a little extra to own one.

STRUCTURAL SAFETY— IN A VOLVO, THE ODDS AREN'T STACKED AGAINST YOU.

In Volvo, a high strength steel cage surrounds a passenger compartment specifically designed to resist physical damage in a collision. Tubular steel bars, braced by a patented Volvo design protect you from side collisions.

Special "crumple zones" built into a Volvo's frame reduce impact forces which act on the passenger compartment. Steel profiles built into the roof keep you covered. And the six box-shaped steel pillars which support the roof are also designed to support the weight of six more Volvos.

VOLVO FAMILIES ARE HAPPY FAMILIES.

Statistics have already shown that 9 out of 10 Volvo owners are happy with their cars. Because Volvos also offer high levels of quality, reliability, comfort, performance and handling. Things not generally associated with station wagons.

So before you buy a wagon, stop in at our Volvo showroom. We may be able to offer you something you value as much as your family's safety—value for your family's money.

Charter a Boat — Learn to Sail

You don't have to be a boat owner to enjoy cruising in the Gulf Islands ... you can charter a boat - bareboat or skipper - for a day, a week or a month.

IF YOU DON'T know how to operate one you can learn sailing, boat handling and navigation, through a handy Canadian Power Squadron course, or from one of several schools.

Oak Bay Marina, Bosun's Marina and the newly-revovated Deep Cove marina are good places to charter a boat and GIC's Gulf Island Cruising School gives live-aboard sailing lessons on five-day cruises.

JOHN MARSH, head of marine operations for the B.C. government for 10 years and latterly superintendent of marine operations for the Northwest Territories, has come up with a new concept for the 1980s.

Under the name Marsh Chartboats Ltd. he is operating a fleet of power and sailboats to meet vacation and leisure-time requirements of almost everyone on a year-round basis for short or long trips.

HIS BASE of operation's is Mike Hounslow's Deep Cove Marina, where a $300,000 rebuilding job is nearing completion and will see new concrete floats, which act as a breakwater, and provide room for 60 to 70 boats of 25-foot to 70-foot length and another 20 in the 15-foot to 20-foot range. The marina will include a marine store, boat rentals and boat brokerage and overnight boating facilities. The launching ramp has been taken out ... it was too steep in any event, but parking has been doubled. Deep Cove Marina should be in full operation by mid-June.

A NEW APPROACH is John Marsh's Marine Sea School for the novice or beginner wishing to learn boat handling and navigation before buying a boat or for the boater who wants to improve his skills.

Marsh has seven charter cruisers available, from a 25-foot Albin diesel to a 38-foot cruiser and six sailing craft, from a 25-foot Bayfield to a 42-foot sloop-rigged ketch.

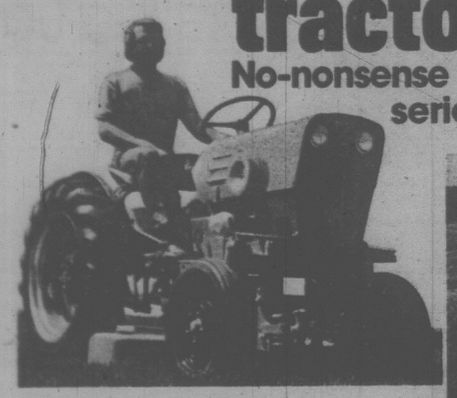
POWER KING tractor

No-nonsense power for the serious gardener



If you grow more than just a lawn on one to 20 acres, you need a tractor that will do more than just mow. You need the versatility and power of Power King Tractor.
This rugged tractor has extra weight and traction, yet uses less gas per job. Automotive all-gear drive converts nearly 100% horsepower to workpower. Electromagnetic clutch gives you full control of powered attachments simply by pushing or pulling the dashboard switch. And an electric interlock prevents tractor starts while attachments are clutch-engaged.
Mount attachments easily with new quick-hitch. Plow with ease. Prepare seed beds with 32" tiller. Plant, cultivate, fertilize and spray. Mow 2 to 3 acres an hour with the 60" rotary mower. Bulldoze with the 48" angling blade. Load gravel or dirt with the ½-ton bucket. Or cut a patch through deep snow with the 48" snowblower. Handle all your garden and yard chores with over 20 attachments.

Gulf Island Cruising

The picturesque, unique and sheltered Gulf Islands on the east coast of Vancouver Island provide some of the finest cruising water in the world . . . and Saanich Peninsula is home port for most of the cruisers — sail and power — which enjoy those waters the year-round.

IN THE LAST decade the age of sail has taken hold again.

In most marinas now the sailing cruisers are starting to take over from the power cruisers. High cost and concern about future availability of fuel is one reason, but mainly people nowadays are finding they just love to sail.

BOATERS from Sidney have a choice of cruising the Canadian Gulf Islands — James, Sidney, Portland, Penders, Saturna, Mayne, Galiano, Tent, Thetis, Kuper, Valdes, Ruxton and Gabriola and Newcastle, all easy weekend cruising distance, and there are provincial marine parks on Sidney, Pender, Tent, Galiano, Gabriola and Newcastle Islands.

OR THEY CAN check through U.S. Customs at Roche Harbor or Friday Harbor on San Juan Island and cruise the American San Juan Islands which are as delightful as the Canadian islands and include Stuart Island, San Juan, Orcas, Sucia Islands, Shaw, Lummi, Lopez and a chain of islands that can lead through sheltered waters into Puget Sound and Seattle.

Check back into Canada through Customs at Bedwell Harbor on Pender Island.

MOST OF THESE cruises are made in luxurious yachts, but they can be made on a reduced scale in small boats with a little planning . . . on a 12-foot budget.

You can trailer a boat to Sidney, Chemainus, Nanaimo or Campbell River and cruise to the nearby islands, or you can catch a ferry from Swartz Bay to Pender or Galiano Island and use them as a base for adjacent Gulf Island cruising.

Wm. J. STEWART ... renamed Canadian Princess, this famous hydrographic survey ship is now hotel-restaurant-museum-deepsea charter fishing base at Ucluelet.

Old Ship In New Role

Starting June 1 residents and visitors on Vancouver Island will be able to travel to Ucluelet on the west coast and visit on board one of the last of the old classical steamships — the former hydrographic vessel the Wm. J. Stewart, which has been renamed Canadian Princess for its new role.

OAK BAY MARINA'S Bob Wright has purchased the ship and had it restored to its former beauty, complete with the birch panelling, stairway and engines ready to operate.

He has located it at dockside in Ucluelet and it will open to the public, starting June 1, with a formal opening planned for around June 20.

It will fill several needs.

● It will be used as a base for four 43-foot Delta fibreglass offshore charter-cruisers that will include deepsea salmon fishing experiences in the mornings to the Swiftsure area at a cost of $47 a person for a 6:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. trip that will take up to 14 participants 15 to 20 miles out to the salmon banks; nature trips through the Broken Islands of Barkley Sound in the afternoons for whale watching, visiting sea lion and seal rocks and seabird observation at a cost of $35 an adult and less for children from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.; and a three-hour Sunset Trip in the evening to watch the whales and sea lions off Long Beach at a cost of $23.

● The Canadian Princess has accommodation in staterooms for 80 people and cost to stay on the historic ship will be $27 single stateroom, $33 double stateroom, with a special Glory Hole stateroom for six fishing buddies at $58. But you don't have to stay on board to fish or to visit the ship. If you wish you can camp at nearby Long Beach Pacific Rim National Park.

● The ship includes a restaurant (the Stewart Room) and licenced holding lounge (the Chart Room, which actually is the room where most of the charts for the B.C. coast were compiled) for 90 people, with dress casual, everyday normal prices, and a special Fisherman's Breakfast.

● The ship, one of the last operational steamships on the Pacific Coast, will operate as a free museum ship. Anybody visiting in Ucluelet will be welcome to go aboard and have a tour of the wheelhouse, engine and view all the old running gear that is still ready for operation. The ship is capable of running, but will be tied dockside.

One of its dubious claims to fame is that the hydrographic ship once ran aground and sank on Campbell River's infamous Ripple Rock, since blown out in a spectacular operation that rivalled the explosion of an atom bomb.

WRIGHT EXPLAINS the Ucluelet operation will be the first deepsea sport charter salmon fishing operation on the west coast of Canada ... and as such will be breaking new ground, or is it water.

The cruisers Ucluelet Princess, Salmon Princess, Nootka Princess and Barkley Princess operate on diesel fuel and because they take 14 anglers at a time will actually be contributing to fuel conservation, claims Wright. He says salmon caught will be mainly hatchery chinooks and coho from the Robertson Creek hatchery at Alberni's Stamp River.

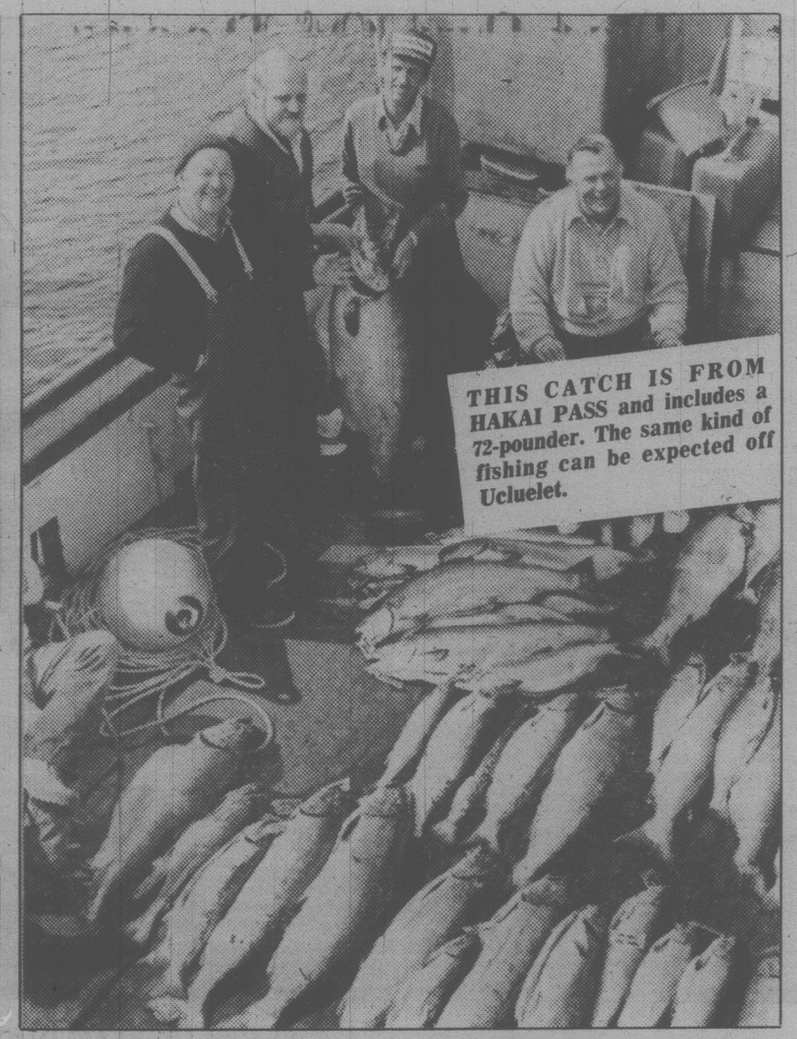
The Canadian Princess and the charter boats will operate until the end of September,

THE MARABELL will again be operated by Oak Bay Marina this year in the Hakai Pass waters in Queen Charlotte Strait, north of the top tip of Vancouver Island.

Wright purchased the 136-foot Marabell this past year and has spent $100,000 on renovations.

It will operate from late May until the end of September, starting in Knight Inlet waters and Cramer Pass area and in July, August and September it will be in the Hakai Pass area looking for a world record chinook, then moving to Smith Inlet for coho.

OTHER ISLANDERS also operate charters, motherships and lodges in the big fish waters of Rivers Inlet and Hakai Pass.



THIS CATCH IS FROM HAKAI PASS and includes a 72-pounder. The same kind of fishing can be expected off Ucluelet.

Grant and Noreen Butt, PO Box 2192, Sidney, V8L, 3S8, 656-6311, operate the 96-foot converted tug Breeze on four and five-day trips in the Hakai-Rivers area, ranging between $800 and $900 a trip.

Pat and George Ardley, formerly of Duncan, operate River's Lodge at River's Inlet where the world record 82-pound chinook was caught. They feature scuba diving and steelheading as well as salmon fishing and can be reached by writing to George Ardley, River's Lodge, River's Inlet, Dawsons Landing, B.C., VON 1MO.

Eat Out-Of-Doors

No matter what you cook this time of year . . . chicken, steak, a savory stroganoff, an aromatic beef broil, hamburgers or weiners broiled on the spur of the moment, the fact remains . . . eating out-of-doors, is the easiest, most pleasant mealtime custom in the world.

As old as Neanderthal, the custom is widespread as the earth. No special privilege or prerogative of any class, this type of meal can be enjoyed by all levels of society. It is a sort of back-of-the-hand rebuttal to push button cookery.

Out in the harvest fields the corn rustles huskly of ripening days. Along the highways and country lanes the tall grasses and shrubs are powdered with summer dust. You may already find a purple aster or a bit of golden rod that will remind you that the month of dreams is passing. So now is the time to make the most of dreams and to gather happy memories.

NOW WE MUST make the most of outdoor days that take advantage of summer's warmth and beauty.

Food has to be satisfying enough to handle fresh air appetites.

Ham steak is always a dinner favorite and transferred to a backyard barbecue is even better. One reason for its good taste is that it has first been marinated in a seasoned grapefruit juice mixture. Besides adding special flavor, grapefruit juice tenderizes the meat so that each mouthful seems to melt in your mouth.

THE HAM STEAK is placed over the grill to cook and is then basted with the marinade to help retain its natural juices, while taking on a fresh herbed flavor.

A very light, refreshing grapefruit sauce accompanies the ham steak and provides a welcome contrast to the richly flavored meat. This meat and sauce combination is so elegant and special . . . you can even hold your next dinner party outdoors and have a winning main course that rivals any dining room menu.

HAM STEAK BARBECUE . . . one ham steak, one-and-a-half inches thick, two tbsp. salad oil, one cup grapefruit juice, two tsp. sugar, one-half tsp. salt, one tsp. dried leaf oregano, one-quarter tsp. pepper, one-quarter cup soy sauce, one tsp. grated grapefruit rind, two tbsp. finely chopped parsley and one-quarter cup chopped scallions.

Place ham steak in a shallow dish. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over ham. Cover and refrigerate two hours. Remove ham from marinade and place on grill when coals have reached light gray stage, (or place five to six inches from broiler heat). Grill 25 minutes on one side, basting with the marinade, turn and grill 20 minutes longer. Remove from grill and serve with grapefruit sauce. Makes six servings.

GRAPEFRUIT SAUCE . . . one-half cup sugar, two tbsp. cornstarch, one-quarter tsp. salt, three-quarters cup water, one-and-a-half cups grapefruit juice and one grapefruit sectioned.

In medium saucepan, mix sugar, cornstarch and salt. Gradually stir in water and grapefruit juice. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture comes to a boil and thickens. Simmer one minute then stir in grapefruit sections.

The perfect dish to go along with the ham steak is a salad with peas as the main ingredient. Orange pea salad is the one . . . a cool blend of mint, sour cream, grated orange peel and orange fruit juice concentrate.

FRUITED BARBECUE SAUCE . . . one can frozen lemon juice concentrate, one tsp. salt, three tbsp. lime juice, two tsp. Angostura Bitters and a dash of Tabasco.

Combine the ingredients. Use as a marinade for chicken pieces in a shallow dish. Leave several hours at room temperature, turning pieces occasionally. Drain chicken and reserve the marinade.

Heat marinade and add one-half cup butter or margarine. Stir until butter is melted. Dry chicken pieces with paper towels then brush each piece before and during barbecuing with the sauce.

Angostura Bitters is a whole shelf of spices in one bottle. Don't let father monopolize what's in this little bottle when mixing his drinks. You can have a whole adventure with this magic . . . a few drops in soups, gravy, sauces, ham glazes, salad dressings and dips. Mix a few drops with melted butter and pour over cooked vegetables. Use in casseroles, stews, meat balls and meat loaves. Makes a good dish taste better.

Use these bitters for a subtle flavor in cakes, pies, frostings and fruit. It is made in only one place in the world . . . Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Have you ever thought of breakfast on the patio (or balcony) on a hot Sunday morning? Bacon and eggs, toast and coffee are a cinch to prepare.

Muriel Wilson tells how . . . from The Islander

Catch a Steelhead But Be Prepared To Release It

There are more than 200 rivers to fish the wary steelhead on Vancouver, but because of alarming decreases in steelhead stocks in many rivers, provincial officials have introduced stringent conservation measures.

THESE MEASURES include a number of rivers on which anglers must return any steelhead they catch, either during the entire year or for certain set periods during the year.

On these catch and release rivers they must also fish with single barbless hooks and all bait is banned. Any steelhead caught must be released to the river unharmed.

But, there are a number of first class steelheading rivers, like the Cowichan, where release regulations are not imposed, and hatchery rivers like the Big Qualicum and the Quinsam where fine steelheading may be expected.

THIS YEAR steelhead daily catch limit has been reduced to one wild steelhead or two hatchery (determined by absence of adipose fin) steelhead, or one wild and one hatchery steelhead. Annual catch limit has been reduced to 10, from 20 and no more than two steelhead may be taken in any calendar month.

The regulations can be confusing. After they were printed the Englishman, Little Qualicum and Oyster Rivers were added to the catch and release list until further notice.

OTHER STEELHEAD catch and release rivers include: Ash River, all year; Black Creek, all year; Campbell River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Caycuse River, angling closure upstream from 7-Mile Creek, steelhead release downstream from 7-Mile Creek, previously was fly fishing only May 1 to Nov. 30; China Creek, all year; Cous Creek, all year; Effingham River, all year; Franklin River, all year; Gold River, upstream from Upana River, including tributaries, all year, downstream from Upana River, May 1 to Nov. 30, note the Gold has been made a single hook river at all times and retains its Special River status; Gordon River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Harris Creek, May 1 to Nov. 30; Haslam Creek, April 15 to June 15; Heber River, all year; Hemmingsen Creek and its tributaries, total angling closure all year; Klanawa River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Kokish River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Nahmint Lake, all year; Nahmint River, all year; Nanaimo River, between White Rapids and Island Highway, April 15 to June 15; Nitinat River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Nomash River, all year; Puntledge River, all year; San Juan River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Shushartie River, year round; Somass River, May 1 to Nov. 30; South Sarita River, all year; Sproat River, March 1 to April 30; Stamp River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Tahsish River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Toquart River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Tsitika River, all year upstream from Catherine Creek, angling closure below that; Tsolum River, all year; Walbran Creek, all year; White River, May 1 to Nov. 30; Zeballos River, May 1 to Nov. 30.

BACKYARD BARBECUES

Eating out-of-doors is one of the great pleasures of summer . . . porch, patio, lake or stream, picnic on the beach or even a table under the old apple tree in your own backyard.

Somehow appetites perk up and food tastes better than when served indoors. Even the simplest, sometimes spur-of-the moment, meal is more enjoyable when served in the fresh air.

OUTDOOR COOKING over hot coals has brought us a new way o life . . . when the weather is right and appetites hearty there is nothing more fitting than a barbecustom is widespread as the earth, probably because it is elemental . . . requires only a stick, the food and the fire. This was the beginning of cooking.

In some far off era primitive man discovered that the flesh of his capture became more palatable when exposed to fire . . . from here on cooking evolved, slowly and laborously.

TODAY'S BARBECUE has come a long way . . . barbecuing equipment has never been more fascinating. If you are so inclined you can spend a small fortune on it. However expensive grills or built-in barbecues are not essential . . . I have eaten fine meals cooked on the simplest homemade garden fireplaces.

Knowing just how to build your fire is the important thing. The coals must be neither too boisterous nor too gentle. If you have a good fireman in your family you are lucky.

Barbecuing is so very versatile . . . it can be simple or elegant . . . wieners, hamburgers, strogonoff, brochettes, chicken, turkey or a fine steak. Culinary ideas and creativity know no bounds . . . originality flows like magic in the comaraderie of the cookout.

WE WILL START today with a fine steak on our barbecue grill; with it grilled tomato slices and a loaf of garlic bread crisped in foil. To round out the meal . . . a tossed green salad.

The steak and tomatoes will need no recipe, these will be cooked to your own taste. For the tossed greens and vegetable salad we would like to give you our special Roquefort Dressing.

TOSSED SALAD WITH ROQUEFORT DRESSING . . . two cups EACH torn lettuce and chicory, one small cucumber sliced, one-quarter cup sliced green onions, two tbsp. CRUMBLED Roquefort cheese, two tbsp. salad oil, one tsp. fresh lemon juice, one-third cup sour cream, two tsp. snipped chives, one-half tsp. salt and a good dash pepper.

Combine the lettuce, chickory, cucumber and green onions in a salad bowl. Mash the Roquefort cheese, mix in oil and lemon juice until smooth. Blend cheese mixture with the sour cream, chives, salt and pepper. Serve dressing with the salad.

AS A DESSERT how about Fruit-Bobs? . . . dessert kabobs served piping hot off skewers. They are a deliciously different taste sensation. Try these for a starter . . . thread maraschino cherries in centre of peach halves and alternate on skewers with fresh apricots, and pitted sweet cherries. Brush all with butter and broil, turning often.

OR try fresh peach, pear and plum chunks with alternately cheese cubes. Brush with butter and broil, turning often.

Our beautiful B.C. tree fruits can be halved and cooked directly on the grill, baste with butter, meat baste or marinade. Frequent basting is necessary. Turn the fruit occasionally, using two large spoons to avoid cutting or breaking it. This barbecued fruit is good served with barbecued chicken or almost any barbecued meat.

IF IT'S YOUNG people you are catering to, you'll never disappoint them if you serve that good old stand-by . . . hamburgers. Of course they should be moist and juicy.

MIRACLE HAMBURGERS . . . one-and-a-half pounds ground beef, one-quarter pound bulk sausage meat, one cup small curd cottage, one-half tsp. Tabasco, one tsp. EACH salt, MSG, onion salt, dry mustard and Worcestershire sauce.

Mix all together in a large bowl. Be sure the ingredients are well blended. Form into eight patties. Place on hot grill over hot coals. Cook four to five minutes on each side according to taste for doneness. Serve between toasted buns.

FATHER TAKES OVER.

You can prepare these patties ahead, placing them between wax paper or foil and refrigerating until close to cooking time.

TO END on a sweet note . . . let children make Angels and Devils . . . just squish toasted marshmallows between chocolate cookies.

Simple or elegant, outdoor cooking should be fun and friendly. It is a good time to get to know the new neighbor, a time for creativity and relaxation.

MOST FATHERS like to take over the chores of the grill, while mothers just move their kitchen doings outside. Teen young people sometimes cook their own food or help the parents. Whatever the pattern, barbecue time is perfect for family or group teamwork.

Cook With Salt . . . then pickle

Try cooking your fish in salt and then pickle it. The following recipes are for herring, but can be applied to trout, salmon, steelhead, or even cod. But, remember herring must be scaled before brining.

FIRST PUT a layer of rock salt on the bottom of a crock ... any size crock from one gallon to 10 gallons is fine, depending upon how much fish you want to pickle.

Then place a layer of filleted fish, skin-side down on the the salt at the bottom of the crock.

Then prepare another layer of salt over the fillets and carry on layering fish and salt, flesh to flesh, skin to skin.

You can make as many layers as you want, adjusting to the amount of fish you have ... and you can keep adding to it.

THEN LEAVE the fish in the crock from three weeks to more than a year.

The fish will automatically brine in the salt.

When you finish preparing one lot of fillets, put a heavier layer of salt on top, then a plate and a rock on top.

WHEN YOU ARE ready to use the fish, take it out and skim off the brine.

Soak the fish in fresh water for five or six hours depending upon length of time it has been salted. If it has been cooked in the salt brine for longer than — say six months — wash it for 12 hours. All this does is take the salt out. Some like it saltier than others, so it is a matter of trial and error.

When you have the fillets soaked cut them into bite-size pieces.

NOW YOU ARE ready to pickle.

For three cups of undiluted vinegar use one to two cups of sugar, depending upon how sweet a tooth you have.

Put this mixture on stove and bring it to a simmer. Add pickling spice — how much you use is a matter of choice and based upon experimentation — but use five or six tablespoonsful, or more.

Let simmer for half an hour or more to release the flavors of the spices.

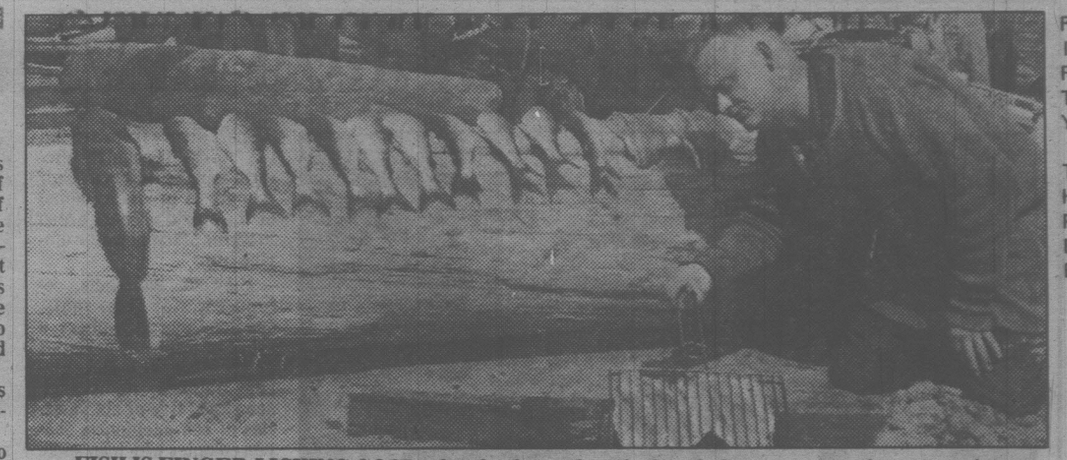
WHILE THIS is simmering take a bowl and cover the bottom with a layer of fish. Cover the layer with some sliced onions and repeat the layering to the desired amount.

Then take your vinegar-sugar-spice off the stove and let it cool.

When it is cool, dump it in the bowl and let it sit for 12 to 24 hours — 24 hours is best.

Then it is ready to serve.

The fish won't really be raw. The salt will have "cooked" it.



FISH IS FINGER-LICKING GOOD when barbecued on the beach, but save some for preserving.

IF YOU WISH quick pickled fish, fillet and take the skin off the fish, cut into bite-size chunks.

Put it into a bowl and to every quart of fish use a half to ¾-quart of rock salt. Cover this with vinegar, put into fridge and let sit for six to eight days. Then take it out and soak it in fresh water for four to six hours.

Then follow the last of the previously described pickling procedures with the same spice and sugar combination. Let sit for 24 hours and it will be ready to eat.

Here's a Recipe For Fast Pickling

For a change of pace try pickling your catch ... any kind of fish will do, but herring and salmon are ideal and salmon are bountiful in Vancouver Island waters.

SCALE THE FISH (leave skin attached) and clean the body cavity immediately when caught. Pack on ice, but do not freeze. At home, cut fish into bite-size chunks and soak for one hour in a brine solution composed of one cup of salt to one gallon of water.

DRAIN THE FISH and place them in a tray. Cover with brine made of half-cup of non-iodized salt and one quart white vinegar. Place the tray in the refrigerator and let stand one week.

Remove fish from brine, drain, then soak one hour in ice cold water and drain again. Fish will be firm.

NOW PACK fish in pint jars and pour over a boiling brine made from four cups sugar, one quart white vinegar or half-quart vinegar and half-quart white wine, and half box pickling spice.

You can cut onion slices and place them in the jars if desired.

Seal jars and let them cool.

FISH PREPARED this way should always be refrigerated. To allow the flavor to develop pickled fish should stand several weeks before opening the jar. The longer you wait the better it will taste.

Marine Extravaganza In Victoria Waters

FRANK WHITE DISPLAYS two large Dungeness crabs harvested from ocean floor.

Sport divers from around the world recognize Victoria and the adjacent Gulf Islands as providing some of the world's finest areas in terms of underwater marine life.

They see wolf eels, octopuses, star fish, seals, sea lions, sea cucumbers, a score of different varieties of rockfish, ling cod, marine animals, nudibranch sea slugs, five or six varieties of sea anemones, sea-pen colonies which look like ostrich plumes and tube worms, to mention only a few of the underwater sights.

SOMETIMES, but rarely they see salmon, mostly when they find them feeding on a herring ballup. Then they also see diving ducks.

Most of the sea life is seen in the first 30 feet of water, but some of the skilled and experienced divers go down to the 130-foot level around the White Lady in Saanich Inlet, which is particularly rich in sea-life.

THOUSANDS of resident scuba divers enjoy these marine extravaganzas the year-round and a big winter tourist business is developing in package diving tours to Victoria, with divers coming from many far-away places, but mainly from Alberta and Saskatchewan ... and about one-third of the visiting divers are women.

In 1977 it was estimated there were 5½ million divers in North America, 200,000 of them in Canada, and 10,000 certified divers on Vancouver Island.

"Only the Red Sea is rated above Victoria for underwater marine life and that is because it has warmer water," says Allan McRae, diving co-ordinator for the Empress Hotel. But, he adds: "Victoria has more diversity of marine life."

PHOTOGRAPHY and sightseeing are the main attractions for most of the divers. Spear guns are discouraged by charter party operators who offer a non consumptive package.

Most charters take about 10 divers on a trip and several big boats are available in the Victoria, Saanich Inlet and Sidney areas.

Some of the local sport diving supply and charter businesses offer regular diving training programs which start in the Crystal Pool and graduate to the ocean waters. They also specialize in trips further afield to waters like those of the Pacific Rim Park and Barkley Sound.

Bottle hunting is especially fascinating for the divers off the Victoria waterfront, who come up with all kinds of unique treasures.

FAVORITE DIVING locations include the waters off Victoria Harbor, Brotchie Ledge and as far as Race Rocks ... places within a three-quarter hour cruising range; several spots in Saanich Inlet; and several of the Gulf Islands.

Race Rocks features unique underwater sealife, especially the colored sea anemones and there the divers work the currents. It is at Race Rocks where they see the seals and sea lions.

ARBUTUS ISLAND, at the north end of Saanich Inlet has more interesting marine life than anywhere else in the world, according to marine biologists.

Saanich Inlet is ideal for diving because of the lack of strong currents.

Beaver Point on Salt Spring Island is an underwater park and a favorite spot for divers.

Make Your Own Smoker

Anybody can smoke fish and anybody can easily make up a home smoker out of an old metal ice box or an old refrigerator ... or if you don't want to bother there are portable smokers available in sporting goods and tackle stores.

TO MAKE your own smoker, take out all the parts of the refrigerator or ice box. Just leave the shell.

Gather as many racks as you can fit into the top. Three is about right and space them out one above the other, two or three inches apart. Bricks make good spacers.

ON THE BOTTOM floor of your old fridge place a single or double-burner hot plate. Get an old second-hand burner because they burn out pretty quickly in a smokehouse, say in a couple of years.

Drop the heater cord through a hole in the bottom of the ice box or fridge (the drain hole) and you are almost ready for smoking.

Get an old fry pan, or a fairly heavy saucepan to hold the chips. An old army mess tin is ideal.

GREEN ALDER is best for smoking, but if alder is a little dry soak it well in a bucket of water after cutting it into small chips. You can also use those bags of hickory, apple and other wood chips that are for sale in tackle shops, especially for smoking. You can soak them and mix them with the alder chips for a variation of smoke flavor.

Place the pan with the water-soaked chips on top of the burner, turn on the burner, place a loose fitting lid on top of the pan so the juice won't fall on the chips, place the fish on the racks, shut the smoker door and in a few minutes it is filling with smoke.

For a new smoker you should fill it with smoke for several hour before using, so as to blacken and burn all the paint.

TO PREPARE the fish, first split the salmon in half, leaving the backbone in, and if you like quarter it or cut it into smaller chunks. leave the skin on.

Then lay it on a tray and sprinkle it heavily with a mixture of half coarse salt and half brown sugar. Let the mixture soak into the fish for about an hour and then lightly wash it off.

There are several other methods of brining and it is all a matter of preference.

THEN TAKE any seasonings you have in the house — like onion salt, garlic salt, MSG, meat tenderizer, steak spicing, celery salt, barbecue salt and anything else you fancy. Shake the spices you like on to the salmon and then take what is left of the sugar-salt mixture and spread all over the salmon fillets, but a little more lightly than the first time.

Your fish is ready for the smokehouse.

SPREAD the fish quarters singly on the wire racks in the ice box, turn on the hot plate and you are ready for smoking.

Keep the smokehouse running for about six hours — time isn't too important. Change the chips about three times during the smoking.

It is a good idea to turn off the hot plate and leave the fish in the smoker overnight, but you can take it out and serve it hot as barbecued smoked salmon.

THIS IS A HOT barbecue type of smoking and the fish will keep in a refrigerator for two or three weeks, but not for as long as cold-smoked salmon.

It is excellent when canned or bottled in exactly the same manner you can fresh salmon.

IDEAL FOR CABIN OR COTTAGE A COOKSTOVE, HEATER AND FIREPLACE ALL IN ONE

The Earth Stove

Tired of wasting wood in inefficient stoves & fireplaces?

- The Earth Stove burns 1/3 the fuel of many stoves because pre-heating draft manifold promotes efficient and complete combustion like solid fuel power plants. Super-heated air prevents "coking" of fire unlike manual "hole" drafts do. Even large chunks burn slowly and completely–eliminates frequent ash removal.
- Wood gases not wasted Secondary drafts introduce oxygen above primary fire zone to burn volatile gases such as methanol, pyroligneous acid, etc.
- Converts to open fire instantly

The Earth Stove incorporates use of modern technology to improve the great institution of Wood Heat.

Beachcomber Bonanza on Island Beaches

Vancouver Island's beaches are a treasure trove for collectors.

On the rugged west coast beaches they find the highly-prized glass fishing floats that come from Japan on the ocean currents, as well as other flotsam and jetsam that has drifted across the ocean.

ON PRETTY WELL any beach they may find weather-beaten beachwood for home and garden decoration or flower arranging designs, semi-precious and just pretty pebbles for rockhounds, and the unusual flower stones and other stones with interesting designs and shapes for use as Suiseki stones for the garden.

ROCKHOUNDERS prize the agates that may be found on Sooke beaches and they may be recognized by holding the little pebbles up to the sun ... and if you can see through it, it is almost certainly an agate.

Many rockhounds make fine pebble jewelry and ornaments from the rocks they find, tumble, polish and otherwise finish, but many others simply keep the pretty pebbles as souvenirs of their beach explorations.

BEST GUIDE for Vancouver Island rockhounds is Bill and Julie Hutchinon's book Rockhounding and Beachcombing on Vancouver Island.

They explain there are three classes of rocks: igneous, metamorphic and sedimentary. These provide fascinating stones for lapidary (rockhounding) use and for ornamental purposes, often showing lovely patterning.

Outstanding among the patterned rocks are the local gabbro porphries. There are some eight or nine varieties.

Flowerstones show chrysanthemum or daisy-like blossoms about an inch in diameter. Other porphyries exhibit smaller flowers or stars or crystals.

WHAT CAUSES the flowers? Bill says they actually grew right in the rock, though not in the same way that a plant grows. He adds that perhaps it would be better to say they formed while the rock was cooling from the molten state.

Each flower head is composed of a ball of radiating feldspar crystals. One crystal makes one petal. Bill explains that no one knows why the crystals group themselves into balls or glomerocrysts. It happens. We accept it; nature is wonderful.

JENNIFER SIDLICK ... with flowerstone from Gordon Beach.

THE MORE SHOWY kinds of flowers are becoming scarce on the beaches around Vancouver Island and you have to cover a lot of territory to find them. Whiffen Spit and Gordon Beach are two of the favorite spots to look.

Bill and Julie suggest you combine rockhounding with beachcombing for weathered driftwood, teredo, sculptured logs, flotsam and jetsam drifted in from foreign ports, wave carved blocks of sandstone and sea shells.

YOU DON'T HAVE to go far to start your rockhounding.

The authors suggest the Dallas Road beaches below the Mile 0 sign in Beacon Hill Park, at the foot of Douglas, as a starting point.

Dallasite is the typical Vancouver Island rock first noticed on these beaches more than 50 years ago, and it was named after Dallas Road. If you call in at the Rockhound Shop you can see what it looks like.

ISLAND VIEW Beach is another good rockhounding area and Bill and Julie once found a 90-pound block of solid black schist, full of chiastolite crystals, and rhodonite and agates on that beach, as well as fossil shells nearby.

THE BOOK provides a list of nearby beaches for rockhounding and adds: "You're liable to find anything. These beaches are well worked and changed by the winter storms, the pebbles and stones are nicely rounded.

"Quartz pebbles — pure white or stained — are present. Iron staining often turns quartz into attractive stones, some worthy of cutting. Pink, yellow, apricot, cherry, are among the colors which you will find, though many of the quartz pebbles are apt to be dull.

"AGATE IS scarce, it is found occasionally, but definitely scarce. Jaspers, especially bright red, sometimes breeciated and re-cemented with white quartz can still be picked up.

And if you want to pan some gold, this book will tell you where you can try ... less than 12 miles from Victoria.

IF, this year, you want a COMFORTABLE bed on your holidays (or at home!) ...

TIDES - key to fun

The tides can hold the key for planning for vacations and outdoor activities during the year.

For instance, if you are planning to hike the West Coast Trail it will require considerable beach walking. You will want to hit a period of medium tides because, although the low tides are ideal for beach walking and exploring high tides which invariably accompany low tides can make beach walking almost impossible ... and the extreme high tides which in spring occur in the wee hours of the morning could catch beach campers unaware. If there is a high tide coming don't camp on the beach.

INTER-TIDAL zone explorers will want to use the low, low tides, which occur Friday, June 13 and Saturday, June 14 and Sunday, June 15, and again during the July 1 weekend.

Those are the best weekends — the only real suitable weekends — to visit Port Renfrew's Botanical Beach and Sombrio Beach cave and sandstone reefs ... and you must plan to be on the beaches well ahead of the low tide period to see all the wonderful marine life stranded in the tidal pools.

THOSE SAME weekends can be utilized for repairing boat ramps or doing any marine-type work that requires a low tide.

Of course all the beaches are best for funsters at low tides, but for most beaches the extreme lows are not so necessary.

Where there are huge sandy beaches like Parksville, where the tide runs out for nearly a mile, and Qualicum and the west coast's Long Beach low tides are real fun. If the low tides come in the morning periods the tide will come in over the hot sand during the day, providing lovely warm swimming in the evening high tide periods.

JULY IS SUCH a month, with mid-morning low tides and evening highs ... an ideal beach holiday month. But salmon anglers should consider an August or September holiday when there will be more liklihood of calm waters with fair tidal movements for fishing in early mornings and evenings, but rather slack tides for midday fishing.

Clam diggers can get clams at any tide lower than three feet, but a two-foot or lower tide will give them more digging time and allow them to get out to the butter clams and the razor clams which are found at lower beach levels.

LOW TIDES are ideal for inter-tidal zone exploring.
